Sees Plans Completed This Year

Sheets Makes Hotel 1995 Primary Goal

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Plans for a Quincy Center hotel--which has been advocated for more than a half-century--should be complete by the end of this year, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor said at press time that while he has several plans for the new year, which he will unveil during his third mid-term address Jan. 9 at 10 a.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall, the downtown hotel is "the primary goal for 1995."

"We need a hotel," said Sheets. "We cannot promote the kind of tourism we hope to be doing in 1995 without a hotel. We have to have a hotel, and in my mind, it's going to happen (this year)."

Sheets said the city has been "fast-tracking" the hotel project for the last month, adding that he is confident that the "planning and financing" for the hotel will be completed by the end of the year. The mayor also noted that he hopes to hold a "ceremonial groundbreaking" in the fall at the proposed site of the hotel, which is located behind Presidents Place in Quincy Center.

"I'll be disappointed if we don't have everything in place for the hotel by the end of this year," he said.

Construction of the hotel should take between two and two-and-a-half years, Sheets added.

Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, announced last month that it has been negotiating with a developer interested in doing the construction work for the hotel project.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix said at press time that he and other corporation officials are engaged in "active negotiations" with Citizens Bank, the owner of the proposed hotel site. While he would not comment on whether the bank has shown an interest in selling the property, D'Aprix noted that Citizens has kept an open mind about the situation.

"They have shown a willingness to talk to us and to help align themselves with the city's economic goals," said D'Aprix.

Cheney: 'Tremendous Success'

18,000-20,000 Attend Quincy's First Night

Between 18,000 and 20,000 people attended Quincy's third annual First Night celebration, and First Night Committee Chairman Michael Cheney is calling the evening "an overwhelming success."

Among the attractions at the event were live music, a parade, fireworks display, line dancing and karoake.

"There was something for everyone to do," said Cheney. "People raved about the 13 ice sculptures that were displayed between Presidents Place, United First Parish Church and City Hall."

Cheney said the booth that was selling First Night buttons ran out of buttons around 8 p.m.

"We did not expect the sudden surge of people beginning to attend between 7:30 and 8 p.m.," he said. "It was as if everyone wanting to attend the event left their homes at the same time. I feel most people waited for the weather forecast. Once people saw it was a clear, beautiful night, they came out."

Unfortunately, rain caused the setting off of the fireworks display, originally scheduled for midnight, to be held early, Cheney added.

"Rain began between 10 and 10:30 p.m. so we felt it was necessary to begin the fireworks before midnight," he said. "I was informed by the fire chief that it was in the best interest of the public to set the fireworks off early. Every site was instructed to notify the patrons the fireworks were going to be set off so people could temporarily leave the sites to view the beautiful display.

"Despite the light rain, the crowd raved about the fireworks show sponsored by the Cashman Companies."

This year's parade theme was "Festival of Lights." More than 5,000 light bulbs were installed on floats, which included a jack-in-the-box, dancing bear, turtle and snow castle as well as other homemade floats entered in the Festival of Lights Pickup Truck Contest.

One of the evening's highlights was the International Food Festival in the gymnasium at the Quincy

Blasting For Expressway Work To Resume Friday

The Massachusetts Highway Department will continue work on the Highway Occupancy Vehicle (HOV) lane being built on the Southeast Expressway beginning Friday at midnight.

The work being done involves drilling and blasting to prepare the area at the Rte. 3/I-93/Rte. 128 split and will continue through the next several weeks.

The blasting will take place between 4 and 5 a.m. The blast will be enclosed and all precautions will be taken to protect motorists. Both sides of the roadway will be closed for a period of five minutes during the blast.

The early morning hour was selected to avoid the peak travel periods and to prevent traffic from seeking alternate routes through local streets. The single blast will be preceded by a warning whistle.

Work done between midnight and 6 a.m. will require that a lane be closed in either direction to allow for access to the construction area and for motorist safety. Between 6 a.m. and 4 p.m. only the southbound high speed lane will remain closed. All closures and the extensions of the project are weather-dependant.

Breast Cancer Interfaith Dedication At Hospital

The Quincy Hospital Breast Cancer Support Group recently held a special interfaith ceremony to honor women with breast cancer and dedicated a flowering tree near the hospital's main entrance.

In addition, a brick placed next to the tree was dedicated in memory of the late Sheila Trifone, who died from the disease and was a member of the hospital's support group. Additional bricks will be placed around the tree in the future in memory of women who have died from breast cancer.

Bricks can be dedicated by anyone wishing to honor the memory of a loved one who has died of breast cancer. Cost is $150. Proceeds will benefit construction of a new women's imaging center and support women's health programs at Quincy Hospital. The tree and landscaping were donated by Invernizzi Construction.

Speakers at the interfaith dedication ceremony included Breast Cancer Support Group facilitators Sister Claire Hayes of Kingston, Marty Carney of Milton and Carol Rizzo of Quincy. Other participants included Support Group members Cathy Place of Braintree, Rev. Ann Martin of Everett, Ann King of Hull, Quincy Hospital Director of Pastoral Care Rev. Ann Rearick, Quincy Hospital Catholic Chaplain Fr. Theodore Fortier, Rabbi David Jacobs, Nicholas Trifone of Milton and Quincy Hospital Director CEO Ralph DiPisa of Quincy Hospital.

Quincy Hospital's Breast Cancer Support Group, which provides emotional support and information for women living with breast cancer, meets the first and third Wednesday of every month from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the hospital's Education Center.

Citizens Bank recently acquired Quincy Savings Bank, and Citizens officials have expressed an eagerness to play an active role in the community.

Sheets noted that work on the new Adams Inn in North Quincy--the former Quincy Bay Inn which was purchased by O'Connell Management Co. of Quincy last year--is progressing as scheduled. Despite the presence of a first-class hotel at that end of the city, however, the mayor said a downtown facility is still necessary because of the location of many of the city's historic sites, including the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum and the Adams National Historic Site.

Other "critical areas" for 1995 that Sheets plans to discuss at his mid-term address include:

•Development of a commercial/retail building at the site of the Hancock Parking Lot in Quincy Center. The mayor said the City Council must designate someone to develop at the lot, which is city-owned property, and added that he hopes to see progress on that issue within four to eight weeks.

•Finding the balance of funding for the shipbuilding museum. Although Bank of Boston put up the initial $1.1 million needed to get the museum up and running, an additional $4.9 million must be obtained. Sheets said the funds will likely be raised through the sale of bonds at the museum as well as commercial lending.

•Establishing an agenda for the Quincy Commission on the Family. The purpose of the group, which Sheets established last year, is to aid needy Quincy families in a variety of capacities.

Sheets said he will also talk about the successes of 1994 during his address, including progress in tourism, education, commercial retail growth, and "quality of life" matters such as public safety, the city's parks and playgrounds, and other issues.

The mayor noted that he is particularly pleased with the city's success in the area of tourism last year, such as the arrival of the Quincy-built heavy cruiser U.S.S. Salem as the centerpiece of the shipbuilding museum, Quincy 2000's hiring of a new tourism consultant/planner, and results of a three-year study by the National Park Service that indicated the city is among the state's leaders in tourist attractions.

In all, the mayor said he is very pleased with Quincy's accomplishments last year.

"As The Quincy Sun said (in last week's issue), it was a year of steady progress," said Sheets. "A lot of our efforts were brought to fruition, and a lot of other things have begun to fall into place. We feel that '94 has set the stage for '95.

"We're really excited about 1995. I really see a continuation of successful efforts."

One difference in this year's mid-term address will be a detailed analysis of the city's Capital Projects Development Agenda. Sheets said the agenda includes a list of 41 financial projects--including repairs and additions to school buildings, sidewalks, seawalls and others--that were recently completed or are currently underway or in the works.

"It will be a very accurate assessment of the cost of the projects, including exactly what city, state and federal funds are involved," said Sheets. "We feel that we have a substantial number of projects on the book."

Sheets said the reason for such an analysis, which has not been compiled for either of his previous mid-term addresses, is to help prepare the city for the future.

"It will tell us whether we're building the proper infrastructure for the next century," he said.

The mayor also noted that the city's debt service (bond indebtedness) is currently $6.4 million, or $1.4 million less than when he first took office in 1990.

Parking Contract To Be Settled Within 2 Weeks

The contract for the city's parking system should be settled within the next two weeks, according to the legal counsel for the city.

Although city officials announced last September that the five-year contract would be awarded to Kinney Systems Inc. of Boston, the parking system--which includes the Hancock Parking Lot and Ross Parking Garage, both in Quincy Center--continues to be run by Metropolitan Parking Systems Inc. of Quincy, the previous owner of the contract.

The contract actually expired last July 1, the start of the new fiscal year, but the city's agreement called for the previous contract owner to continue management of the parking system until its successor could take over, according to Atty. Jay MacRitchie.

MacRitchie said at press time that after then-Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon drafted a management agreement for the city and Kinney Systems in September, the company responded by drawing up its own agreement. The only real difference between the two is the format, he noted.

"It (Kinney's agreement) differs more in format than the substance," said MacRitchie. "It pretty much complies with what they had in their original [bid for the contract]."

Much of the reason for the delay, MacRitchie said, was the anticipated departure of Gillon, who was the central figure in the contract negotiations.

MDC Meeting Jan 10 On Beach Restoration

The Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) has scheduled a series of four meetings concerning the restoration of the Boston Harbor Beaches.

The series will begin Tuesday, Jan. 10 at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center. The public is invited.

The MDC will unveil both its short and long-term strategies to implement the recommendations made by the Joint Commission on the Future of the Boston Harbor Beaches to restore the beaches to their full potential. Preliminary plans for short-term projects expected to be completed by the end of the summer will also be presented for discussion.

Projects range from planting plans, beach flag system, improvements to the Winthrop Facility, the Sugar Bowl in South Boston, Bayside and Bloom Access, and Shade Shelters as well as operation issues.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that Thomas Koch, executive director of the Quincy Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Department and Squantum resident Paul Kennedy will represent the city in discussing with MDC officials what will be done in Quincy. The city is slated to receive $4 million for Wollaston Beach, Sheets added.

In the summer of 1993, Gov. William Weld and Boston Mayor Thomas Menino announced their support of the vision released in the "Back to the Beaches Plan." Last summer, through the joint support of the state Legislature and Weld Administration, the governor signed the $30 million capital appropriation needed to make the plan a reality.

The series will continue Wednesday, Jan. 11 at 7 p.m. in Winthrop Town Hall, 1 Metcalf Square, Winthrop; Thursday, Jan. 12 at 7 p.m. in the Curley Recreation Center, Day Blvd. at K, L and M Sts., South Boston/Dorchester; and Tuesday, Jan. 17 at 7 p.m. in the auditorium of the Harborside School, East Boston.

Those interested in attending should call the MDC Office of Community Affairs at 727-5114 ext. 530.

Tax Packages On Their Way

Tax season is here again and this week tax packages will begin to show up in the mail.

Taxpayers who used professional tax preparers last year will receive IRS postcards, giving them the option of request a tax package from the IRS or using tax forms supplied by their preparer.

This year the IRS is containing its efforts in three major areas:

•Improving customer service for taxpayers;

•Encouraging eligible low income workers to claim the earned income tax credit, and •Taking additional steps to combat tax filing fraud.

"While there are not many tax law changes for taxpayers to deal with this year, the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) has been significantly changed," said Francine Crowley, Boston IRS District Director. "For 1994, more low income workers will qualify for the credit and the credit is easier to claim. Also, for the first time childless workers aged 25 to 64 may now qualify for the credit."

Another significant change for this year is the taxability of social security benefits. Beginning in 1994, up to 85 percent of Social Security benefits and equivalent tier 1 railroad retirement benefits may be taxable.

Each year the filing requirements, personal exemptions, standard deduction and earned income credit amounts are adjusted for inflation. This year all of the amounts have increased.

"This filing season it will be very important for taxpayers ensure they enter correct Social Security numbers for themselves and their dependents on their tax returns," said Crowley.

The IRS will delay refunds on returns with incorrect or missing social security numbers to allow time to verify that the taxpayers are entitled to the refunds they claim.

For more information, call the IRS toll-free taxpayer assistance line at 1-800-829-1040.

STROKES: QUICK RESPONSE IS CRITICAL

When it comes to a stroke, the most important thing for anyone to remember is to get help fast. Recent studies have concluded that stroke patients who call a local ambulance get quicker help, resulting in better medical outcomes, than those who take the time to transport themselves. When a stroke is in progress, brain cells die off every minute, and there is a limited window of opportunity during which medication may be most effective. Recognizing stroke symptoms is the first step in the response chain. These signs include sudden weakness or numbness in the face, arm, leg, or one side of the body; sudden vision loss, especially in one eye; difficulty speaking; sudden severe headache; and loss of coordination.

P.S. Know whom to call in an emergency. Keep doctors' and ambulance phone numbers posted on or near your telephones.

If you have symptoms that alarm you, don't wait–get yourself to a physician promptly. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, we offer complete health care with a focus on heart problems and their prevention. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Office hours by appointment. We're at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550. Ted's Last Term

Ted DeCristofaro is expected to soon announce he will not be a candidate for re-election to the Ward 2 City Council seat.

DeCRISTOFARO

DeCristofaro, 71, is now in his seventh term and 14th year in the City Council. He was first elected in 1981 and was council president in 1990-91.

His official announcement he is stepping down is expected to come sometime this month or February by the latest.

DeCristofaro, who suffered a stroke and heart attack last March, has made a near miraculous recovery and is carrying out his duties as a councillor, although it has been somewhat difficult at times.

Even before the illness, however, he had thoughts of retiring.

In fact, during the 1993 city election campaign, he confided to close friends "this will probably be my last run."

Those same friends say his medical problem "kind of firmed up" his decision to make it his last term.

His departure isn't expected to trigger a wild scramble for the Ward 2 seat. In fact, the only name that keeps popping up as a prospective candidate is School Committee Vice Chairman Dan Raymondi. And that could be why there seems to be a shortage of potential candidates. He may have already frightened them off.

RAYMONDI

Ironically, DeCristofaro succeeded Raymondi in the Ward 2 seat when the latter decided to leave it to run for mayor against Frank McCauley in 1981.

And, there's another dash of irony. Raymondi began his political career by winning a School Committee seat in a field of 23 candidates in 1971.

He then ran for the Ward 2 seat in 1975, succeeding Clifford Marshall who went on to become Norfolk County sheriff.

Some think history could repeat itself this year with Raymondi again leaving the School Committee to again run for the Ward 2 seat and again winning it. And then again making another run for mayor.

DeCristofaro defeated Joseph Cortese for the Ward 2 seat in 1981 and never had a challenger after that. And if he had decided to make another run this year, he probably would have gone unchallenged again.

In Quincy Point, anyone thinking of running for the Ward 2 seat would automatically add, "when Ted leaves, of course."

DeCristofaro has become a legend in the Point where his roots and those of his family run deep. He was born in the family home on Murdock Ave., grew up there and lived there with his wife, the former Betty Petzoldt, and their children, until moving to 1000 Southern Artery a year ago. The Petzoldt roots go deep in the Point, too.

Both Ted and Betty have been active members of the community all their lives. And friends say that won't change when he leaves the City Council.

You're sure to find him cutting the grass, weeding and pruning the shrubs at the mini-park at Southern Artery, Washington St. and Baxter Ave. named after him just last November.

And you'll probably find him at future City Council meetings in the role of private citizen championing some worthy cause for Quincy Point.

CHARLES MCINTYRE could be back this year as a city council candidate and (or) as a future district attorney contender.

McINTYRE

McIntyre, who with his wife, Sheila, was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar just before Christmas, begins a new job this week: assistant district attorney in the office of Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt.

McIntyre, who is 27 and the son of Sheila and the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, made an impressive political debut in 1993 nearly winning a city council at-large seat.

Would he make another run this year?

"I don't know," he says, stressing that right now his thoughts are on his duties as assistant district attorney.

"I might, though. I definitely haven't ruled it out."

But, there could be something bigger for him down the road.

Delahunt, who has been district attorney 20 years, is beginning his last four-year term. He plans to run for higher office: Congress, attorney general, or maybe governor.

DELAHUNT

In four years as an assistant, young McIntyre could strongly position himself for a run for district attorney.

Incidentally, you might say that Charles and his wife, Sheila, really have special togetherness.

They graduated together from Suffolk Law School in June. They took the Massachusetts Bar examination together in July. And were admitted to the Massachusetts Bar together in pre-Christmas ceremonies at Faneuil Hall presided over by Massachusetts Supreme Court Justice Francis O'Connor.

Sheila is now an attorney in the Brookline law firm of Atty. James Gilden where she had been a legal clerk five years. She is from Brookline.

And that should be a political note of interest. Quincy and Brookline are two of the major voting communities for anyone running for a Norfolk County office. Like, for example, district attorney.

Hmmm!

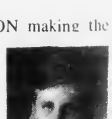
THERE'S SOME SPECULATION making the rounds that School Committeeman Sean Barry might not run for re-election this year. Don't believe it, he says.



BARRY

"I've heard that rumor myself," he says. "But that's all it is—a rumor. I'm definitely a candidate for re-election this year."

At the moment he is undecided whether he will run for the still unexpired two-year term or one of the three four-year terms.

VIEW OF THE MIDLAND, HOUGHS NECK, MASS

THIS 1911 HOUGHS NECK postcard is a view looking from today's Sea Street Auto Body shop down Bell St. towards Manet Beach. On the right the Midland Hotel was on the corner of Bell St. and Center Rd., and not shown to the far right was an A&P market, at the corner of Center Rd. and Sea St. Center Rd. is now Macy St. and the A&P has been replaced by the Houghs Neck Community Center. The variety store on the left with the Moxie sign was one of the dozens of locations in the Neck selling the most popular tonic of the day. The site is now a parking lot. Today this entire intersection is quite different. Two smaller houses have been built on the site of the Midland, sidewalks with curbings more clearly define the streets, the public fountain is gone and so are the trolley tracks. Only the fireplug remains.

Quincy Politics Is Really No Different Than Anywhere Else

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

When you're a member of the Gaelic and Garlic Club (half-Italian, half-Irish), you find yourself predisposed toward politics. I have always loved politics and have worked in countless political campaigns over the years. I keep fine-tuning my skills in hopes of someday (who knows?) running myself.

However, I had always assumed my love of politics was inherited from the Giarratani side of the family. My father was politically active and knew names, faces and issues. Recently, though, I found out from a visit to my aunt's house that her late husband, my uncle George Harrington, was himself quite politically active in Quincy back some 30 years ago and allied with the likes of Jim McIntyre and Arthur Tobin. My uncle, like myself, settled into Quincy from Boston. My uncle was a townie from Charlestown and he eventually came to understand Quincy's style of politics. I moved to Quincy from Charlestown where I had spent much of my young adult life. I'm still learning Quincy politics and I've been here since 1984.

I've helped out in a few recent elections putting my Charlestown political skills to work in North Quincy. Someone recently told me in a couple of years he was even going to cease calling me a carpetbagger. How big of him, huh? All kidding aside, Quincy politics is really no bigger than anywhere else. I'm sure my uncle learned that, too.

Something funny, though: anyone who knows Quincy politics knows that there were certain feuds in this city. My uncle is probably rolling in his grave knowing that I am good friends with City Councillor Joe LaRaia. LaRaia was on the other side of my uncle's political alliances. But my uncle's probably happy to know that I am also friendly with Rep. Steve Tobin, son of Arthur Tobin.

My uncle never ran for office; he was too busy running his gas station in North Quincy on what is now the site of the Murphy Brothers VW Shop. I've not run yet. Hopefully, I will take that next step from political critic to candidate. Hey, I've got my uncle's Irish wit and I probably know Quincy as well as I ever will. Hey maybe 1995 is the year (who knows?) but, in the meantime, best wishes to all for a happy and prosperous New Year!

Hopes Council Passes Shaw's Project Quickly

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

My husband and I have our home and our business in Wollaston and this is why we are so enthusiastic about the Shaw's Supermarket shopping center at the empty Boston Gear location.

Since our store is on Beale Street just off of Hancock Street in Wollaston Center, we know all the problems about traffic. It's terrible. We have gone to the community meetings to get information on the plan Shaw's has proposed to get rid of the traffic congestion. We like what we see and we understand that the city's traffic engineer has given his OK to the plan.

Also, having a supermarket in our area will be wonderful for so many of us. It will make it more convenient for families and older people to do their shopping. Besides, the new Shaw's will bring more jobs to Quincy.

We hope the Quincy City Council passes the Shaw's project quickly.

Says Shaw's Will Be 'Positive Turning Point'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am writing to express my support for the Shaw's supermarket on the old Boston Gear site. My business, World Wide Travel Agency, has been located in Wollaston for the past 27 years and most of our customers come from this local area.

In the past year, we have seen the positive effects of the Beale Street improvement project. Wollaston has always been a great business area and now it is even better.

Bringing a Shaw's to our part of Quincy will make a positive turning point for the Wollaston-North Quincy area.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Hannon Urges Fight Against Revaluation

Jan. 5 - 11
1973

By PAUL HAROLD

In his mid-term address, Mayor Walter Hannon urged the citizens of Quincy to fight 100 percent revaluation of the city's properties and called upon the QTR (Quincy Taxpayers Revolt) to withdraw their court case.

Tim Cardwell, leader of QTR, said homeowners were subsidizing Quincy Square since the recent assessments increased residential property values while decreasing Quincy Square business properties. He said 100 percent valuation was the only solution.

Atty. Jordan Zisk, legal counsel for QTR, called Hannon's comments "contempt of court."

QUINCY HIGH BAND BACK FROM DALLAS

The North Quincy High School band was on hand at Logan Airport to welcome back the 122 members of the Quincy High School Bank from Dallas, Texas, where they played in the Cotton Bowl Parade.

The Quincy High School band was one of 53 bands and floats in Dallas, but the only one from New England. They came to the attention of the Rose Bowl Committee after they won the St. Patrick's Day parade competition in Lawrence.

The City Council proclaimed the day "Public Bands Day" in the city and Mayor Hannon gave them the day off from school.

STUDENT STRIKE LOOMS

Quincy High School Principal Lloyd Creighton warned students against participating in the strike scheduled to protest changes in open campus regulations. He made the remarks in a brief talk over the school's public address system.

The students' concern involved the changes made by the school committee last October that limited the "open campus" to an "in campus" program. As a result, students were confined to travel between the high school, the vocational-technical school and annexed classrooms in the former district courthouse.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Wheelchair Sports And Recreation Assn. President Charles Ekizian:

'I'm Trying To Spark People Back Into Life'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. How did you first come to be disabled?

A. I was diving at the end of Wollaston Beach, and there used to be a jetty there—a couple of years after my accident, they took the jetty, which is a group of rocks, out—it was down by Black's Creek, and I dove, actually, from one rock into another, I guess. As I hit the water, everything went blank. I was fortunate enough to survive that. And a girl in the area helped to pull me out, a lieutenant in the fire department, and that was on July 8, 1968.

Q. How old were you at the time?

A. I had just turned 21. My birthday was June 30, so I had just reached 21.

Q. How soon did you know the permanent results of the accident?

A. I kind of knew right off. When I first came to at the bottom of the ocean, I tried to push off with my legs, and when nothing moved, I kind of really knew right then that whatever I did was pretty serious. And that kind of saved my life, too, because I really didn't feel panicked anymore—I wasn't sure I really wanted to make the surface. But I thank God now that I did.

Q. And technically, you're classified as a quadriplegic, even though you can move your arms?

A. Right. I broke C5-6, that was the area of my breaks—it's a cervical break, which means it's to the neck—therefore, not just your legs are affected, but your upper body from your neck down, or from the injury down, is affected. Things are weakened.

I was fortunate enough, especially back in those days, to get the kind of return that I was able to get. Again, that was nothing I did on my own, it was just that I was fortunate enough to get back that return, which enabled me to use my arms and stuff. But initially, I wasn't moving much but my head, and I'm grateful for getting back what I got back. By participating in wheelchair sports, it's helped me to develop and utilize what I do have.

Q. Before the accident, were you very active in sports?

A. No, I wasn't very active in sports, but I was a very physical person; I did a lot of work, heavy labor, that kind of thing. So I was very physically strong.

Q. How did Wheelchair Sports first come about?

A. Well, it kind of evolved over the years. When I used to work at Tufts New England Medical Center, I was right above the rehab floor, and I tried to get people active and out and doing activities. Back then, there weren't a lot of activities to do. So over the years, I've been a founding member of a lot of the different sports teams and different things and activities that are out there. I've found that if you stay active and get back into life as quickly as possible, the results are terrific.

I've found also that you can't just say to somebody, "There's a Community Rowing adaptive program. Why don't you go try it?" They won't. I mean, they'll say, "Oh yeah, good idea." But they won't do it, especially if they're newly-injured. But if you kind of take them and show them by example, then they say, "Oh, that's how it's done. Okay, that makes sense. Let me try it, let me do it." And they may not come back to rowing, but they go on to other things. And a lot of these people that I've worked with over the years, I've found years later that they're community leaders or employers or active people in society. So it's kind of like an outward-bound experience: They say, "Hey, if I can do this, I can do anything," and they go on from there. So basically, what I'm trying to do is spark people back into life.

Q. The program started in 1989?

A. Yes. My wife was really instrumental in getting it started, because she saw what I had done over the years, and she just thought it should be done in a formal format. And thanks to her, Wheelchair Sports and Recreation became what it is, or came into existence, anyway.

Q. Where did you get the funding for the program?

CHARLES EKIZIAN of Squantum demonstrates a special hand-pedalled cycle that he uses for exercise. Ekizian, who has been disabled since 1968, co-founded the Wheelchair Sports and Recreation Association with his wife Danielle in 1989.

FULL NAME: Charles William Ekizian
AGE: 47
ADDRESS: Squantum
OCCUPATION: president of Wheelchair Sports and Recreation Association (WSRA) since 1989. Previously worked in the communications department at Tufts New England Medical Center for 10 years
EDUCATION: graduated from Boston Technical High School, 1965
FAMILY: married to the former Danielle Staff (who serves as WSRA's executive director); no children

A. Well, I'd really like to thank Frank Barrett, who's the owner of Barrett's Restaurant in Charlestown, but he owns several places in Quincy; he's also a Quincy resident, and he was a neighbor of mine. Frank and his son, Richie Barrett—they run The Tent in Quincy and Amelia's Restaurant—and one of their managers, Neil Fisher, put together a basketball tournament which raised the initial money to help launch Wheelchair Sports and Recreation. Over the years, they've been our main supporters, although we've had a few raffles and done different things.

Q. And the program is run in other communities besides Quincy?

A. Yes. We just started a sledge hockey team which is out of Woburn; I'd also like to give a special thanks to Bob Haverty and his son Matt of Haverty Builders Inc. They raised the money for this hockey team, which is a disabled hockey team—it's really amazing to watch it. And Peter and Joan Johnson also really helped get our sledge hockey program off the ground by buying the actual sledges to make the activity possible two years ago. I met Pete when I was working at Marina Bay, and he became our vice president. He has been a staunch supporter and worker for us; he's also the CEO of Thomson and Thomson in Quincy.

In Newton, Community Rowing has an adaptive program. They were the first, I think, adaptive rowing program in the country. We just had a bike trip out in Springfield, and we got a group of people from the Springfield area to try hand cycles. And we're hoping to develop a group of hand cyclists in different areas of state. Oh, gosh, there's other things, too; there's just so many.

Q. According to your brochure, there's a pretty wide range of sports.

A. Yes. There's a rugby team in Brockton; PVA (Paralyzed Veterans of America) runs that. My wife and I were founding members of that team. There's basketball, which is also out of the Brockton V.A. Hospital.

There's a lot of different sports, and there's more coming out all the time. I tried water skiing for the first time this summer. There's snow skiing, of course. There's a ton of activities that 26 years ago just weren't in existence. All these wheelchair manufacturers are developing all these types of recreational vehicles and activities that handicapped people can adapt to, and I applaud them; I'm really grateful to see all this. Because it really is a good way to spark people back into life.

Wheelchair Sports is broad-based, and we reach out to the spinal cord-injured through hospitals based in Boston. But the newly-injured mobility-impaired patients come from all over the state, and even all over New England, and we try to channel them into activities that are based largely in Greater Boston. But we try to reach out to people in other parts of the state in places like Springfield and Lakeville. We try to meet people where they are, as well as try to bring them to activities right around Boston.

Q. How much do the activities cost?

A. A lot of the equipment is extremely expensive, and we're constantly trying to raise money to keep these programs alive. We try to raise money through different funding sources, but we've never really asked any of the participants to pay for the programs, because a lot of them really can't afford it. Some can, and some will probably down the line, but right now, we're kind of running on a shoestring budget. We could use a lot of help when it comes to any fund-raising or things like that. I'm really grateful for all the people who have sent us money.

Q. What would you call the main goal of your program?

A. When I was first injured, I met a paraplegic on a field trip to the V.A. Hospital. The man's name was Duane Johnson. He was an airplane pilot, he was a wheelchair basketball player, he was very muscular and fit. He turned my whole rehab process around. Just being with him, and being around him, just sparked me back into life. It just gave me something to shoot for, and over the years since then I've developed myself and become involved in a lot of activities. It gave me a real zest for life, and for living.

So that's my legacy, that's what I'm trying to pass on. I'm trying to get people active and moving, and sports and recreation is a great way to spark people back into life. Because if you can find out what their interests were before—for instance, if they played tennis before, they can still play tennis in a wheelchair; the only difference is that it's two bounces (of the ball) as opposed to one. Or even if it's only just going to the mall, or going to a museum, an art show, or something. Just getting out and getting active and being seen and developing an identity, and not feeling like you're the only one out there in this particular situation. And what we try to do is match people up with similar disabilities or similar levels of injury so that they can learn from people who have been out there and who are doing these activities. And just by seeing this, it gives the person a great feeling of mastery and autonomy.

Q. If somebody wants to participate in the program, how can he or she get in contact with you?

A. They can call us at 773-7251.

Marie's Kitchen

By MARIE J. D'OLIMPIO

Eggless Raisin Cake

You can call today's recipe relatively fat-free but delicious, unlike some fat-free foods. It's an old recipe from my mother's array of great desserts. It takes a few minutes to prepare and can be kept for days.I like having it around to have with a cup of tea.

EGGLESS RAISIN CAKE
1 cup raisins
2 cups water
1/2 cup margerine or butter
1 3/4 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Boil the raisins with the water for 10 minutes. Add the margerine and let cool.

Add all other ingredients and mix until well blended. Bake in a greased baking pan for 30 minutes. If you want variety and not worrying about fat, you may add a cup of chopped nuts. Let cool before slicing.

Stop & Shop Campaign Raises $4,600 For 2 Quincy Agencies

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company's recent sixth annual Food for Friends store fund-raising campaign raised more than $4,600 for two Quincy service agencies.

"Stop & Shop is in the business of feeding people every day," said Robert F. Tobin, the company's president and chief executive officer. "We have an obligation to provide food for those in need. Teacher's Dream Is To Build Cultural Center For Quincy

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

John F. McDonald is working with city officials to make his dream of creating a Quincy Cultural Alliance a realty.

The cultural center, which would seat about 2,500 people, has been estimated by McDonald to cost between $2 million and $5 million.

"It is vital to bring quality entertainment to Quincy," McDonald, 34, said during a recent interview with The Quincy Sun.

Reaction to his plan from city officials, according to McDonald, has been mostly positive.

"They are all basically eager to help me and make my dream become reality," he said.

McDonald said he has talked with Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Michael Cheney and Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Sheets.

A graduate of North Quincy High School, McDonald has been in charge of running the Quincy Community Theatre since 1983.

McDonald, who teaches world communication and drama at The Woodward School for Girls, has been involved in many different theatrical projects.

He has worked as assistant to Hollywood actress Isabella Rosellini, star of such films as "Cousins" and "Blue Velvet" and at a New York theatrical company called FLICK as well as working as a production assistant at MTV.

The young artist is also a television star of sorts.

"I appeared in Bryan Adams' Christamas video," McDonald said.

McDonald, a native of Quincy, said he wants to bring a modern flavor to Quincy through the arts while keeping with its rich tradition

"I want to help bring this city into the 20th century by offering a wide variety of family-oriented entertainment. But, I love the traditional architecture such as pillars and I would want to have a building with that same tradition," he said.

Bringing a cultural arts center to the Quincy community has been a lifelong dream for McDonald.

"I have always wanted to see a cultural center in Quincy. I've been interested in the arts ever since I was a kid," he said.

Beyond offering cultural center which he feels Quincy so richly deserves, McDonald said his plans for the building also include for it to serve as headquarters for an after school program for children as well as a community center.

"There isn't much for kids to do at night, so I would like to offer clean and fun entertainment for teenagers and kids," he said.

McDonald said the cultural and arts center would operate 13 to 15 hours a day, six or seven days a week.

"I want to serve the community and provide a place for kids, as well as adults, to come to instead of being on the streets," he said.

Some of the potential locations for the cultural arts center include Marina Bay, a vacant lot adjacent to President's Place and Crown Colony.

There may be some problems, McDonald admits, in bringing a cultural center to these areas.

"The area by Presidents Place has been earmarked by Quincy 2000 for a convention center or hotel. As for the Marina Bay center, we'd have to offer a shuttle bus service from the North Quincy (MBTA) train station to Marina Bay for people using public transportation," explained McDonald.

The biggest obstacle McDonald has faced in his search for a cultural center has been funding.

"We are doing fundraisers and we are going to ask for some federal funding, but it's hard to get federal funding," he said.

McDonald also said he hopes to gain corporate sponsorship from a Quincy corporation.

Other organizations have tried to bring a cultural arts center to the Quincy area, but instead of competing against each other, McDonald said they should join forces.

"That's why I chose the name 'Alliance.' We should be working together to see this dream come alive," he said.

Not all of McDonald's endeavors in developing a cultural center have been successful, however. In fact, he remembered his first attempt to bring a cultural arts center to Quincy as being quite unsuccessful.

"I was a senior in high school and I asked about possibly making one where the Wollaston Theatre is. But, it was just too expensive for someone my age and I never had enough time to devote all my efforts, until now," he said.

Anyone interested in becoming involved with the Quincy Cultural Alliance should contact McDonald at 786-7469 (786-SHOW).

JOHN F. McDONALD poses at the Dickinson Building at the entrance to Marina Bay in Squantum. The site is one of several locations McDonald has suggested for construction of a new cultural center in the city.

INSIDE INFORMATION

A car's coolant hoses may give little outward indication that they may fail. This is due to the fact that they fail more often from the inside because of electrochemical degradation. This problem arises as metals of the cooling system and the hose material, in combination with the coolant, form an electrical cell that produces a low DC voltage (particularly at high coolant temperatures). Over time, this electrical flow can cause cracks within the hose that start at the ends and run the entire length of the hose. Those who wait to see the damage may only be rewarded with a leak or bust hose. By feeling for irregularities in the hose, the auto technician can detect problems and replace hoses as a preventative measure.

HINT: Most upper radiator hoses are prime candidates for leaks after about four years of service.

Your safety is very important to us. Learn why LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is the local service center that many of your friends and neighbors already rely on. We pride ourselves on the quality of our service department. It is always our goal to fix your car right the first time around and it is because of that goal that we have on hand, a vast array of hoses and other parts as well as all the latest equipment the industry provides. Center for Technical Education. Sixteen vendors sold food from around the world, while entertainment was provided at the site by various acts.

"We placed the International Food Festival at the largest facility--the Voc-Tech gym--and only wish to expand the event next year, as it was clearly the best-attended event of First Night," said Cheney.

The First Night Committee is already planning for next year's event. Among the ideas to be discussed will be the possible inclusion of a laser light show and expansion of the parade and fireworks.

"We listened to many suggestions on New Year's Eve from families who attended this year's First Night celebration," said Cheney. "We have listed them all and will discuss them with the committee as well as the type of entertainment we are looking for."

Cheney added that Rex Trailer was a big hit again at this year's event.

"Individuals from all ages enjoyed Rex's performance," he said.

Cheney said First Night was also a success from a financial standpoint. As a result of button sales and sponsor participation, the event will finish in the black, he said, and a fund-raising drive for next year will begin immediately.

"The more money raised, the more entertainment we can provide the public," he said.

Cheney praised the mayor's office, City Council, and First Night sponsors and volunteers for making the event possible as well as the patrons who came out show support for the celebration.

AMONG THE MANY First Night revelers were Mayor James Sheets, his wife, Joann; their five-year-old granddaughter, Jessica Woodward; Tish Cheney, wife of Councillor Mike Cheney; and Cheney, who is also chairman of the city's First Night celebration.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION recently presented the city with the Irving Cohen Community Recognition Award in honor of Quincy's outstanding support of MDA. Accepting the award on behalf of the city are retired Quincy firefighter Angelo DelGreco, Massachusetts State Goodwill Ambassador Billy DeLorie, and Quincy firefighter Peter O'Hare.

City Receives MDA Award

The city received the Irving Cohen Community Recognition Award from the Greater Boston Chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) during recent ceremonies at the Dedham Hilton.

Each year, a community is honored for demonstrating outstanding support of the association. In 1994, various fund-raisers were held in Quincy to benefit MDA. Businesses and residents took part in a number of campaigns, including the following:

•Bowl-a-Thons: O'Lindy's and Merrymount Lanes.

•Hop-a-Thons: Bright Horizons and Barbette Kindergarten/Nursery School.

•Cool and Casual Program: Continental Cablevision and Blue Cross/Blue Shield.

•MDA Lock-up: Sons of Italy.

•Baby Contest: Shaw's Supermarket.

•Kick-A-Thons: Okinawan Karate, Masters of Self Defense Center, and Payton Professional Karate Studio.

The Quincy Fire Department also supported MDA. Its annual "Fill the Boot" drives at Marina Bay and local supermarkets were a big success, and the department also distributed shamrocks to be sold in various Quincy establishments for $1.

In all, the city raised over $28,000 for the clients MDA serves in the Greater Boston area this year.

Young Quincy Team Off To Surprising Start

By KERRY BYRNE

With a squad full of freshmen and sophomores, the Quincy High hockey team is off to a surprising 2-2 start.

The Presidents opened the season with a 4-0 shut-out win over Old Colony League rival Taunton. Their most recent game was a 6-3 drubbing of tough OCL opponent Bridgewater-Raynham. In between were a 5-4 loss to Boston Latin and a 4-2 loss to Weymouth.

Several factors have contributed to Quincy's success: the poise shown by the younger players, goaltender Mark Smith's penchant for the big stop, and, perhaps most importantly, an ability to light the lamp. The final factor was a big question mark for coach Bob Sylvia going into the season.

"We're not going to be a team that scores a lot of goals," said Sylvia before the first game. So far he has been proven wrong, and it is a mistake he's more than happy to live with.

Senior center Chris McArdle has been the big gun with hat tricks in both the Taunton and B-R games. Senior Steve Barrett has also performed well.

Sophomore forward Mark Glynn, who started last season on defense, has been among the youngsters who have stepped up their game this year. Matt Messing is another sophomore forward who has been thrown into the fire of varsity competition.

It is along the blue line that Quincy has had to rely most heavily on raw talent. The starting defenders are sophomore Matt Langille and freshman Steve Verlicco. Langille has been solid in his second season as a varsity blueliner and the hard-hitting Verlicco will be a bright spot for Quincy for the next several years.

Freshmen Derek McTomney and Tim Lewis have also played defense. Kevin Cellucci and Bobby Hall are freshmen forwards on the varsity team.

Goaltender Smith has been a big-play man for the Presidents. Twice, against Weymouth and Bridgewater-Raynham, he has had 39-save performances.

Quincy had a lull in the schedule during the holiday break, playing only one game since Dec. 22. They were scheduled to return to action Wednesday, Jan. 4 at Plymouth South. They play at Falmouth Saturday and host Boston Latin Monday afternoon at 2:45.

Pee Wee A's Skate To Tourney Semifinals

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee A squad skated to the semifinals of a tournament at Northstar Youth Forum before falling to Natick, 4-0.

Playing better than they have all season, the Pee Wee A's captured the tournament's National Division with wins over Manchester, N.H. (5-2) and WTM (7-0) and a tie with the UNH Wildcats (1-1).

The Quincy club showed outstanding teamwork and Ryan (Barra) Kreuger was outstanding between the pipes.

The Pee Wee A's have been on a roller coaster of wins and losses after finishing the first half of Greater Boston League play undefeated.

Quincy skated to a 2-2 tie with the TriCounty Saints.

Mike Carloni and Didier Althor lit the lamp for Quincy.

The Quincy club fell to TriBoro, 3-2.

Brian Nolan and Mike Welch scored in the short effort.

Althor, Paul Markarian and Dan Kennedy scored one goal each as Quincy fell to Canton.

Quincy returned to the win column with a 6-1 victory over Mid State.

Renewed energy and solid teamwork were part of the winning formula.

Welch led the offensive charge with three goals. Spike Bertucci scored two and Ryan Doyle netted one.

Quincy closed out the week with a 6-1 loss to Waltham.

NQ Boys Living Up To Coach's Expectations

North Quincy boys' basketball coach Ted Stevenson expected his team to be sharp this year. So far they've delivered with four wins in their first six outings.

The Red Raiders have lost only to Old Colony League heavy Falmouth and powerful St. John's of Danvers.

North played St. John's in the title match of a holiday tournament hosted by the Danvers school. The Raiders were within seven with three minutes left to play. But 10 for 10 shooting from the charity stripe by four different St. John's players put the game out of reach and helped them lock up a 75-53 win.

"They held the ball out and we started to chase them and that gave them some easy baskets late in the game," said Stevenson of the St. John's game. "They're a hell of a team. Big. Strong. Their best player is a 6-foot-5-inch guard [Chris Dexter]. He absolutely killed us [30 points]."

"Every team we've played we've been able to shut down their top scorer," said Stevenson. "We just couldn't do it against St. John's."

The Raiders had a number of notable performances of their own. Brad Gray led the team with 22 points. Matt Beston, who has been nothing short of spectacular this season, scored 15.

The St. John's battle was set up by a 59-56 win over Stoughton in the first round of the holiday tournament. North Quincy held a 20 point lead early, but Stoughton brought it to within one with 3:49 left to play. A key lay up and two foul shots by Eric Zimmerman down the stretch helped seal the win. Gerry Fernandez also hit two important foul shots in the waning moments of the contest.

"Gerry really did a job on the boards," said Stevenson. Fernandez grabbed 11 bounds and scored seven points.

Gray again led the scoring with 20 points. "Brad was absolutely fabulous," said the coach. He was followed by Beston (14) and Zimmerman (10). William (Mac) Ngutter added seven points and was tough on the defensive end with five steals.

Stevenson had words of praise for Beston, a skillful and agile junior point guard who is already getting serious consideration from several Division I colleges. "Matt's done a super job all year. He's a very good player. A great ball-handler."

North Quincy's other wins came against Plymouth South, Barnstable and Silver Lake. The Raiders held Barnstable's Mickey Fein to 15 points after he had been averaging 39 per game.

The Red Raiders are in the midst of their toughest stretch of the season, a stretch in which they play seven of eight games on the road. They travel to Taunton Jan. 6 and Weymouth Jan. 10 before hosting Bridgewater-Raynham next Friday, Jan. 13.

Atlantic Students, N.E. Patriots Kick Off Anti-Violence Program

Atlantic Middle School students recently welcomed members of the New England Patriots to kick off the school's third annual Stop the Violence Campaign.

The event was planned and hosted by eighth grade students and included speeches by Patriots Willie McGinest and Corwin Brown as well as student speakers on such topics as Atlantic's peer mediation program and their Student Alliance Against Racism.

The Patriots have supported Atlantic students in a variety of anti-violence programs in the past. The Patriots' "partnership" with the students began when 10 members of the team appeared at Atlantic to speak about the importance of teamwork and stopping racism and violence in society.

The players then recorded an anti-violence song for Atlantic and appeared with the students in a music video, "Stop the Violence," produced by teacher Patricia Dunne. The video, starring the Patriots' Maurice Hurst, was featured recently on Channel 7's "Live and Learn" segment.

Vincent Brisby, Troy Brown and Corwin Brown were some of the Patriots who taped a series of anti-violence public service announcements with Atlantic students at Foxboro Stadium last year.

Atlantic has been committed to teaching violence prevention, conflict resolution and peer mediation for more than five years since the school prepared a special grant, written by guidance counselor Al Savitsky. Teachers, parents and students have been trained in mediation, and a course in violence prevention has been incorporated into the school's curriculum.

Staff development and training in violence prevention is ongoing at the school. Three staff members recently attended the "Institute on Resilient Youth in a Violent World" at Harvard University.

Quincy Wrestlers Remain Undefeated

The Quincy High School wrestling team passed their toughest test of the season with a 30-28 win over a strong Billerica squad that improved their record to 5-0.

A pin by heavyweight Mike Feeley in the meet's final match sealed the win for the Presidents. Quincy's Matt Miller (130 pounds) and Bryan Gallahue (145) also pinned their opponents.

"I was very happy with the win," said Quincy head coach Lou Venturelli. "Billerica is one of the toughest teams in eastern Mass."

The hard-fought victory preceded a strong showing by the Presidents in the Lowell Holiday Tourney. Quincy placed 15th out of 50 teams in a tournament that featured over 400 wrestlers. "This was the largest turnout in Lowell I've ever seen," said Venturelli.

Bryan Gallahue was Quincy's top performer with a second-place finish. He won four straight matches and advanced to the finals in the 145-pound division before falling, 6-3, to a wrestler from New Hampshire.

Before the holiday break the Presidents posted impressive wins over BC High (51-19) and Waltham (54-16) in a double-dual meet.

John Richards (103 pounds), Rich Testa (119) and Feeley recorded pins against BC High. Tuan Tan (140), Pete Kolson (171) and promising freshman Dan Nichol (189) each made their first pins of the season in the meet.

Brian Woodberry (145) picked up his first win of the year against Waltham.

Ashley Davis, who was the state champion last year at 152 pounds, was to be honored at a banner-raising ceremony before Quincy's match against Plymouth South scheduled for yesterday (Wednesday).

Davis' name will be placed in the Quincy High gymnasium alongside the name's of the other former Quincy High wrestlers who have won state or sectional titles.

The banner containing Quincy's long list of sectional champs was to be replaced with a new one and Venturelli expected all those honored on the banner to be on hand.

Basketball

The young Red Raiders topped Silver Lake to improve their record in the Old Colony League to 2-0. They also beat Millis High twice.

Nine Red Raiders scored in the 43-28 win over Silver Lake. Laurie Flynn had a strong offensive game and the team shot 75 percent from the line.

In the first game against Millis, North Quincy won handily, 46-13. Eleven Red Raiders scored, led by Sharon Lee and Alanna McDonough. Kate Johnson led the defensive effort.

North had an even easier time in the second meeting, winning 53-12, as 13 Red Raiders lit up the scoreboard. Maura O'Brien was the game's high scorer.

Mary Travers grabbed eight boards and Kris Keohane dished out nine assists.

Mite A's Split In Santa Claus Tournament

The Quincy Mite A's won two and lost two in the Santa Claus Tournament held in Hingham over Christmas break.

Josh Giordani netted his fourth goal of the day two minutes into overtime to give Quincy an exciting 6-5 win over Falmouth in their first game.

Giordani and Brendan Craig scored early as Quincy held a 2-1 lead after one period. Matt Germain fed Giordani and Giordani assisted Craig.

Giordani was assisted by Joe Norris and Craig in the second period. Tim Duggan also scored on an assist by Pat Maxey to give Quincy a 5-3 edge after two.

Despite heroic goaltending by Kevin Richardson, Falmouth was able to tie the game and send it into the overtime session.

Quincy closed out the tourney with a 9-1 win over the South Shore Seahawks.

Pat Casper played brilliantly with assists on Quincy's first two scores, both by Duggan.

Other goal scorers were Dan Durocher (2), Ryan Conley, Matt Grazioso, Matt Germain, Giordani and Maxey. Assists were made by Germain (2), Maxey (2) and Grazioso.

Terrific defense by Matt Lavery, Richard Stone and Joe Norris, and outstanding goaltending by Andy Patten backboned the win.

Sandwiched between the wins were an 8-4 loss to South Boston and a sudden-death shootout loss to Norwood.

Ryan Conley, Duggan, Germain and Giordani scored against South Boston. Assists were made by Brendon Conley, Kevin Richardson, Duggan, Craig and Grazioso.

Patten, Stone and Andy McDonough made strong showings.

Against Norwood, the Quincy team fell behind with less than three minutes left to play, but Grazioso's tally with nine seconds left in the contest sent the game into overtime. Duggan assisted on the equalizer.

The deciding shootout was set up by a scoreless three-minute overtime session.

Squirt C's Upset Franklin In OT

The Quincy Squirt C team upset Franklin in overtime, 5-4, in the District Three state tournament.

One minute into the overtime session, Ryan Tobin worked the puck out of the corner and fed the puck to Kenny Young. Young found Tom Coughlin in slot and he blasted home the game-winner.

Quincy coach Patrick Clifford credited the exciting win to "old-fashion hard work and discipline" on the part of his players.

Tobin sparked the Quincy club with a hat trick. Young aided Tobin with two fancy assists.

Matt Peter's gritty play in front of the Franklin net led to a go-ahead goal that was set up by Mike Doyle's hard work in the corners.

The lead lasted until Franklin tied the game with 33 seconds left in regulation.

Ryan Rogers played a superb game between the pipes.

SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

By KERRY BYRNE

In last week's sports year in review I committed what you might term a small oversight, a slight guffaw, or, perhaps, a tiny miscue.

In highlighting the best and worst of Quincy's sports in 1994 I forgot to mention the most significant accomplishment by a Quincy athlete in a long time, maybe ever. So without further adieu....

Most impressive athletic accomplishment that was overlooked by a sportswriter who probably wrote about 20 articles on the said accomplishment during the course of the year and who therefore has no excuse for failing to mention it last week: Karen Cashman winning a bronze medal in short-track speedskating at the 1994 Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway.

Cashman began her career as a runner in the Quincy Track Club and as a figure skater before combining her passions in the from of speedskating. Her path, cleared by endless hours of hard work, led her to Olympic competition and a bronze medal in February.

Cashman looks to figure prominently in American speedskating at least through the 1998 Winter Games.

Who could forget the Karen Cashman Day celebration in April that was highlighted by her emotional speech in front of over 1,000 people at her alma mater, North Quincy High?

Sophomore Jeff Craig, of Quincy, is the leading scorer on the Plymouth State College hockey team through nine games. Craig has recorded 10 points, including a team-high eight assists.

Ally Sleiman, a former wrestler and football player at Quincy High, has done quite a bit of traveling since leaving QHS in 1992. Last season he wrestled for Colby Community College in Kansas. This year he's plying his trade for Wilkes University in Pennsylvania.

He made a swing through our area in December when Wilkes University took part in the Harvard Invitationals. Sleiman picked up a win by decision in his school's 29-12 win over Boston College.

Wilkes University also beat Harvard, 24-15, and UMass-Lowell, 28-11, in the tournament.

One of Sleiman's former teammates on the gridiron was Rob Kane. Kane, who was all-everything during his four years at Quincy High, played football at Trinity College this past fall.

Also playing football at Trinity was Robert Cibotti, a Quincy resident and Archbishop Williams graduate.

Both young men are members of Trinity's class of 1997.

Quincy resident and Thayer Academy graduate Kevin Kane received a varsity letter in soccer from Trinity College.

Kane is a member of the class of 1996.

Joe Zona and Tom Colasanto, both of Quincy, took part in the Codfish Bowl Hockey Tournament at UMass-Boston Dec. 29 and 30.

Both are among the top scorers on their respective teams; Zona for Hamilton College and Colasanto for UMass-Boston.

In its 30th year, the Codfish Bowl Hockey Tournament is the second-oldest college hockey invitational in the nation.

Parking Contract To Be Settled Within Two Weeks

Gillon left the city last month to accept a new position in Boston.

MacRitchie said others who joined Gillon on the city's parking operations recommendation committee--Planning Director Richard Meade, Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton and Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets, have received copies of the Kinney management agreement, as has Mike Burke, interim traffic consultant for the city.

"It's dragged on a little bit longer than we'd anticipated, but we'll get it done," said MacRitchie.

The contract should be settled within the next two weeks, at which time a target date will be set for when Kinney will assume management of the parking system, he added.

Kinney Systems Inc. held the parking contract prior to Metropolitan, which has managed the two lots since 1989.

Prepping The House For Winter

By MATTHIAS J. MULVEY
Inspector of Buildings

With the change of seasons, our thoughts should be turning to making sure the house is in good shape for the cold weather months ahead. Below are listed a few items to check:

1. Is the furnace or boiler in good working order? Items to check: all pumps/circulators properly lubricated; hot air furnace belts in good condition; firebox/chimney clear of soot and ashes; no combustible material stored on or near heating units; boiler/hot water heater drawn down to remove sediments; thermostats clear of dust; furnace filters replaced every month during the heating season; duct work/radiators vacuumed to clear away any dust; proper adjustment of burner guns for optimal efficiency; it is best to have a professional clean and adjust your heating system.

2. Insulation: Wherever possible, insulate the house such as unfinished basements, heating supply and return heat piping or duct work, hot water piping, attics, etc.

3. Windows: Make sure that all windows and storm doors are in good working order.

4. Exterior: Make sure all gutters and conductor pipes are cleared of debris. Check roofing, siding and chimneys for any maintenance needed. Check any trees/shrubbery to make sure they are trimmed away from the house. Patch any cracks or holes in walkways or driveways.

5. Properly store lawn furniture and any other outdoor items that may become airborne in high winds.

6. Have your winter tools/supplies in order such as brooms, shovels, sand or salt. It also makes good sense to keep your car's ice scraper and a can of lock de-icer in the house. You may not be able to get your tools to clean it if the lock is frozen.

7. Make sure the batteries in your smoke detector are fresh.

8. In the event of a severe storm: Have at least two properly working flashlights on hand. Have emergency phone numbers updated and close by the telephone. Have a battery-powered radio available. Have at least a two-day supply of food and water. Make sure you have an adequate supply of prescription medication.

Proper maintenance of your home will ensure a safe heating season for you. If you have any questions or need additional information, please contact a Quincy building inspector at 376-1452 between 8:30 and 10:30 a.m.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We are often asked why one should make pre-arrangements for one's own funeral . . . Our answer to this question is that planning ahead is just good common sense. We plan for everything else in life . . . weddings, education, retirement . . . why not funerals too?

Pre-arrangement and pre-financing plans have been gaining in popularity rapidly over the last few years. There are many reasons for this. First, people want the assurance of a funeral and burial which meets their personal lifestyle, standards and beliefs. Others feel an obligation to provide direction to their survivors and want to relieve the family of financial burden. Still others believe they are easing the emotional stress the occurs in the death of a loved one. Another reason is that many people have moved to a distant place and want the assurance that their final disposition will be taken care of in a certain manner and place . . .

At Deware Funeral Home we offer complete information on pre-arrangement and pre-financing plans. Feel free to contact us at any time if you have any questions concerning these plans.

AMENDING CITY MUNICIPAL CODE SECTION 12.08 BY STRIKING PARAGRAPH 12.08.020 AND INSERTING IN ITS PLACE:

12.08.020 PERMIT FOR DIGGING IN PUBLIC WAYS

No entity (person, business, utility, government agency) shall dig into or break-up any public street in the city without first having obtained a permit from the Commissioner of Public Works. The permit (hereafter known as a street opening permit) shall be in a form acceptable to the Commissioner, consistent with this code and other laws. The Commissioner may attach general and specific conditions under which a permit is granted. In all cases, the permit must be signed by the utility or property owner and contractor.

12.08.021 FEES FOR STREET OPENING PERMITS

A. A $100 (one hundred dollar) non-refundable application fee is required.

B. A $500.00 (five hundred dollar, cash or certified check) refundable deposit is required and will be held until the municipal contractor completes the permanent patch and payment is received. Interest on retained money is considered to be the property of the municipality. Trenches not inspected duel to the failure of the permittee to properly notify the Governing Authority shall be subject to loss of deposit, and/or repeat of reconstruction procedures.

C. A $5000.00 (five thousand dollar) Performance and Payment Bond is required for each street opening permit granted. The Governing Authority may allow a blanket bond commensurate with anticipated permit activity for routine excavators. Under no circumstances will this blanket bond be less than $50,000.00 (fifty thousand dollars).

D. The contractor must furnish the municipality with a Certificate of Insurance for General Liability in the amount of $1,500,000.00.

12.08.022 NOTIFICATION

A. The pavement shall be pre-cut and may only be disturbed with the area requiring excavation for repair, replacement or new installation. When the opening occurs within two (2) feet of the curb and/or edge of the hardened surface, the paved area between the excavation and the curb and/or edge must also be removed.

B. In the backfill process, the backfill shall be comprised of suitable material (subject to approval of the Governing Authority or his authorized representative). Concrete should be used around all electric and telephone conduit in trenches. Controlled Density Fill (CDF) may be required. Compaction, (when CDF is not in use) will be executed in six inch layers. Each layer shall be 95% compacted by mechanical means. When the total surface area of an individual opening in bituminous concrete is less than nine (9) square feet, all backfill material(s) will be placed to within a minimum of six (6) inches of the pavement surface, or the thickness of the original pavement structure, whichever is greater. For individual openings with surface areas of nine (9) square feet and larger, the backfill materials(s) O will be installed to within four (4) inches of the pavement surface or the thickness of the existing structure, whichever is greater. "Pavement Structure" will incorporate all previous paving materials used above the gravel sub-base, including but not limited to bituminous concrete, cement concrete, cobblestone, macadam, etc.

C. The hardened pavement shall then be cut back and removed six (6) to twelve (12) inches from all sides of the initial excavation to the depth of the original pavement structure, exposing the undisturbed gravel sub-base. Edges will be cut perpendicular to the surrounding surface and have a clean vertical face, particularly in the corners. All structures shall be leveled to the adjacent surfaces. The cut back shall be in straight lines with 90 degree angles at the point(s) of intersection.

D. All surplus and/or unacceptable excavated materials shall be removed from the job site immediately. The excavation site shall be maintained in a clean and safe condition at all times. Sidewalks and streets shall be cleaned and opened to traffic at the end of each working day, unless otherwise authorized by the Governing Authority. Access to properties are to be maintained. The removal and disposal of materials, including pavement, is the responsibility of the permittee. This shall be achieved in such a manner to minimize interference with pedestrian and vehicular traffic.

E. The permittee shall be liable for the condition of the street and sidewalk openings and protection thereof prior to the temporary repair, and will be held responsible for all damage due to any failure of barricades, barriers, warning sings, lights or steel plates to properly protect the work from traffic, pedestrians or other causes. Other than while work is actually being performed, all open ditches shall be protected by uniform traffic control devices in conformance with the Massachusetts Highway Department Manual. All excavations must be properly secured to insure the safety of the travelling public, and immediately reported to the designated municipal coordinator.

F. Temporary patching shall be performed by a contract representative of the Governing Authority and shall be the financial responsibility of the permittee. All barricades and/or safety devices shall be immediately removed from the vicinity upon completion of the temporary bituminous patching application.

G. Any improperly prepared excavations, including those left with unacceptable backfill material or insufficient pavement depth, shall be temporarily paved by the municipal contract representative and charged to the refundable deposit of the permittee. The deposit shall immediately replenished to the original amount. At a later date, the trench shall be re-excavated and prepared correctly by the permittee. Under these conditions the permittee may also be subject to permit cancellation, inspection fees, fines, and loss of deposit and bond.

H. All excavations will be required to settle and/or consolidate for a period of time before the contract representative of the Governing Authority is directed to perform a permanent repair. This term will be defined as a minimum of thirty days when Controlled Density Fill was used as backfill material. Compacted gravel sub-base must experience at least one (1) seasonal freeze/thaw cycle. The Governing Authority reserves the right to address any sub-base deficiency within, or adjacent to, the original excavated area with whatever measure deemed effective, during this period. These corrective procedures will be the financial responsibility of the permittee.

I. Immediately after the specified settling and/or consolidation period, all excavations shall be permanently restored by the contract representative for the Governing Authority. The following procedures shall be strictly adhered to:

1) The infrared process shall be utilized as the primary method of permanent restoration in bituminous concrete surfaces.

2) Temporary asphalt patches installed in cement concrete surfaces shall be re-excavated to the extremities of the square(s) in which the excavation is contained. The finished concrete shall be replaced to the depth, strength, and contour of the original structure. Any concrete surface damaged during construction shall also be replaced in a like manner.

3) All other surfaces, including but not limited to asphalt, brick, grass and wood shall be replaced consisted with the original and in strict accordance with municipal specifications.

The permittee shall also be responsible for any and all necessary appurtenant measures including, but not limited to, complete surface reconstruction, curbing, resetting utility structures, "bar holes", compatible crackfilling, tack coating and infrared integration of pavement. All the required processes shall be determined by a site inspection with an authorized representative of the Governing Authority.

All restoration procedures shall be the financial obligation of the permittee.

J. The permittee shall be responsible for any settlement, sub-base failure and pavement cracks that develop in, or adjacent to, the original excavated area for a period of three (3) years from the date of the final accepted permanent repair or, if Controlled Density Fill is used, for a period of one (1) year from the date of the final accepted permanent repair. Any surface disorder caused by settlement and/or sub-base movement within the general area containing a street or sidewalk opening, shall be addressed by the municipal contract representative, at the direction of the Governing Authority. All related corrective measures will be charged to the permittee, and the term of obligation will begin again.

K. Excavations opened without the permit may be subject to cancellation and refusal of existing and future permits, and associated fines.

L. Police protection, if required, shall be paid by the permittee either directly or billed by the municipal representative of the municipality and billed directly to the permittee.

M. All surface restorations, bituminous concrete replacements, and permanent repairs will be done by a contract representative of the municipality and billed directly to the permittee.

12.08.024 BILLING AND COLLECTIONS

A. The contract representative of the municipality shall bill the permittee for the above mentioned services. All invoices will be paid within 30 days. One past due invoices, a service charge of 1 1/2% per month will be allowed on accounts 30 days past due, provided the rate does not exceed that which is permitted by law, in which case the highest allowable legal rate will apply. Invoices exceeding 90 days shall be paid by the municipality from the refundable deposit and/or bond, at which point the municipality shall fine the permittee that cost plus $100.00 per day, and continue to accrue the service charges on any uncollected monies together with all costs of collection including attorney's fees.

B. The Governing Authority reserves the right to assume the billing function, including assessment and conveyance of reasonable handling charges, as provided by Massachusetts General Laws. On 90 days past-due invoices, the municipality will revoke existing and future permits until payment of such invoices, including all service charges and fines. If the account is found to be uncollectible, there shall be a lien upon such Real Estate in the manner provided in G.L. Chapter 40, Section 42A to 42F.

Mariano Lauds Proposal By State Workers' Compensation Insurers

State Rep. Ronald Mariano has applauded a recent proposal by the Commonwealth's workers compensation insurers.

The insurers have filed for a 10.5 percent rate decrease for 1995. Mariano said that would translate into an aggregate savings in excess of $130 million for Massachusetts employers.

The rate decreases in 1994 and 1995 are the only two decrease requests in 20 years, which Mariano called a "true reversal" from the double-digit increases from 1987 to 1991.

"This is the best news employers have heard in many years," he said. "Four years ago our workers' compensation system was on the brink of ruin. Through the hard work and efforts of the Legislature, we have begun to bring the system back from its critical standing.

"This insurance filing is another major step in the right direction."

The workers' compensation insurers rate request is only the first step in the process of establishing rates for 1995. The Division of Insurance must now review the filing and hold a public hearing to allow people to comment on it.

"Although Insurance Commissioner (Linda) Ruthardt still has to make her determination, I'm hopeful that these new rates will go into effect by the beginning of January," said Mariano. "Hopefully, the commissioner will act as promptly as possible to set a rate for 1995 that reflects reductions in the costs of workers' compensation and is fair for both employers and insurers."

Chiropractic Update

by Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

WHAT IS A SLIPPED DISC?

The term "slipped disc" has been used commonly, by doctors and patients alike, to generally describe an injury to one of the 23 "jelly-like" shock absorbers found between each of the bones or vertebrae of the spine. These intervertebral discs are ligaments which actually consist of a "jelly-like" middle surrounded by rings of cartilage. While these discs do not actually "slip" from between the spinal bones, they can be worn, compressed, bulged, or ruptured causing pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves. It is this bulged or ruptured disc that pressures or "pinches" the nerve which actually causes the severe back and/or leg pain that may result. Often times, muscle spasms will accompany a disc injury as the body attempts to stabilize or splint the damaged lower back or neck.

While the intervertebral discs may lose some of their height and resiliency and dry out slightly over the years, the final straw of a disc injury may be a sudden twist or slip, an improper lift, or a seemingly minor accident.

Chiropractors are well qualified in the prevention and/or treatment of disc injuries and often employ the modern technology of MRI or Catscan to ensure accurate diagnosis. Chiropractors use a drugless, non-surgical approach which may include manipulation, forms of therapy, proper exercise and bed rest.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

VOL. 27 No. 17 Thursday, January 12, 1995 30¢

"IN 1995, EXCITING challenges remain," said Mayor James Sheets during his third mid-term address Monday. Sheets agreed with The Quincy Sun's assessment of 1994 as "a year of progress" and said he wants the city to keep moving forward.

Says Agenda Must Be Completed

Sheets Considers Run For Fifth Term In 1997

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets, who is seeking a fourth term in the city election this September, is already considering a run at a fifth term in 1997.

Sheets told The Quincy Sun at press time that the goals he has set for the future--which he outlined in his third mid-term address Monday--may make it necessary for him to seek a fifth term.

"Absolutely," said Sheets. "I feel there's an agenda that has to be completed. The most important thing to me is completing the agenda as it now exists."

Sheets said the goals on which he places the highest priority are bringing a hotel for Quincy Center, securing funding for the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy Point and two state projects--the Quincy Center Concourse which would link Hancock Street with Burgin Parkway and a commuter rail station, both of which would be built in the city's downtown.

While he stressed that while he has not made a final decision at a run for re-election in 1997, the mayor also told The Sun that he may seek a fifth term even if his current agenda is completed.

Sheets' Major Goals For 1995

Mayor James Sheets listed a number of goals he hopes to achieve in 1995 during his mid-term address Monday. Among them:

•Building on last year's successes in the area of tourism by bringing a hotel to the city, securing funding for the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum, and establishing a "Quincy Compact" to link the city's historic sites.

•Recovering and restoring Wollaston Beach to a state that is constantly safe and clean.

•Expanding Quincy's economic base to control property taxes.

•Strengthening the city's infrastructure to provide the base for economic growth.

•Continuing plans for construction of the Quincy Center Concourse as well as a commuter rail station in the downtown.

•Developing the Hancock Parking Lot and further expanding the retail base in downtown Quincy.

•Appointing a Technology Task Force to bring the city into the 21st century in the areas of computerization and communication.

Sheriff Marshall Stricken, Hospitalized

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall, 58, a Quincy resident, was stricken in his Dedham office Tuesday with an apparent stroke and was taken to Norwood Hospital by ambulance.

His condition was not known at The Sun's press time. Members of his family were at the hospital.

Marshall has been sheriff since 1974. He is a former state representative and began his political career as Ward 2 city councillor in 1966, succeeding Joseph LaRaia.

CLIFFORD MARSHALL

Marshall, who was elected to a fourth term in 1993, has initiated several incarceration alternatives during his administration. Perhaps most notably, a new Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Correctional Center was constructed to replace the "Dedham Jail" built in 1817.

The center, located between the north and Morrisette American Legion Post and his affiliation as a long time member.

The site, which has been the home of the post since the late 1920's, will now be known as Saturn of Quincy.

Atty. Carl Johnson, representing board members of the Morrisette Post recorded in favor of the move called it the "best move for the neighborhood". There were no abutters at the meeting.

Also voting in favor was Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, and Marilan Manning, director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association . Manning said West Quincy was now part of their territory, and that she was "delighted" with the move.

According to the owner, Rosario Boisvert, he plans to open in early spring..They will be open five days a week from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Service hours will be from 7:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., with no service hours on Saturday.

Structural Problems Delay Decelle Opening

Major structural problems at the site of the former Child World and Cummings stores in Quincy Center have caused the opening of a major discount clothing store slated to come to the downtown to be delayed.

Decelle, a Braintree-based retailer owned by Burlington Coat Factory, had planned to sign a lease in October to fill the vacancy at the three-story building. While city officials now say they expect the lease to be signed within a month to allow the store to be open by Easter, store representatives declined to predict a time frame. .

Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning organization, has been trying to bring Decelle to the 40,000-square-foot site since January of last year. The clothier reached a tentative agreement with city officials to open a new store there last September.

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Charles D'Aprix estimated the structural repairs at the building will cost around $800,000. Burlington Coat Factory, however, does not want to foot the bill and is trying to persuade the landlord, Walcott Corp. of Boston, to cover the costs, he said.

Officials said expenditures will range from basic wiring and plumbing problems to the need for a new $200,000 heating, ventilation and air-conditioning system. In addition, the septic system needs upgrading, the building must be made accessible to the disabled and the rear windows need glass.

D'Aprix said the building has not had any maintenance in a number of years

Hingham developer Donald MacKinnon, who is building a $6 million shopping center which will include a Wal-Mart store in Quincy Point, offered last summer to pay for all demolition needed inside the downtown building, which has estimated at about $100,000.

However, his offer does not extend to structural repairs, according to D'Aprix.

Mayor James Sheets and Decelle officials said this week that despite the delay, they are confident the clothier will be able to open at the site at some point in the near future.

'Looks Forward' To New Challenges

Cheney Gives Council High Marks For 1994

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City Council President Michael Cheney has given the council high marks for what it accomplished last year and said it looks forward to the challenges of 1995.

Cheney, who made his comments while speaking at Mayor James Sheets' third mid-term address Monday, said there were "many tasks accomplished" in 1994 but added that "I feel confident in predicting the accomplishments of the City Council at the end of 1995 will exceed last year's accomplishments."

"As always, our best effort will come forward to provide needed city services in a cost-efficient manner, to provide public safety for all our citizens, and the best possible education opportunity for all our youth," he said.

Among the areas Cheney said the council helped demonstrate its commitment to Quincy last year:

•Education, as exemplified by the council's appropriations of funds for construction, renovations and/or additions to several schools, as well as passage of a home-rule petition to establish an independent board of governors at Quincy College and a subsequent petition to remove elected officials from that board which currently sits before the state Legislature.

•Public Works, particularly the reconstruction of parks, playgrounds, streets and sidewalks; construction of seawalls and repairs to drainage problems, and Cheney's formation last winter of a snow removal task force.

•Special Permits. The council approved permits for a Wal-Mart store and Roche Bros. supermarket, which will be part of a new shopping center in Ward 2; Twin Rivers Technologies, which will produce biodiesel fuel from soybeans at the former Procter & Gamble plant, also in Quincy Point; and a Super Stop & Shop at the Pneumatic Scale site in North Quincy (Ward 3).

•Public Safety, by approving funds for additional manpower and equipment for the police and fire departments.

•Special Events, including First Night, Flag Day and Christmas festivities, SummerFest Concert series and others.

Cheney also took the time to recognize some of the individual accomplishments of his fellow councillors:

•Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, who "has worked feverishly" on seawall construction and other public works-related projects, and must now deal with a permit filed by Stop & Shop to construct a mini-mall on Southern Artery.

•Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who helped make the Wal-Mart/Roche Bros. and Twin Rivers permits possible and was also honored by his constituents who dedicated a park in his honor.

•Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, who took a "leadership role" in the city's recycling program and made the Stop & Shop permit at Pneumatic Scale possible.

•Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, who made possible the construction of the Amelio Della Chiesa Childhood Center in South Quincy and an addition to the

Telephone Device For Deaf Installed At City Hall

The Mayor's Commission on Disability announces the installation of a TDD (Telecommunication Device for the Deaf) at City Hall.

The telephone number is (617) 376-1375. Calls for all city departments will be accepted and relayed to the appropriate office. The TDD provides access to the city's facilities and services for the deaf and hard of hearing.

The service is funded through the city's Federal Community Development Block Grant.

City Census Forms To Be Mailed This Week

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Forms for the 1995 city census should arrive in all residential dwellings by the end of the week.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said at press time that the forms, which total about 38,000, would be mailed yesterday (Wednesday). Residents should fill them out and return them to the clerk's office within 30 days, he added.

The census is conducted annually under the provisions of Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 51. Shea said the state requires the census to be done for a number of reasons, including:

•The amount of state and federal funding Quincy is eligible for, the number of liquor licenses the city can possess, and other totals are determined by population.

•The city must inform the state of all residents over the age of 18.

•Jury lists, voter lists and other data must be kept up to date.

Shea said a team composed of members of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars and other census workers will beginning visiting all city residences that do not respond to the census in February. A complete list of residents will be published and available for viewing at City Hall in June, he added.

The census costs about $25,000, a figure that is included annually in Quincy's municipal budget, according to Shea.

TIME FOR A TETANUS SHOT?

Immunization against tetanus is one of those childhood things, right? Wrong. Infection from tetanus bacteria can have serious health consequences for anyone not protected by immunization. For adults, that calls for a tetanus booster every ten years. Tetanus bacteria thrive in soil, where air cannot reach them. A deep puncture wound by an object such as a dirty nail or garden tool is the most common source of an infection. It may take 8 to 12 days after an injury for the appearance of symptoms, which may include severe muscle tension ("lockjaw"), convulsions, breathing difficulty and even death. If you suspect you may have a tetanus infection, don't wait for the symptoms; see your doctor at once.

P.S. It usually takes a deep puncture wound to cause a tetanus infection, not just a minor scrape or cut.

Routine immunizations are essential for both adults and children, although many, such as tetanus, need only be done after many years. To be sure, consult your physician to see that your immunizations are up-to-date. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself offer complete medical care with a focus on treating heart disease. Call 472-2500. Grace Is Leaving

Grace Giunchiglia, who has been a right arm to two Quincy mayors in two different political eras, will be leaving City Hall next month.

GRACE

She will be stepping down as personal secretary to Mayor James Sheets Feb. 16—her 65th birthday.

"I believe the position needs someone who is younger and has more stamina," she says with mixed feelings.

"I feel badly that I am retiring because I had hoped I would have been able to stay with Jim as long as he was mayor."

A blood pressure problem she developed last April is a main factor in her decision to retire.

Giunchiglia came back to City Hall in January, 1990 after a quarter-century absence to become Sheets' secretary as he began his first term as mayor.

She had left in 1965 when Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa decided not to seek re-election. After 12 years as mayor—eight under Plan A and four years under Plan E. She had been his secretary since 1959.

Her total 21 years of service to the city also includes stints in the Quincy Hospital and City Hall personnel departments and as legal secretary in the city's solicitor's office.

She sees similarities between Sheets, a Democrat and Della Chiesa, a Republican.

"In many ways there are similarities," she says. "Both very caring. Both more interested in their city and the people than in themselves."

She has known every mayor since Della Chiesa and feels each "has left a part of himself with the city."

If she had to single one out for outstanding achievement, it would be Sheets.

"I think Jim has done more for the city than any other mayor. Maybe I feel that way because he has done all that he has done in such a short time."

She has fond memories of Della Chiesa who as mayor had an "open door policy."

"Anyone could walk in on him if they wanted to see him," she recalls. "They didn't have to make an appointment. He felt he was their mayor and they had a right to see him whenever they wanted to."

Della Chiesa was a penny-pincher and pinched them even tighter than Frank McCauley who later followed him into the mayor's office.

He was known for walking through City Hall turning off lights in areas not being used at the moment.

"That's not so bad," Grace smiles. "We had adjoining offices. And he would turn off the lights in his office when he came into mine and then turn them back on when he returned to his office."

She doesn't know if he saved the city much with his off-and-on lights policy but she says, "he was a great mayor."

Does she think Quincy will ever have a woman mayor?

"Someday," he says. "Someday when women finally realize that a woman is capable of running the city."

If women voted for women there could have already been a woman mayor, she says, noting that female voters have outnumbered male voters in Quincy for sometime now. (Latest figures: Women: 26,372. Men: 20, 853.)

"Now if women would unite . . . "

Grace will be going to Seattle in July for the convention of the International Secretaries. (She was the South Shore Secretary of the Year three times 1959, 1969, 1980.)

After that she plans to take it easy.

But who knows, maybe some day she might come out of retirement to help a woman launch a mayoral bid.

But, not against Jim Sheets.

A SPECIAL HONOR for the late Joseph Harold of Quincy needs only the signature of Gov. William Weld.

J. HAROLD

Legislation recently passed by the Massachusetts Senate and House calls for the new railroad bridge over the Neponset River to be named for Harold who served 40 years as state adjutant of the Disabled American Veterans. He died three weeks ago.

The bill, filed by Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ron Mariano and Stephen Tobin, was co-sponsored by a number of other representatives including House Speaker Charles Flaherty. Weld is expected to sign the bill which is now on his desk.

Harold's son, former state Senator Paul Harold, served 14 years on the Transportation Committee and secured funding for the Neponset bridge twice. The original bridge plan called for a single track but it was later re-designed for two tracks.

MICHAEL D'AMICO, who made an impressive political debut in a bid for the Ward 4 City Council seat in 1993, is still considering another run this year. But could it be for something other than Ward 4?

A FEW PEOPLE have asked me what I think of Connie Chung. Well, for what it's worth: Not much.

That was a pretty sneaky way to pry the Hillary Rodham Clinton "bitch" quote out of Newt Gingrich's mother with the promise, "Whisper it, it'll be just between you and me."

That anything-for-a-rating maneuver should go down in broadcast journalism history as something akin to the work of a con-artist.

But Chung may have cut her own throat with it. Who would trust telling her anything in confidence in the future? For that matter who would trust being interviewed by her or even chatting with her?

Her future value as a news person in TV land right now is highly questionable.

I think she owes Mrs. Gingrich an apology for unethical conduct. Or be fired.

And CBS is no prize either, trying to justify broadcasting to millions what was supposed to have been "between you and me."

Frankly, I'll take ABC and Peter Jennings anytime.

Scenes From Yesterday

FOR OVER 75 years, MacFarlands was the place to buy hardware in Wollaston. Having settled on Arlington St. in 1896, James MacFarland established his business and then built this building and opened this store at 9 Brook St. in 1900. In more recent years the store operated from a newer building attached to the left of this one. But this building is still extant and it is a rare surviving example of Quincy's turn of the century commercial architecture. The sign and the stoop are gone but all the other details on the facade of this wooden building are virtually unchanged from when this photo postcard was mailed to Nova Scotia in 1912.

Chamber Urges Repeal Of Massachusetts Bank Tax

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Immediately following the Great Depression, the Massachusetts Legislature imposed a greater tax burden on the banking community because, in effect, they dominated the local financial market and they had all the money. They had few competitors and, because of branching and other restrictions, were even protected from competition from one another.

Today, nearly 65 years later, Massachusetts banks are taxed at 12.54 percent, the highest rate for financial institutions in the country. Moreover, Massachusetts banks are taxed at a rate two percentage points or 20 percent higher than all other businesses including financial firms, full service insurance agencies, even Sears Roebuck in which they directly compete.

In 1992, a blue ribbon study for the Massachusetts Special Commission on Business Tax Policy chaired by former Federal Boston Reserve President Richard Syron concluded that Massachusetts bank tax is now out of date and urgently in need of reform: "While the biases of the Commonwealth's bank tax are long standing, the distortions they create have become especially severe in recent years...The bank tax does, indeed, need to be restructured and the sooner the better."

Where do we see the results of this poor tax policy? How many Massachusetts residents today hold credit cards from banks located within the Commonwealth? Not many. Over 85 percent are contracted by out-of-state firms which pay no tax on their profits to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

In the midst of the whole restructuring of the banking community, how many merging and acquiring institutions are located within the Commonwealth? Again, not many. Boston was once considered the financial capital of New England, in close competition with Wall Street; today, the Bank of Boston stands alone as the region's major bank. Further analysis confirms that the Commonwealth, in effect, offers incentives to out-of-state banks and non-banking financial competitors while providing disincentives for Massachusetts banks to expand their services, maintain jobs and to create economic development.

Reform of the Massachusetts bank tax is now under consideration before the state Legislature. A rationalized bank tax is a very important part to the improvement of the business climate in this Commonwealth. Without it, the banking industry may find itself going South with the manufacturing industry. On behalf of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, I hope you will join us in this repeal of the Massachusetts bank tax.

Have You Seen Chase?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This is one of 345 letters being mailed to every newspaper in Rhode Island and Massachusetts listed in the current 'New England Newspaper Directory.' It is part of a last-ditch effort to bring a missing dog home.

You may have read about Chase or seen her story on television: This beautiful golden retriever was taken from the seawall at First Beach in Newport, Rhode Island, on Sept. 10, 1993, as she sat and watched her best friend of eight years surf offshore.

More than a year has passed. More than 3,000 miles have been logged in our desperate search for her. More than $3,000 has been spent in adver-tising and in publicizing our plea for her safe return. We have followed up on several hundred leads provided by wonderful people who believed they may have seen her. So far, no luck, however, as we have said before: We are often discouraged but not yet defeated.

We gratefully acknowledge all editors who print this letter, and we implore all of you who read it to kindly keep a watchful eye out for this beloved dog. Has a female golden retriever moved into your neighborhood within the last 16 months? Have you or someone you know adopted a golden retriever with a questionable history? If so, please contact us at (401) 683-5754. All calls are confidential.

In the spirit of the recent holiday season, a time when the meaning of being close to our loved ones has such great significance, won't you please help send Chase home and make a heartbroken Rhode Island family whole again?

Motor Inn Proposed For Court House Site

Jan. 12-18
1971

By PAUL HAROLD

The High Mark Corp. of Boston announced its interest in building a multi-million dollar motor inn at the site of the former district court house on Coddington St. The eight-floor facility would have 200 rooms.

Mayor James McIntyre called it an exciting proposal for the downtown area. He also expressed his desire to put the county property back on the tax rolls to help with the city's finances.

DR. PAUL GOSSARD DIES

Dr. Paul Gossard, age 73, died this week. A resident of Elm Ave., he had served as Superintendent of Schools for 19 years.

Dr. Gossard was born in Sandusky County, Ohio. He received his Master's and Doctoral degrees in philosophy from the University of Chicago. He came to Quincy in 1944.

Under his superintendency, the school population increased from 10,000 to 15,000. He also oversaw the biggest school expansion program in the city's history with the opening of the Atlantic and Broad Meadows Junior High Schools, and the Myles Standish, Beechwood Knoll, Furnace Brook, Snug Harbor and Great Hill elementary schools. He was also an early proponent of Quincy Junior College.

In 1963, he left the superintendent's position and was teaching at Eastern Nazarene College.

RED RAIDERS VICTORY

North Quincy High School's basketball team defeated Everett 82-50 this week, its fifth straight victory.

Coach Bob Nolan noted that the team was something of a rarity because everyone plays. "If someone is good enough to wear a varsity uniform he's good enough to perform in each game," he said.

Nolan also credited his two platoon organization with ensuring North's record of not having missed a Tech Tournament in recent years. In three and a quarter years, North's record was 43 wins and 13 losses.

Easy Egg Plant

When most of us think of egg plant we think of coating, frying, baking, but last week I was pressed for time, so I prepared it in a much easier way.

First of all, you don't even have to skin the egg plant if you prefer not to. I left the skin on it, and diced it.

EASY EGG PLANT

1 medium sized egg plant
1 cup tomato sauce
2 cloves garlic about 2 tablespoons olive oil
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup grated cheese
1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs.
1 tablespoon basil (or a favorite herb)

Cut the egg plant in small pieces. Saute the garlic in the olive oil and add the egg plant.

Cook for a minute or two and add the sauce with a smidgen of water. Add the basil, salt, pepper and grated cheese and cook covered until egg plant is tender. If the egg plant gets a little dry, you can either add more sauce or more water. After it seems done, sprinkle the bread crumbs over the top, turn and cook on low heat until blended. Serve hot with crusty bread.

It is great for a side dish and if you want, you can add melted cheese on top before serving. It also heats great in the microwave the day after.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Quincy College Interim President Linda Wilson:

'I Want To Make Us The Best Possible College'

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Q. The original field of candidates for the interim college president's position included 92 people. You must be thrilled to have been selected.

A. I am; it was quite an honor. As I understand it, the field of candidates came from all over, a wide geographic range; I even heard there was someone from outside the country. So obviously that number, the large number, shows that there was a great deal of interest in such a position, and the fact that I was selected really makes me feel very honored and very pleased. And I'm happy to be here (smiles).

Q. You're also the first woman to run the college. What are your feelings on that?

A. Well, there's been a lot mentioned about that, and I guess that's exciting. But as I've said before, I hope my legacy here is not that I was a good woman president, but that I was a good president. I think the fact that I'm a woman is going to, perhaps, bring a different style of management to the college. Hopefully, I can be a role model, although a lot of the teachers and other administrators are obviously female, so for a predominantly female (student) population, they've got other role models. But I think it's nice for them to see that through education and perseverance that a woman can "rise to the glass ceiling," as it were.

Q. Do you think being a woman can help you to create a greater rapport with students and faculty than your predecessors?

A. Again, I think rapport is based on who you are in terms of your personality, not necessarily your gender. I know in the past, there have been students who have felt very close to certain administrators here, and hopefully they'll feel close to me. I think I'm very approachable; male, female, whatever, I'm just an approachable person.

Q. What qualities do you think you possess that set you apart from the other 91 candidates?

A. Well, I have been here or been affiliated with the college for a long time; since 1979, I've been affiliated with the college either in an administrative capacity and/or teaching capacity. So probably, I had the benefit of the most longevity here of any of the other candidates.

Also—and I can only surmise this because they picked me, and not someone else—probably the (college's) board (of governors) felt that parts of my vision for the college which included greater visibility, greater outreach into the community, reinstituting some of the student services that are important here—those kinds of things that probably, I'm guessing, things that I stood for that maybe the other candidates didn't.

Q. One of the three finalists for the interim presidency was the previous interim president, Donald Young. What is your relationship with him, and what do you think about the work he did while he held the position?

A. Dr. Young was very helpful to me in the transition process, and he was obviously very well-revered in the year that he spent here as the interim president. The staff had a lot of respect for him, he's a very kind and gentle man, and all I can say is that he was helpful to me in my transition. We obviously have different styles, or he would still be here, but he's still going to be here in a teaching capacity. So I'm sure I'm going to be working with him one way or another in the upcoming year.

Q. There's been some controversy about the selection process for the position, as there were city councillors and members of the college staff who said they felt Dr. Young should have been retained. Again, what are your feelings?

A. Well, it's not for me to second-guess what goes through a city councillor's mind. The fact remains, the process by which I was selected was the most open process I've ever been involved with, either as an interviewer or as an interviewee. It was advertised; the meetings, the sessions were certainly open. Anyone from anywhere—anyone from anywhere in the country—could have come and sat in to see and to hear what all of the candidates had to say. So I'm a bit dismayed that there are those out there who feel, perhaps, it was not a good process, because I really feel that it was, not just because I was the candidate selected, but because going through it, I could see that it was a very open and fair process.

In terms of the faculty—hopefully, they will come to respect me. A lot of them I know from my past experience, and I don't think that kind of transition is going to be a problem. But as I said, Dr. Young is a very kind and gentle person, and I think they liked him as an individual, which will continue.

Q. The interim presidency is, for now, a one-year position. What made you interested in it?

A. The fact that I had been an administrator here before. I gave it a lot of very serious thought, and I saw it as advertised; I thought about it, I talked to friends about it, I did some soul-searching—and I decided that it was time, maybe, to give this a go, to try it, and just see what would happen when I threw my hat in the ring. And, obviously, here I am.

If it works out, I said before when I was meeting with the School Committee—the night that they approved my leave (of absence from Quincy Public Schools)—I said I'm in a very, very fortunate position. Because I was leaving a job that I loved—I enjoy my work at Quincy Public Schools tremendously, and I'm very loyal to Quincy Public Schools, having been a product of them and then worked for them for so long. So I was leaving a position I loved (and) going to a position that I was very excited about. I couldn't lose either way, and had I not gotten the position, I'm still in a position that I love.

So here I am, and if it's a year or if it's 10 years, I just happen to be very lucky.

Q. What do you hope to accomplish in the next year? What are your goals for the college?

A. I hope to at least set the seeds for some future growth. Certainly one of the things that I can do, and I've already started to do, is try to make the college, with myself as the representative of the college, more visible in the community. I want to start some long-range planning; there's a lot that can be done. This is a wonderful resource; Quincy College has so much to offer its students and the greater Quincy community, the South Shore community. I want to make sure that we at least start looking, in the long term, at what we can do further to make us the best possible Quincy College. And whether or not I'm here to see the blossoms of those seeds that are sown this year, that's something that I definitely want to start.

Q. Specifically, do you have any programs in mind to bring the college into the future?

A. One thing that I'm not sure goes with bringing it into the future, but it's certainly got to bring it back up to the present and by doing so, will continue in the future, is reinstituting a lot of the student services. Quincy College services a very diverse population in terms of age and background. We have a lot of first generation students, non-traditional students, who need a lot of extra support that perhaps a more traditional college population might not need. Counseling services, financial aid services, academic advisement, transfer—a lot of these things used to be in place, and they're not in place anymore. So I want to beef those services up, or at least get the wheels in motion to start them.

I want to take a good hard look at all the programs to see what's working, what's not working, what we should add, how we should refine; hopefully, (to begin) working with the various agencies in the community to do some needs assessments, (to find out) what they'd like to see. Doing some in-house work with businesses and agencies so that we can be a resource to them, providing course work that they may need for their employees and don't have the training or staff to do; we can do it.

Quincy College is flexible, accessible and affordable; those are our biggest strengths. And I think it's incumbent on the school and I, as the chief executive of the school to make sure that we keep it that way. We've got a tuition structure that's probably the best in the entire state; it's the lowest. Our tuition costs less for a full year than many schools' fees alone that are charged along with tuition. We had the first tuition raise in several years this year, and hopefully we won't be having another for a while yet to come.

Q. Looking ahead to a year from now, it sounds like you may be interested in becoming permanent president if the opportunity arises.

A. Sure. I mean, never say never. I would imagine that if that option were extended, that I would pursue it. If I had thought that I would only do it for a year, period, regardless—maybe I wouldn't have done it. But with the option that perhaps I could go on if I so desired, I said, "all right, I can do this." And that's what I decided to do.

Right now, I'm enjoying this very much. It's a great staff; professional, talented, great ideas, exciting— it's a very electric place to be. I've always been, and continue to be, very impressed with the staff and their ideas and their energy.

Q. You began your education in Quincy, so the college must feel like home to you.

A. Yes, and the interesting fact of all this is that I started my own educational career at the (college's) Coddington building, which was, in those days, an elementary school, and last semester I was teaching child growth and development in the room that was my first grade class. So talk about coming full circle: that definitely was it.

LINDA WILSON, selected to serve as interim president of Quincy College by the school's board of governors last November, officially began her term as head of the school Jan. 3. Originally from Merrymount, Wilson has been affiliated with the college in a variety of capacities since 1979 and with Quincy Public Schools since 1969.

Council To Hold Public Hearing On Proposed Shaw's Store Jan. 17

The City Council will hold a public hearing on a proposed Shaw's Supermarket on the North Quincy-Wollaston line Tuesday, Jan. 17 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The Quincy Planning Board was scheduled to hold a hearing last night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room in City Hall Annex.

Shaw's has proposed building a single-story structure comprised of a 56,200-square-foot grocery supermarket with a 2,000-square-foot mezzanine, and an attached 27,925-square-foot retail store currently planned to house two tenants. The project would be constructed at the site of the former Boston Gear Works at 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St.

The company withdrew a proposal to build a store at the site in late 1993 after members of the City Council, notably Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, voiced opposition to the project because of neighborhood concerns about traffic and other issues. The site straddles the line between the two wards.

The new Shaw's plan calls for the opening of its proposed second retail store to be delayed until after the supermarket has been open for nine months. It also includes $300,000 in planned traffic improvements and a $1 million bond to support those improvements.

The bond amount is similar to the amount offered on the Home Depot store in West Quincy, which was built by developer Mark Dickinson who is behind the Shaw's project.

The Boston Gear site is currently zoned for industrial use. Although retail uses are allowed with a special permit from the City Council, other uses could move in without such a permit.

Concourse Advisory Committee Meeting Jan. 19

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Quincy Center Concourse will meet Thursday, Jan. 19 at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall Annex.

Chairman David Eziekson noted that all meetings of the CAC are open to the general public and that interested individuals are invited to attend and offer comments and suggestions.

The CAC is in the preliminary stages of gathering information about the proposed multi-million dollar concourse from city officials and Quincy 2000, proponents of the project.

The purpose of the roadway is to improve access to downtown including parking facilities, enhance pedestrian circulation, reduce traffic congestion, improve use of existing roadways, and reduce noise and pollution.

CAC is composed of representatives of downtown business establishments and concerned citizens. The CAC's only concern is Phase One of the project, the concourse linking Burgin Parkway to downtown Hancock St., called the West Side Link.

The City of Quincy is seeking to fund the project through the Massachusetts Highway Department. The estimated cost of construction is $5.9 million. In general, design cost would be funded using local funds, private sources and available public grants and programs.

A Lifelong Vision Comes True For Gerard Martocchio

Perseverance Pays Off For Eatery Owner

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

Fifteen years of hard work and perseverance in the restaurant business finally paid off for Gerard Martocchio last month when he opened his Quincy-based eatery.

Gennaro's Eatery, 12 Blanchard Rd., is the product of Martocchio's lifelong vision and determination.

"I have always wanted to open a eat-in restaurant but I couldn't afford it and now I'm getting my chance," Martocchio, 35, said.

Because of his profound influence on his life, Martocchio named the eatery after his father.

. "Gennaro is my father's name and not only was he a good cook but also taught me a lot about other things besides cooking," he said.

After owning two take-out restaurants in his hometown, Martocchio decided he wanted to own a dine-in restaurant.

"I decided, why not go for it and open my own restaurant. It seemed like a challenge," he said. "Long hours, long hours, long hours--that is the hardest part of this business," Martocchio said.

A challenge may be an understatement. Since he is the only chef, Martocchio must always be at the restaurant as well as come in early to get ready for the day at 4 a.m. and he doesn't leave until after 9 p.m. on Thursdays and Fridays.

All of Martocchio's work is not without its lighter moments, however. In his 15 years of cooking and restaurant ownership, Martocchio has experienced many strange incidents but one occurrence in particular stands out in his memory.

"One night after a busy day we had to cook 100 sheets of pizza for the Museum of Science in Boston," he said. "I had worked on the dough all night and I left it on a bench and, of course, we lost power that night. When we finally restored power later that night, we couldn't find the dough anywhere. It turns out the dough had resined and it had actually gone down the stairs.

"It wasn't funny at the time, but we laughed about it later."

Another more significant event which Martocchio remembered was the time he met the future Mrs. Martocchio at one of his other restaurants.

"She used to come by a lot so I figured I would ask her out, and we married six years ago," he said.

Martocchio said his wife, Jane, plays an important role in the family run business .

"As the co-owner of the restaurant, Jane helps with the paperwork as well as having a full-time job at a different company," he said.

As the only cook at Gennaro's Eatery, Martocchio cooks all the food by himself and cooks his soups and bakes his pastries from scratch.

"I enjoy cooking all my own food and adding my own personal touch to my food," he said.

The dim light of the chandeliers cascades on the white restaurant walls offering a calm atmosphere for its patrons. Offering smoking and non-smoking section, the eatery allows the customers an open view of the brick oven where much of the food is prepared.

A homey, family-oriented atmosphere is what Martocchio strives for at his restaurant.

"I want to have a place where a family can come and enjoy a reasonably priced meal," he said.

Gennaro's Eatery, 773-1500, is open Monday through Wednesday from 6 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Thursday and Friday from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday from 6 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

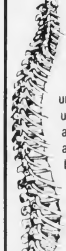
SPINAL COLUMN

By Dr. Barry Freedman, MS, D.C.

Case Study



An 11 year old child was having severe headaches. Initially, his parents sought treatment from the family pediatrician, but were soon referred to a pediatric neurologist. For over two weeks the family searched for relief within the traditional medical system. Viral causes were dismissed, and sinus x-rays proved unclear. Pain medication offered short-term comfort, but had undesirable side effects of drowsiness and sluggishness. Eventually, the neurologist hospitalized the boy for further tests including a spinal tap, CAT scan, and EEG. All tests were inconclusive. The boy was sent home with a stronger medication. Having gained no acceptable outcome with standard medical care, and with the child's headaches still severe, the parents sought help from a local chiropractor. Conversations with the child revealed a collision in a soccer game three weeks prior. The chiropractic exam found soft tissue problems and severe muscle contraction, which had not been discovered medically. WITHIN THIRTY MINUTES OF THE FIRST CHIROPRACTIC TREATMENT, THE CHILD'S HEADACHES STARTED TO EBB. After three more sessions, the child was in no more pain. Follow-up treatment consisted only of occasional check-ups.

As a Valentine Special, Dr. Freedman is offering a FREE Spinal Exam and $5.00 Off the purchase of a Cervical Pillow or Back Cushion until February 14, 1995.

CHIROPRACTIC WORKS-NO DRUGS-NO SURGERY. Dr. Barry Freedman has been the Director of FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC for the past 15 years, with offices at 112 McGrath Highway, Quincy Center. Text Of Mayor James Sheets' Third Mid-Term Address

(The following is the text of Mayor James Sheets' third mid-term address delivered Monday, Jan. 9 at City Hall.)

Louisa May Alcott said: "Far away there in the sunshine are my highest aspirations. I may not reach them, but I can look up and see their beauty, believe in them, and try to follow where they lead"

Far away - there in the sunshine - are our highest aspirations as a city. We have not reached all of them, but we have looked up and seen their beauty, we have believed in them and this year — followed where they led.

Our pathway has led through a city where families live in greater peace, where children are learning with ever greater excellence, where parks are cleaner and happier places to go, where jobs are becoming more available and, where people sense a new spirit.

It began with First Night drawing 20,000 people despite the cold. On May 29, 1994, eight to ten thousand people watched in silence as over 300 Civil War re-enactors assisted in the burial of an unknown Civil War soldier killed at the Battle of Petersburg in Virginia. The entire nation watched for over 7 minutes as Quincy added a new chapter to the meaning of Memorial Day, 1994.

Two weeks later, The Patriot Ledger would headline Flag Day ceremonies by writing "Family centered celebration draws 10,000 as a city honors Karen Cashman, Quincy's Bronze Medal Olympian".

On Sept. 9, 1994, 450 people would gather for the dedication of the Walk of Names in front of City Hall. Reverently, people looked for the names of loved ones - inscribed for time in the bricks of Historic Constitutions Commons.

The unveiling of the Granite Workers statute enshrined forever in the hearts of Quincy's citizens the great blue-collar muscle and steel which helped build this city and nation when dedicated on Oct. 10.

And then, on a warm fall Sunday afternoon, a great and majestic war ship came home to the waters of its birth. The USS Salem, symbolic of an armada of gallant warships built in Quincy, with 600 passengers aboard for its last voyage, was greeted by a crowd of 50,000 - sometimes silent, sometimes cheering, sometimes crying.

And, as if in tribute to this year of pageantry, 250,000 happy, smiling, men, women and children, lined Hancock St. to watch a Christmas parade with 17 floats, 18 bands, 22 specialty units and 14 color guards. Its theme, "The Joys of Christmas".

But, our hearts were deeply saddened during the year by the death of our colleague, Patricia Toland, "A lady always - a model person in life and politics".

Our hearts were filled with thankfulness, however, when another of our colleagues, "Pops" DeCristofaro miraculously survived a heart attack and stroke allowing us to honor the one called "A Quincy Point legend" by naming the Washington St./ Southern Artery Park after him.

Let us review the year 1994.

First

1994 was a year of economic stability and growth.

In spite of a $1.1 million snow and ice deficit, we were able to announce a budget on May 3, 1994 that would call for no new taxes. That promise was kept in December by the Mayor and City Council when the tax rate was established. In July, we ended the 1994 fiscal year with a balanced budget and were also able to announce that the sewer rate would not increase during the fiscal year.

The development agenda for the City of Quincy switched into high gear in 1994. It totaled $49,115,000 for 41 projects, which were either completed in 1994, brought under construction, or into the design phased. $6,503,000 of this in project work was completed in 1994, with 65% of that total being school construction. We have been able to match $29,625,000 city dollars with $17,116,000 state and federal dollars. $324,000 of the city dollars were raised from the private sector. Even with this extensive public development a-genda, we are still below our 1990 annual debt service budget by $944,000.

These projects include, among others:

•$4 million state grant for Wollaston Beach.

•$600,000 in city money for sidewalk reconstruction in the neighborhoods.

•$1.8 million in seawall reconstruction. This includes 3,510 feet of seawall reconstruction and 2,550 feet of new seawalls. Phase one has been completed and phases 2,3 and 4 are near completion.

Second

In 1994, our educational agenda has moved forward.

•1994 witnessed a second Quincy school in the past five years receiving National Blue Ribbon status. Snug Harbor Community School was the only elementary school in Massachusetts and only one in 276 in the country to achieve such distinction; Congratulations!

•On March 3, the new Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center opened and was dedicated on Oct. 17, 1994.

•On Sept. 25, the Bernazzani Elementary School addition was dedicated.

•The Quincy High School auditorium restoration program was begun at a cost of $536,000.

•With the passage of the bond issue on July 21, funding was provided for the expansion and opening of the Beechwood Elementary School and the expansion of the Parker Elementary School.

•In October, we were pleased that the new high school drop out statistics showed the Quincy rate at 1.7% down from 2.6% during the 1991-1992 year.

•In March, the city council passed the new Governance Home Rule Petition; on July 6, Gov. William Weld signed the college bill into law; and on Sept. 1 the new board began its duties. I am convinced that when the dust settles, the college will be stronger and better prepared to enter the 21st Century.

•During the week of Oct. 18, Eastern Nazarene College celebrated the 75th anniversary of its being located in Quincy.

Third

1994: The Thomas Crane Library began planning for the future.

•1994 marked the resumption of the Bookmobile at the Thomas Crane Library.

•In June, the Library's purchase of land on Washington St. was announced, and, on Dec. 28, the design contract was awarded for a $9 million expansion.

•Also at the Thomas Crane Library, new sidewalks costing $170,000 were installed and in December, an appropriation was passed by the City Council to retrofit the front doors, making them accessible for the handicapped.

Fourth

In 1994, Quincy 2000 began writing its own unique history.

•In February, Quincy 2000 announced the beginning of its first incubator program, a program of growing new businesses. On Dec. 24, The Patriot Ledger headlined a story, "Hatching New Businesses", which told of several success stories coming out of this new program.

•In September, 10 banks created a loan pool of $4 million for small businesses. Since that time, 3 additional banks have joined.

•On Dec. 8, it was announced that Quincy 2000 had hired a tourism consultant, full-time, absolutely essential if tourism is to be successfully promoted.

•Quincy 2000 was the driving force in forging an agreement with DeCelles to open a 40,000 square foot clothing store on Hancock St. in early March, 1995.

•Quincy 2000 was also the driving force in attracting Pilgrim Health Care to locate their main office in the Aetna Building of Crown Colony, bringing with it 1,000 employees. In September, Pilgrim announced its plans to purchase an additional 15 acres at Crown Colony for expansion.

•Quincy has been designated an economic target area by the state because of the efforts of Quincy 2000, making projects in the city eligible for tax incentives and low interest loans.

Fifth

In 1994, although visitations to the National Adams Historic Site were off 5% from the over 50% increase of 1993, there still has been substantial progress in the area of tourism.

•In March, the Southern Cross was berthed at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum site at the Fore River Shipyard, providing at revenue stream that resulted in the Bank of Boston announcing in August that it had approved a $1.1 million loan to bring the USS Salem home and open it as a floating museum.

•On April 21, the National Park Service announced that Adams Academy had been granted National Historic Landmark status, and on Oct. 20, at a Quincy Historical Society open house, the plaque was unveiled by Charles Francis Adams.

•On Oct. 30, the USS Salem did come home to become a museum tribute to Quincy's 300 years of maritime history. The Salem should be open for visitors in May of this year.

•In November, an additional $230,000 federal dollars was appropriated by Congress for the Adams National Historic site.

•In August, in Halifax, Nova Scotia, I joined with 18 other mayors from Southeastern Massachusetts and the Atlantic Canadian Association in signing an agreement promoting tourism between Southeastern Massachusetts cities and towns of Eastern Canada.

•On Dec. 20, the long awaited Congressional/National Park study of Quincy's Heritage was made public. This action plan defines Quincy's historical past in terms of presidents, ships and granite. It calls for a "Quincy Compact" to be forged, tieing all of Quincy's Historical sites together, for a thematic presentation to American and hundreds of thousands of tourists.

•The Congressional/National Park study of the Boston Harbor Islands is being finalized and will create a port-of-entry in Quincy, further expanding tourism opportunities.

Sixth

In 1994, retail, commercial and industrial development expanded.

First, let us look at commercial and industrial development.

•Although Procter & Gamble announced on Dec. 11, 1993 it was closing its Fore River plant, on Dec. 15, 1994, the plant was reopened as the Twin River Technology Corporation.

•In February, the Regency Cruiseline Corporation indicated an interest in building ships at Fore River. In August, a labor agreement was reached. In October, a draft lease was agreed on between Regency and the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority and, presently, the firm is preparing application for $230 million in federal loan guarantees.

•Also in March, Reebok announced it was going to lease 500,000 square feet of the Jordan March warehouse.

•In September, Peter O'Connell announced the purchase and renovation of what was The Quincy Bay Inn and is now The Adams Inn.

•Also in September, Rev. Frank Bauer received word his church had received a grant of $5.9 million dollars to build another senior facility, Parkside East.

In the Area of Retail:

•As of Jan. 1, 1994, Colman's Sporting Goods closed and announced on Jan. 17, that a Blockbuster Video Store would replace it. The new store is now open and operational.

•On Jan. 20, Grossman's announced a new 60,000 retail center would replace the former lumber site. On Nov. 17, the new plaza opened its doors for T.J. Maxx, to be followed by Kinko Copies, Papa Gino's, Big Party and Boston Chicken.

•In September, the City Council approved the construction of Wal-Mart at Granite Crossing and in December, it was announced that a Roche Brothers Supermarket would also be coming to Quincy and share the Wal-Mart site.

•In September, DeCelles announced an agreement to open a 40,000 square foot clothing store in downtown Quincy during February or March of 1995.

•In December, the City Council approved construction of a Super Stop & Shop at the former pneumatic scale site.

Seventh

In 1994, we continued to strengthen Quincy's families and communities.

•The Family Commission, designed to strengthen Quincy's families, was created. The Commission and the Family Council have been appointed and will swing into operation this year, helping to provide for the needs of our families.

•In 1994, Quincy was a safer place. The Patriot Ledger reported that crime in general was down 21.3% in Quincy during 1993, and as recently as last Wednesday, headlines in the newspaper read "Quincy Crime Rate at 20-Year Low".

•Seven new police officers and 18 new firefighters were sworn in during March.

•In May, we added three police dogs and five new motorcycle officers to our special operations unit.

•In October, the Quincy Gun Buyback Program brought in 279 guns.

•In December, the United States Department of Justice announced that Quincy would receive "Cops" money to hire five new police officers. This will allow for the expansion in the drug unit.

•In 1994, the success of Quincy's war on drugs was symbolized by Impact Quincy receiving the Drug Fighter Award.

•Quincy's parks received a much needed lift with the passage of a $2.6 million bond issue. Signs of improvement can already be seen.

•On Dec. 22, a lease was signed with the Quarry Hill Associates to create an 18-hole golf course, driving range, 2 soccer fields, 3 little league fields, and a natural ice skating rink partially on top of a landfill and at not cost to the city.

•In cooperation with the city council and the Department of Public Works, new equipment has been secured and new plans drawn for our battle against snow and litter. This includes a snow shoveling service for seniors.

•In October, the after school evening recreational program was begun, with two schools open each night, four nights a week.

•The spirit of our communities was demonstrated by 1,500-2,000 volunteers who joined to make Quincy cleaner and greener on May 9, and also by those who invested 2,000 hours of work to ensure a successful Serv-a-Thon on Sept. 24. Volunteerism remains high at Quincy Hospital where this year, the hospital won the Horizon Mental Health Management Clinical Program of the year award and also received the Blue Ribbon Award for innovative programs.

Yes, The Quincy Sun is correct, 1994 was a year of constant progress. It was made possible because the City Council, School Committee, legislative delegation, department heads, employees and the citizens worked together. There can be no greater team than this.

In 1995, exciting challenges remain. We will certainly maintain our financial stability. However, if we are to take the financial pressure off the home owner and business man, we must expand our economic base to control the property tax. We must also continue our battle against higher sewer rates.

We must continue to expand our infrastructure to provide the base for economic growth and development as we enter the 21st century. The Quincy Center Concourse is on target and state funding promised. We have seen a model of the commuter rail station and have a cost estimate. I am confident it will be built. We must also bring Quincy into the technological world of the 21st century. It is my intention to appoint a technology task force to accomplish this in the area of computerization and communication.

If tourism is to progress as we plan in 1995, we must do the following three things. First, we must build a hotel in downtown Quincy to compliment the new Adams Inn. Second, we must secure full funding for the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum. Third, we must establish the "Quincy Compact", an organization to coordinate and promote each of our historic locations.

The Hancock lot remains to be developed and we must further expand the retail base in downtown Quincy. I am convinced Quincy 2000 will be successful in these endeavors.

Perhaps our greatest challenge is to recover and restore Wollaston Beach. Unless we can control the storm drain pollution of our beaches, the "Water is polluted, no swimming" signs will be on Wollaston Beach for generations to come. We have already begun the difficult task of restoration. In the next 12 months we must design a complete strategy to deal with this issue.

Why must we work so hard? Why must we do so much? We must, because the spirit of Quincy demands no less of us.

The words of John Adams speak to us over the centuries: Writing from Paris to Abigail in 1778, John Adams said he "would cheerfully exchange, all the elegance, magnificance and sublimity of Europe, for the simplicity of Braintree and Weymouth" or what is today Quincy.

Four years later he wrote Abigail from the Hague these words "I know not the reason but there is some strange attraction between the North parish in Braintree (Quincy) and my heart. It is a remarkable spot".

Why do we work so hard? Why do we do so much? We too, must preserve this "remarkable spot."

"I wouldn't rule it out," he said. "I just don't think you close the door on something like that."

Sheets is currently unopposed in his run for a fourth term. The two names that most often come up as potential mayoral candidates are City Council President Michael Cheney and Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill.

Cheney, however, has said he will never run against Sheets. Cahill has stated he will announce his plans for this fall in the near future.

If Sheets were to be elected to a fifth term, he would be the longest-serving mayor under the city's current Plan A form of government.

Citing The Quincy Sun's description of 1994 as a "year of progress," Sheets said during his mid-term address the city hopes to continue its forward motion this year.

Sheets' speech contained no major surprises, as he outlined Quincy's major achievements of last year and briefly summarized his future goals. The mayor referred to The Sun's year-in-review issue two weeks ago when recalling the highlights of 1994.

"Yes, The Quincy Sun is correct; 1994 was a year of constant progress," said Sheets. "It was made possible because the City Council, School Committee, Legislative delegation, department heads, employees and the citizens worked together. There can be no greater team than this.

"Our pathway has led through a city where families live in greater peace, where children are learning with ever greater excellence, where parks are cleaner and happier places to go, where jobs are becoming more available, and where people sense a new spirit."

Sheets stressed, however, that there are still "exciting challenges" that face the city this year. The mayor listed the following among the goals he hopes to accomplish in 1995:

•Building on last year's successes in the area of tourism by bringing a hotel to the city, securing funding for the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum, and establishing a "Quincy Compact" to link the city's historic sites. Sheets told The Sun last week bringing a hotel to Quincy Center is his "number one priority for 1995."

•Continuing plans for construction of the Quincy Center Concourse as well as a commuter rail station in the downtown. While the state will build the two projects, the city has a hand in the planning of both.

•Recovering and restoring Wollaston Beach to a state that is constantly safe and clean, a task Sheets called "perhaps our greatest challenge."

•Expanding the city's economic base to control property taxes and continuing its battle against higher sewer rates.

•Strengthening the city's infrastructure to provide the base for economic growth.

•Appointing a Technology Task Force to bring the city into the 21st century in the areas of computerization and communication.

Looking back at 1994, Sheets noted that the city's development agenda "switched into high gear" last year, with over $49 million spent on 41 projects that were either completed or brought under construction or into design phase.

*A Tip Sheet For Parents

Protecting Kids From Gangs

Children join gangs and commit vandalism or violent acts due to a need to belong to someone or something. Children who join gangs are as young as 14, sometimes younger.

Gang membership, especially among hard-care members, is strongly tied to drug use, sexual activity, violence and crime. It's a difficult cycle to break.

Parents can protect their children from a gang's influence by:

•Spending time with each of your children to help convince them that they are an important part of the family.

•Supervise your children's activities. Make sure a reliable adult is present at all functions.

•Help your children get involved in athletics or other group activities that interest them so they can feel they belong.

•Talk with your children about your values. Let them know why you think gangs are dangerous. You can mention the following:

*constant threat of violence, either to gang members or to innocent bystanders *hatred of other groups for no reason *drug use, which leads to its own problems *increased chance of being arrested

•Teach you children what to do if gang members approach them. The best response is to walk away. Warn children not to respond with the same gesture--the gang members may be "false flagging," using the sing of a rival gang. The response couid be a violent one.

•It's possible, if there is gang activity in your area, that your children may become involved. Often parents don't recognize their children's gang activity until it is too late, such as when the children are hard-core members. How can you tell if you children are involved?

*Be on the look out for signs of possible gang involvement: change in a child's type of friends, changes in dress habits, such as wearing the same color combination all the time or purchasing a gang sweater or jacket, secretiveness about activities, new found affluence from unknown sources, changes in behavior and diminishing interested in the family and school.

*An even more reliable, but often ignored, sign of gang activity is if a child is arrested or detained by police.

•If you notice these patterns, you can get help. Contact the gang crimes unit of your police department. In Quincy you can contact the Community Services Unit. They will be able to help you find counseling and tell you how to help your children.

Presidents Can't Hold On Against Boston Latin

By KERRY BYRNE

The good news for the Quincy High School hockey team was that they managed a 4-4 tie Monday afternoon with a Boston Latin team that had them hemmed in their own zone for much of the contest and that had beaten them earlier in the season.

The bad news was that the Presidents (2-4-1) held a 4-0 lead in the second period but were unable to hang on in a game played at Quincy Youth Arena. Latin (6-3-2) ripped them for three goals in the third period. The equalizer came with just 45 seconds left after Boston Latin had pulled their goaltender.

Quincy's next home game is Wednesday, Jan. 18 against North Quincy at 6:40 p.m.

Quincy coach Bob Sylvia refused to point to youth and inexperience as reasons why his team was unable to hang on. "This wasn't a good game for us. We didn't get any more than we deserve. We were lucky to get out of there with a tie."

The coach seemed more disappointed with the team's effort than with the outcome. "We just got to work harder. If they played tough like they did against Falmouth (an 8-0 loss to the strong Clippers) it may have been different. You can make certain excuses for being young, but [Latin] had no size advantage. I'm sure they had some freshmen skating for them, too."

The Presidents appeared to have a lock on the contest when Chris McArdle netted his second and third goals of the game just two minutes apart in the middle period. His third, on a power play at the 12:58 mark, was a tip-in of a shot fired by freshman defender Steve Verlicco that McArdle pulled out of the air, causing it to bounce off the ice and over the goalies outstretched pads. Senior forward Steve Barrett was credited with assists on all three McArdle goals.

McArdle scored the first goal 59 seconds into the opening period thanks to some nifty stick work by Matt McSweeney and Barrett. Sophomore Matt Messing scored at the 5:22 mark of the first period. Matt Langille and Scott Shepherd assisted.

Boston Latin got on the board at the 13:51 mark of the second when senior captain Conal Barbuto beat goalie Mark Smith during a 2-on-1 break.

Smith was superb for the Presidents as he stopped over 30 shots. On several occasions he robbed Latin players of goals with sprawling saves as they pressed hard in the Quincy zone.

"Mark Smith was incredible," said Sylvia. "He played a great game. Boston Latin is the team that should be frustrated. They outshot us the entire game."

Latin forwards Jamie Cahill and Mike Breen scored 23 seconds apart early in the final period, setting up Mike Damelio's equalizer.

McArdle's hat trick was his third of the season. He is now among the leading goal scorers in the Old Colony League.

JILL PICARDI (No. 32) follows through on her pass to teammate Sara Stanton. Picardi played a solid game in North Quincy's win over Taunton.

SARA STANTON looks determined as she tries to work her way past a Taunton defender and into the paint. Stanton has been North Quincy's go-to girl down low this season.

Stanton, Raiders Topple Taunton

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

It wasn't a record-setting night, but North Quincy junior forward Sara Stanton did all she could to help her basketball team earn its third victory of the season, a 57-48 win over Taunton Friday night.

The Red Raiders (3-4) travel to powerful Bridgewater-Raynham Friday and return home next Wednesday (Jan. 18) for a date with cross-town rival Quincy.

It was a busy night for the Raider scoring machine. After a 33-point performance, Stanton is averaging 26.3 points per game. At this pace she will destroy Nancy Fluke's single-season point total of 403 set it 1987-88.

"This [Taunton] is her favorite team to play against," said North Quincy head coach Ken Panaro. "She also played great defensively and passed the ball very well."

Several Raiders played well as they overcame two first-half deficits. Others who contributed to the victory were Kristen Proude with six points, Kerry Ginty with five and Dawn Kohler with four. Amy Riley, Liz Fitzpatrick, Kim Healy, Kelly Keegan, Erica Crawford and Jill Picardi also played well.

In their finest defensive effort of the season, the Red Raiders overall play improved as the game went along. This included the stellar teamwork against Tiger senior forward Amilna Siryon. Siryon, one of the leading scorers in the Old Colony League, scored 17 points, all in the first half, and was unable to do anything in the second half. She fouled out with six minutes left.

North Quincy spotted Taunton the lead early, but baskets by Stanton and Proude kept it close. The Raiders held a 10-8 lead with 9:30 left following a three-point play by Stanton. A 7-0 run gave North a 26-23 lead with three minutes left in the half a lead they kept for good. Behind Stanton's 19 points, the Raiders took a 31-25 lead into the break.

With the help of Proude, Riley and Ginty, North stretched the lead to 10 points midway through the second half.

Stanton fouled out of the game with 3:09 left to go, but it did not hurt the Raiders' effort. Lead by Ginty, North kept the big lead.

"I told the girls that there are five players on the court," said head coach Ken Panaro, commenting on the last three minutes of the game. "You can't rely on one girl. Everyone has to step up and do their job."

The North girls have improved steadily throughout the season. Tournament play is possible if they continue to do so.

Stanton also collected four rebounds, two steals and a block.

Junior Raiders Win Opener, 49-41

The North Quincy Junior Red Raiders basketball team opened their season in the MBA under-12 league with a 49-41 win over the Harbor Point Knights of Boston.

The Raiders never trailed after Pat Bregoli opened the scoring with a driving layup.

Phil McGillicuddy and Sean Paylor helped North open up and maintain a six-point advantage with several key buckets.

Peter Turowski and Mike Haines came off the bench early in the second quarter and provided instant offense for the junior Raiders.

The Knights cut the lead in the third quarter but Joe Sudak came alive for North Quincy with a number hoops from both inside and outside.

Dan Duggan and Bregoli did a superb job of handling the ball as Harbor Point applied full-court pressure.

Eric Stanton, Turowski and Paylor did an outstanding job clearing the glass against the taller Knight forwards.

Sudak led all scorers with 18 points. He was followed by Paylor (14), McGillicuddy (eight) and Turowski (five).

NQ Frosh Girls Undefeated In OCL

The North Quincy High School freshmen girls' basketball team remained undefeated (3-0) in Old Colony League play with a 47-38 win over Taunton.

The game was highlighted by Laurie Flynn netting her 100th point of the young season (eight games). The was again excellent defensive work by Jocelyn West while Amie Groleau showed her superb shooting touch.

The young Red Raiders (5-2) stumbled for just the second time this season with a 32-29 loss to Fontbonne.

In the game's final two minutes, 30 seconds, Fontbonne, powered by Quincy residents Leela Shankar and Barbara Ryan, stole the ball and held on for the three-point win.

Sharon Lee and Frankie Lorenzano played well for the Red Raiders.

RESPONDING TO SQUEALS

Squealing brakes may be an indication that the brake lining has worn to the point where metal is rubbing against metal. This unnerving noise or grinding sound will probably be accompanied by loss of braking power. Either sound signals the need for immediate replacement of the shoes (drum brakes) or pads (disc brakes). In addition, the drum or rotor will probably need either to be machine-smoothed or replaced. In some cases, a high-pitched squeal signals more of a warning than a near crisis. That is because many manufacturers outfit their brake pads with metal tabs that emit a high-pitched squeal when the pads need replacing. Either way, drivers should listen for, and be responsive to, braking squeals.

HINT: Sometimes, healthy brakes squeal and can be remedied with the application of an anti-squeal compound.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Thirteen-year-old Chris Bregoli recently took part in a two-week exhibition tour of Hawaii and Australia with USA Baseball. His father, Paul, wrote a letter to the Sun thanking those who made the once-in-a-lifetime trip possible. Here is the text of that letter:

"Both Chris and myself would like thank the many area residents and businessmen who helped with their financial support and words of encouragement. Because of this outpouring of support, Chris was able to participate in an experience of a lifetime, representing the United States in their series against the Australian National baseball team and other teams from Sydney and Melbourne.

"Chris and I would especially like to thank Paul Harold, Terry Bellotti-Welch and Stephen and Kathy Hall for their help above and beyond the call.

"This was an experience Chris will cherish for a lifetime, and, although he enjoyed himself totally, he is glad to be back in Quincy.

"Again, a heartfelt thank you to all of you who made this trip possible.

"Sincerely, Chris and Paul Bregoli"

Chris certainly seems to have a bright athletic career ahead of him. Last summer he batted over .400 as a third baseman on the Babe Ruth League champion Elks team. This past fall he led the North Quincy Apaches to the Quincy Youth Football League championship for the second year in a row as their quarterback. His punt return for a touchdown in the championship game against the Houghs Neck Manets turned the tide of the game.

The junior co-captain was the unanimous selection for Little East Rookie of the Year in 1992-93.

Tim Byrne, a 6-foot-5-inch, 200-pounder, is in his second season as a forward on the UMass-Boston men's basketball team.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that if we love love, if we love friendliness, if we love helpfulness, if we love beauty, if we love health, if we love to create joy, if we love usefulness and are not self-seekers, the spirit which expresses itself in love and helpfulness and beauty will enter into us and abide there . . . We become what we love . . .

The late Pearl Buck, Nobel and Pulitzer prize winner, in reflecting on what her over 80 years had convinced her about life, said: "I consider the greatest talent, or capacity, or natural gift which has been given me is my inclination toward love rather than hate, or even dislike, in my relations with my fellow human beings. This natural gift keeps me from hating anyone. The most I can do in this area is to put them out of my mind and life. I forget them. In doing so, I am free from the corrosive effects of enmity and hatred. I attribute my excellent health to this capacity. It enables me to live in good spirits and thus in an atmosphere conducive to creative work and enjoyment of life."

Citizens Bank Completes Quincy Savings Acquisition

The acqusition of Quincy Savings Bank by Citizens Bank was completed Friday for $141.1 million or $25.75 a share.

Although the transaction was announced June 13, customers will see no changes until later this year

Quincy Savings Bank has 14 branch offices on the South Shore. John J. O'Connor, III is president of Citizens Bank South Shore and southeastern Massachusetts region, based in Quincy.

According to Ernie Corrigan, vice president of Citizens Bank and Director of External Affairs, the bank hopes to "bring more competivie rates to the city" including attaining a mortgage for people who can't "afford a standard down payment". He said "our presence in this market has really expanded the availability and affordability of mortgage and consumer loans."

He also cited the rate on CD's a percentage higher than normal bank rates.

According to. Corrigan, there have been approximately 39 persons who were given a five week notice of their job termination .back in November. He said top management knew about the change in June and that their jobs would be terminated.

The people who lost their jobs received two weeks salary and severance packages.. Corrigan said. Also, health benefits will continue concurrent with their severance pay. After that, he said, COBRA a federal statute, will kick in for an additional 18 months. Persons will be able to receive benefits at a group rate.

He said it isn't known if any more employees will be notified until they see "what the Quincy franchise looks like".

He said some of the branches "overlap" each other and are actually across the street from one another. He cited branches in Hingham which fall into this category and how one of these will close.

He said a mini-job fair was held Monday at President's Place, Quincy Center, and several former employees attended. .

Corrigan said he was "very sensitive to any job loss" and said the bank is in the hope of "placing everyone in a position"

Sheets said over $6.5 million of the project work was completed last year, with over 65 percent of that being school construction. He added that the 41 projects were funded by $17,116,000 in state and federal monies as well as $29,625,000 in city funds, $324,000 of which was raised by the private sector.

"Even with this extensive public development agenda, we are still below our 1990 annual debt service budget by $944,000," he said.

The mayor keyed in on several areas that saw growth and development in 1994:

•Economy. Sheets sent a budget to the City Council that called for only a one cent raise in residential property taxes and no increase in commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP) taxes.

•Education. Sheets cited the opening of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center and the dedication of an addition to the Bernazzani School, other school renovations and additions, the fact that the city's high school drop out rate is down to 1.7 percent (compared to 2.6 percent in 1991-92) and the passage of a home-rule petition to establish a new independent board of governors at Quincy College.

•The Thomas Crane Public Library. Among the library's achievements were the reinstitution of the Bookmobile, renovations to the library's walkways, securing of an appropriation to replace the building's front door, and its recent awarding of a design contract for its planned $9 million expansion.

•Quincy 2000. The city's public-private planning corporation created an incubator program for new businesses and a loan pool for small companies, hired a full-time tourism consultant, helped bring Pilgrim Health Care to West Quincy, helped form an agreement to bring Decelle to Quincy Center in the near future, and was a primary reason the state declared, Quincy an Economic Target Area (ETA), which will make the city eligible for tax incentives and low-interest loans.

•Tourism. The U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum opened at the Fore River shipyard and welcomed the U.S.S. Salem and U.S.S. Southern Cross, Adams Academy was granted National Historic Landmark status, Adams National Historic Site received a $230,000 state grant, Sheets and 18 other southeastern Massachusetts mayors formed a tourism promotion agreement with the Atlantic Canadian Conference, a study of the Boston Harbor Islands, which calls for creation of a port-of-entry in Quincy, was finalized; and the National Park Service released results of its three-year study of the city's historic sites calling for creation of the "Quincy Compact" to link the sites.

•Strengthening of the city's families and communities. Sheets cited a number of examples, including the establishment of his Commission on the Family, additions in manpower and other areas to the police and fire departments, new equipment for the department of public works, improvements to the city's parks made possible through his bond issue passed by the City Council, establishment of an after-school recreation program, several community volunteer events, and Impact Quincy's receiving the Drug Fighter Award, which the mayor said symbolizes "the success of Quincy's war on drugs."

The mayor mentioned a number of other celebrations and events that brought the community together, but also took time to mention the passing of Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland, who died of cancer, and express gratitude that Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro recovered from a heart attack and a stroke he suffered.

Sheets summarized by saying that the goals that have been set for the future are goals that must be achieved.

"The spirit of Quincy demands no less of us," he said.

School Dept. To Receive Rental Money From Quincy College

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Representatives Michael Bellotti, A. Stephen Tobin and Ronald Mariano announce that Governor Weld has signed into law Senate Bill 1674, an act establishing an income account for the Quincy School Department.

The legislation establishes a special account for the School Department into which money received from Quincy College for the rental of School Department buildings will be deposited for use by the school system. The money will be used to fund foreign language programs for grades six, seven and eight, technical and computer education programs and athletic programs for grades six, seven and eight.

"This legislation allows the School Committee to use money derived from the use of their facilities to fund programs, particularly programs in the middle schools, which have suffered budget cuts in recent years," Morrissey said.

"These programs are important for the children of Quincy to ensure that they get a well-rounded education in foreign languages, computer technologies and sports." Bellotti said.

"I am pleased to have been able to assist in the passage of this important legislation." Tobin said, "Protecting the education of our children is the greatest work we as legislatures can do."

Mariano praised Mayor James Sheet and the City Council for supporting the legislation.

"As a member of the School Committee, I am glad to see that monies paid for the use of school facilities will be used for educational purposes rather than see it drained off for other purposes." He added, "This innovative creation of a revenue stream will guarantee that the three programs the School Committee identified as priorities will receive funding."

OUR $1,000,000 GUARANTEE

You have had traffic congestion on Hancock Street between Beale Street and East/West Squantum Streets for as many years as you can probably remember. Now we come along and propose to build a new Shaw's Supermarket on the old Boston Gear factory site.

Because we understand the traffic problems and concerns, we will spend nearly $1.3 million on off-site traffic and parking improvements.

But why should you believe us when we tell you that our plan will work?

We guarantee that the city will be satisfied with the results when all the proposed traffic improvements are completed.

In his letter of August 11, 1994, the city's Traffic Engineer, John T. Gillon, P.E., stated "With the implementation of proposed improvements, application of the computer programs and installation of computer hardware administered by the City of Quincy, I feel the traffic conditions along Hancock Street will improve markedly and result in less congested, safer, and more orderly traffic movement within the area of the proposed traffic signal system."

Shaw's goes even further. We take full responsibility for the traffic improvement plan.

We guarantee it!

To prove our commitment, Shaw's Supermarkets, Inc. will voluntarily post a $1 million bond. If the city is not satisfied with the improvements, the bond can be used to make any additional changes.

For Outstanding Community Service

Fr. William McCarthy Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Fr. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John's Church and Quincy's beloved "Father Bill", is The Quincy Sun's "Citizen of the Year" for 1994.

Fr. McCarthy was selected for his many years of dedication to helping poor, the hungry, the homeless and all in any other needs regardless of race or religion.

He was selected for the honor from among 37 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. The choice was made by a panel of judges that considered all 37 nominees.

The 10th recipient of the annual award, Fr. McCarthy will be honored at a reception in March at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Established in 1985, the awards honors an individual for outstanding community service or special achievement in a specific year or over a period of time.

When informed of his selection, Fr. McCarthy said: "It is a great honor but I feel unworthy."

The panel, however, felt he was most deserving of the honor while noting others among the nominees were also in strong contention.

Increased Pedestrian Deaths Alarming

Safety Task Force To Target Rising Traffic Problems

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City, police and school officials are joining together to begin working on a plan to improve what they say has become an increasingly dangerous traffic situation in Quincy.

Officials cited an increase in pedestrian deaths, as well as residents' concerns about the safety of Quincy students--particularly those in the North Quincy area of the city--as the reason for the collaboration.

Mayor James Sheets said at press time he plans on talking to Police Chief Francis Mullen in the next two or three weeks about improving traffic conditions in the city.

"I consider it a major problem," he said.

Sheets noted that he feels that there are two issues that have to be dealt with in order to cut down on the number of motor vehicle accidents in Quincy: the enforcement of motor vehicle laws and improvement of pedestrian habits. He said that while it is true that some accidents are caused by motorists who ignore stop signs, street lights and other laws, others are the result of pedestrians who forget to use crosswalks and follow other procedures.

"It's an enforcement/educational issue," said the mayor.

Sheets said he may wait until Jack Gillon returns as the city's traffic engineer before he meets with Mullen. Gillon, who left Quincy last month to take a position in Boston, has announced that he is returning to his former position around the first week February.

Mullen agreed that the safety of pedestrians is an "ongoing problem" not only in Quincy but throughout the country. He said that his department has stepped up its amount of police details, or "selective enforcement" of traffic laws in recent months, adding that it is also in the midst of setting up a number of traffic safety programs that will soon be available to residents across the city.

The chief added that he looks forward to meeting with Sheets to discuss the issue.

"We're always ready to sit down and put our heads together," said Mullen. "There's always room for improvement."

School Committeeman Sean Barry is another official hoping to improve the traffic situation. Barry, chairman of the committee's Health and Public Safety Subcommittee, said he has met with Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers, School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, and officials and parents from schools in the North Quincy area to discuss what changes can be

Meeting Jan. 23 On Proposed Southern Artery Retail Project

The public is invited to attend a meeting Monday, Jan. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers regarding a proposed retail development project on the former Duane's lumber yard site on Southern Artery.

A model of the project, calling for 62,000 square feet of small retail shops on a landscaped seven and one acre lot, will be available for viewing.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson will conduct the meeting.

Kolson said the owner of the property, Stop and Shop Companies, proposes a development featuring two restaurants, a fisherman's hut for commercial fisherman, and other retail speeialty stores. Kolson said the development would comply with the new coastal public access guidelines by providing waterfront access with piers.

Kolson said Stop and Shop is ready to propose the project for City Council approval but the councillor wants the public to consider the project before it goes to the council.

Council Takes Second Look At Inspection Depts. Petition

Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition designed to reorganize Quincy's inspection departments was expected to be supported by the City Council for a second time Tuesday night.

The council, which met after The Sun's press time this week because of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, was planning to again support the legislation. The petition was unanimously passed by the council Oct. 17.

Sen. Michael Morrissey said last month the petition had received initial support in the Senate and House of Representatives. However, it was subsequently "moved to reconsideration" in the House Committee on Public Service because of "minor technical language" that had to be clarified, he added.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said Tuesday the reason the petition must be reapproved by the council is that state Rep. Byron Rushing of Dorchester, a member of the House Civil Service Committee, expressed concerns that the legislation would have a detrimental effect on Civil Service positions in the city departments impacted by the petition.

McGrath said although it was never the city's intention to harm the Civil Service positions, the language in the petition was reworded.

"We struck out all the language which would seem to imply that (the positions would be affected)," said McGrath.

Sheets has said he was happy to learn of the Legislature's initial support of the petition and that he plans to set up the structure of the reorganized departments as soon as it officially passes the House and Senate.

The mayor has also said that he would like the new system to be in place by the beginning of March so that it may be placed in the FY95 municipal budget. The new fiscal year begins July 1.

The petition is designed to streamline city government in Quincy by "creating a one-stop permitting process" for residents seeking building and other permits, according to Sheets. It calls for the creation of a new position--director of inspection services--and the elimination of the city's building inspector position.

Sheets has said the director would serve as a "coordinator" for Quincy's inspection departments, including the building, wiring and weights and measures departments, and residents seeking permits would report to that person first. The inspector would then direct the residents as to what direction to go in with their plans.

Otherwise, the departments would run fairly similarly to the way they do today, Sheets has said.

The mayor has also said that Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey will have the option of applying for the new position.

McGrath told the council Oct. 17 that because the state requires all communities to employ a person with the title "inspector of buildings," the home-rule petition was the only was to achieve the goal of the consolidation of city departments.

McGrath also said that while the new system is not designed to save the city money, it may do so in the long run. He said there should be no reason it would cost more money than the current system, adding that the City Council has final say over all city positions when it reviews and passes Quincy's municipal budget.

Sheets To Attend Mayors' Conference Jan. 24-27

Mayor James Sheets will attend the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Washington, D.C. Jan. 24-27.

Sheets, who will be accompanied by Executive Secretary Michael McFarland and Planning Director Richard Meade, said the trip will be paid for out of the city's federally-funded Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) account. It will cost about $1,000, he added.

The conference meets twice a year to discuss national and urban issues such as crime, health care, Civil Rights, the environment and more.

Open the door to a world of opportunity.

Winter 'Heat Wave' Is A Record Breaker

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The local winter "heat wave" produced four days of record temperatures and broke all area records

Quincy Meteorologist Rob Gilman said Tuesday "not only did we break records, but we have had the mildest stretch of mid-winter ever recorded in the history of New England."

He said although we are now ending the "record stretch" the January thaw hasn't ended and will continue, at least until Saturday. Friday's temperature will dip in the 40s which Gilman called "chilly".

He also noted that in Burlington, Vt. over the weekend, temperatures in the 60s were warmer than those recorded in Miami, Fla.

He said it is not unusual for a single day's temperature in Janurary to be warm, but four days of mild weather is "unprecedented."

Over the past weekend record breaking temperatures were 66 and 67 degrees. At Logan airport Saturday, the temperature soared to 66 degrees. Monday, the temperature in Quincy hit 67 degrees.

He said the warm weather has helped the consumer since there have been "no heating demands for the past four days"

He said there is a "major shift coming Saturday bringing arctic air" and maybe some flurries.

A WALK THROUGH Caddy Park was a summer-like treat Saturday for Maureen Flaherty (left) and Pauline Trenholm of Merrymount and for Roxie, a four-year-old Labrador Retriever.

TALL TASK--Julia White, 22 months, of West Quincy, got into the "spring of things" during Saturday's record 66 degree temperature but found the basket a long, long way up.

Medicare Part B Enrollment Begins

By CAROL BOYLE

Did you decide not to take Part B of Medicare when you were the first eligible? Or did you have Part B once and then drop the coverage?

If you fit into either of these situations, you'll have a chance to sign up for Part B during the annual enrollment period that runs from Jan. 1 through March 31, 1995. This three-month period offers another opportunity to those who did not enroll when they were first eligible and those who dropped their coverage in the interim. If you enroll during the current sign-up period, your coverage will begin July 1, 1995.

If you did not enroll when you first were eligible, your Medicare Part B premium will be 10 percent higher than the basic monthly premium for each 12-month period you were eligible but not enrolled. For 1995, the basic monthly Medicare Part B premium is $46.10. There are special premium rules and enrollment periods (generally with no penalty for delayed enrollment) for workers age 65 or older and for people under age 65 with disabilities who have group health coverage based on their own or their spouse's current employment. Part B coverage, also called "medical insurance," helps pay for doctors' services, outpatient hospital care, and other medical services.

If you're age 65 or older and not eligible for Medicare's premium-free Hospital Insurance (Part A) coverage, you can buy this coverage along with Part B coverage during the annual enrollment period. (People entitled to Medicare Hospital Insurance through the Social Security or Railroad Retirement systems or through government employment do not pay this premium.) Your monthly premium will be 10 percent higher than the basic amount if you delayed your enrollment for 12 months or more after you were first eligible to enroll. In 1995, the basic monthly premium for Part A coverage will be $261. For individuals with 30 credits or more of work covered by Social Security but not enough to qualify for benefits, the amount is reduced to $183.

If you have low income and limited assets, the state may pay some or all of your Medicare expenses, including buying Part A coverage under the Qualified Medicare Beneficiary (QMB) program. If your income is slightly above the level to qualify for the QMB program, you may qualify for state help in paying your Part B (Medical Insurance) premium under the Specified Low-Income Medicare Beneficiary (SLMB) program. Contact your state or local medical assistance (Medicaid) agency, social services office, or welfare office if you think you qualify.

Chretien Has Them Buzzing

Larry Chretien has the local political Speculation Department working overtime.

They think he is planning to vacate his Ward 3 City Council seat to make a run at-large.

CHRETIEN

What has triggered the speculation is a fund-raiser he has coming up for Tuesday, Jan. 31 (6 to 8 p.m.) at The Adams, 1 Adams St., Quincy Center. Invitations are $100 per person.

Ward councillor fund-raisers usually range from $10 to $25. The $100-per are usually for mayoral—or city council at-large—candidates.

Chretien as yet has given no public indication that he will run for a council at-large seat. Observers think he will make an official announcement at the Jan. 31 fund-raiser.

If Chretien does make the run it will put a little snap into what had all the makings of a ho-hum election year.

There apparently will be no mayoral race this year. Unless, Chretien stuns everybody by tossing his hat into that ring, but with Mayor James Sheets riding high in popularity that would be tantamount to political suicide.

For Chretien to be elected councillor at-large, one of the three incumbents will have to go.

CHENEY

LaRAIA

All three, Council President Michael Cheney, Tim Cahill and Joseph LaRaia, are due up for re-election.

Question: will all three run?

Cheney is a sure candidate. Cahill probably, too, unless he decides to challenge Sheets which is very unlikely. What about LaRaia? Well, there is a little talk that he might be in line for an appointment. But so far that's all it is—talk.

One strong potential candidate for the Ward 3 seat if Chretien vacates it is Charles McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre.

McINTYRE

McIntyre made an impressive bid for councillor-at-large in his political debut in 1993. At that time he was living in Ward 1. He's now living on Gothland St. which happens to be in Ward 3.

From a geographical standpoint, Ward 3 meanders through a good part of the city. So, an incumbent Ward 3 councillor running at-large would be campaigning in a lot of familiar territory. Likewise, it is familiar territory for a former councillor at-large candidate running in Ward 3.

FOR ANYONE THINKING of a future run for mayor, last week's Quincy Sun must have been discouraging reading. Mayor James Sheets confirmed what we have been saying all along: he's considering a fifth term in 1997.

Sheets told The Sun's Mike Whalen that the goals he has set for his administration may make it necessary to seek a fifth term.

And, he added, he may run for that fifth term even if his agenda is completed by the end of his fourth term which he is seeking this year.

Last Nov. 23, we noted here:

"Sheets looks and sounds like a man who has an agenda he wants to complete before stepping down as mayor."

That agenda, we noted, includes:

Locating a commuter rail station in Quincy Center, construction of a proposed Quincy Center Concourse, the rebirth of the Quincy Shipyard, completion of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum and revitalizing the retail district.

Well, if Sheets is acknowledging that he might run for a fifth term, there was another observation we made last November that might be even more discouraging for would-be mayors:

"All of this (Sheets' agenda) would take time. Another term or two. That would be five terms and take him to 1999. And if it goes that far, why not one more and become Quincy's first mayor of the 21st century."

That would leave a few mayor hopefuls cooling their heels.

Never a dull moment in politics.

HAROLD CROWLEY, long-time popular Quincy teacher and community activist, will be honored at a retirement "roast" Wednesday, Feb. 1, from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Social Center, Quarry St.

CROWLEY

Crowley, former president of the Quincy Education Association, was a teacher at Broad Meadows Middle School for 14 years, and before that taught at the Snug Harbor School.

And, he's still at it helping out at Broad Meadows in the Science Department as a volunteer.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD view of Wollaston shows a train passing under the Beale Street bridge on it's way to Quincy Center, The old Wollaston Depot on the left was originally on the other side of the tracks and was moved to allow for the widening of Newport Avenue. The tall building with the mansard roof at the top of the hill on the right was the Wollaston Hotel. Later the present buildings on that site were used for many years as the Howard Johnson Company offices. Railroad tracks were first laid in this right-of-way through Quincy one hundred and fifty years ago when the Old Colony Railroad Corporation commenced operations in 1845.

Workers Are Entitled To Church, Family Time

An open letter to South Shore merchants and all people of good will:

We, the clergy of the undersigned churches, would like to request your promise to the community to honor the letter of the recently passed law which allows retail stores to open for business on Sundays and "certain" holidays. Namely, we call upon you not to force your employees, either directly or indirectly, to give up their Sunday mornings or holiday family time.

We received an overwhelming response to our letter printed in this paper in early November against Question #5. Many of those who responded were low level and often low income workers who were certain that they would be indirectly forced to work. We would remind you of our continued vehement opposition to Question #5. The small margin of victory attained by Question #5 has largely been attributed to the enormous expenditure of money by its proponents and to the confusing nature of the blank ballot. Further, we would remind you that this Question #5 was resoundly defeated in Quincy and most of the South Shore.

However, the issue has been decided, and Question #5 is now the law. Now, the implementation of this law is up to you, the merchant. Will you allow your workers to be coerced "overtly" or "covertly" to work on Sundays and "certain" holidays, even if a worker values Sunday mornings for worship and/or family time?

We believe that it will be virtually impossible to enforce the provision that protects workers who consciously reject work for religious or value-oriented reasons. We understand how important job/economic security is to your workers and we understand how this could potentially scare people away from Sunday worship and family time. We believe that your workers are entitled to both job security and their freedom to worship and enjoy their families.

Therefore, we respectfully call upon you to encourage your workers to attend the church of their choice, and to spend holidays with their families, without the fear of reprisal or denial of their benefits as employees. A supported, happy employee is a more productive, appreciative employee.

A Bad Decision By Supreme Court

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It all began on Jan. 22, 1973 when, as a result of a bad decision by seven men on the United States Supreme Court, our country, for the first time :n its history officially sanctioned the destruction of unloved, unwanted, unborn human life.

That bad decision brought on the abortion mentality, followed very quickly by the establishment of the for-profit abortion industry in which death to the unborn is a daily occurrence. Should we be surprised, then, that the anti-life seed that was sewn in 1973 has brought forth a gradual disrespect for all human life, born and unborn?

The motivation for the merciless gunning down of defenseless human beings in Brookline, Massachusetts on Dec. 30, 1994 could well be traced to the disastrous Supreme Court decision of 1973 which, unfortunately, conveyed the message that human life is expendable at the whim of those who wish to destroy it.

Fire Deaths Prompt New Regulations

Jan. 19-25
37 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Nine people died in Quincy fires in less than a year, prompting Building Inspector Alrick Weidman to recommend to Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa new safety regulations.

Included in the recommendations were the ban of space heaters, inspection for all newly installed heating systems, removal of dilapidated buildings, strengthening the authority of the Fire Prevention Bureau and requiring some type of home fire alarms.

The most recent fire deaths included a 28-year-old mother and her two young daughters in Houghs Neck and a husband and wife in Squantum.

SCHOOL BOUNDARY CHANGES

The boundaries of some elementary schools would have to be changed to alleviate overcrowding at both Quincy High School and North Quincy High School.

It was expected that the Coddington School would be taken over completely for Quincy High School use while sixth graders at the Mass. Fields and Wollaston Schools being sent to Central Junior High School, instead of North Quincy. Crowding at North Quincy High School would also be solved with the scheduled opening of the new Atlantic Junior High School.

QUINCY ADAMS YACHT YARD MAY CLOSE

The Quincy Adams Yacht Yard in Adams Shore could be forced to close if it were unable to convince the Navy Department of the actual costs for the construction of wooden minesweepers and personnel boats.

The Navy was willing to settle the dispute with a payment of $320,000, but the yard said their costs were $1.7 million.

After a two-hour meeting in Washington with the Navy, Quincy Adams President Edward Whiting was not optimistic.

A Feb. 15 public auction of the yard was scheduled by one creditor, which would effectively force the yard into involuntary bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, a "creditors committee" made up of mostly Quincy businesses was formed to co-operate with the yard rather than force its closure.

Representing Senator Leverett Saltonstall at the Washington meeting was his secretary Charles Colson.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Southeast Expressway HOV Construction, Blasting Begins

The Massachusetts Highway Department (MHD) began work on the High Occupancy Vehicle (HOV) lane being built on the Southeast Expressway last weekend.

The work being done involves drilling and blasting to prepare the area at the Rte. 3/I93/Rte. 128 split.

The blasting will take place Saturdays around 6:30 a.m. and Sundays at approximately 8:30 a.m. The blasts will be enclosed and all precautions taken to protect motorists. During the blast, the roadway on either side of the split will be closed completely.

It is anticipated that the road closures will last no longer than eight minutes. A detour route will be marked via variable-message-boards strategically placed preceding the blasting area.

Should some unusual circumstances arise, such as heavy blast debris on the roadway surface, the closure may last as long as 30 minutes. MHA officials said, however, that situation in all probability will not occur.

Blasting will require the closures and detours to be in effect for the next four weekends. Motorists and residents may keep updated through local newspapers and radio stations. For up-to-the-minute updates, call SmarTraveler at 374-1234.

Parents And Kids And Bullies*

Children who hurt, frighten, or harass other children are bullies and they cause serious problems that schools, families, and neighbors often ignore.

Teasing at bus stops, practical jokes, taking someone's property from restrooms or lockers, insults and threats, shoving or kicking--it's all fair game to a bully. Fears and anxieties about bullies can cause some children to avoid school, carry weapons for protection or even commit suicide.

To change attitudes about bullying, and to prevent children from becoming bullies or their victims, parents can:

•Teach children ways to resolve arguments without violent words or actions.

•Teach children how to negotiate in an assertive but non-aggressive manner.

•Teach children self-protection skills--how to walk confidently, stay alert to what's going on around them, and know safe places to go for help.

•Encourage children to walk to school and go places with friends; there's safety in numbers.

•Provide opportunities for children to talk about bullying, perhaps when you watch TV together, read out loud, play a game, go to the park or a movie.

•Encourage children to talk about themselves, their strengths and weaknesses, and how to respect others.

Gillon To Return As Traffic Engineer

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Former Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, who resigned in November to become director of traffic engineering for the City of Boston, is returning to the city.

Gillon, a Norwood resident who began working for Boston Dec. 14, cited family concerns and Boston's residency requirement law as the reasons for his return. He expects to come back to Quincy around the beginning of February, he said.

"It's a tough decision," said Gillon. "But fortunately, it's a decision where luckily, there's a solution."

Gillon was referring to an offer by Mayor James Sheets, who had heard he had been having some problems in Boston, to come back to his former post.

Gillon added that he looks forward to returning to Quincy and addressing a number of traffic issues, including a proposed Shaw's Supermarket on the Wollaston-North Quincy line and the safety of pedestrians who walk near North Quincy High School.

Sheets said he is thrilled to have Gillon return.

"Jack Gillon saves tens of thousands of dollars for the city just through his technical expertise," said Sheets, who added that Gillon is capable of doing design work that would otherwise have to be put out on contract. "I would venture to say he's the best (traffic engineer) in the state."

Sheets added that Gillon's personality also make him an asset for the city.

"He has tremendous interpersonal skills," said Sheets. "What it means for the city it that projects will get done faster and there will be more than substantial levels of community between the city and its constituency."

The city has been unable to find a qualified permanent replacement for Gillon since his departure, Sheets said. An interim traffic consultant, Mike Burke, has been utilized in the meantime.

Compensation for Burke has not yet been computed, Sheets said, but it will come from the city's free cash account. Gillon will return to his previous annual salary of $54,500 as traffic engineer.

Studds Elected Co-Chairman New England Caucus

Congressman Gerry Studds has been elected co-chairman of the New England Caucus, a bipartisan coalition that works for legislation important to the region.

Studds, a Democrat from Cohasset, will share chairmanship duties with Congressman Bill Zeliff of New Hampshire, the Republicans' choice.

"At a time of great change in the Congress, I'm pleased to take a leadership role in a group that is in the thick of the debate, advocating for our region," said Studds. "The caucus works together to help all of New England - on issues ranging from the marine environment to economic development to health care."

The entire caucus will meet later this month to set legislative priorities for the 104th Congress. In anticipation of the meeting, Studds and Zeliff will get together next week to discuss their goals.

All 23 representatives from New England, including 14 Democrats, eight Republicans and one Independent, are caucus members. The caucus, an informal group with no staff that meets regularly to advance issues of mutual interest, was reconstituted two years ago after being dormant for several years.

Studds replaces Congressman Joe Moakley of South Boston as Democratic chairman; Zeliff succeeds former Congresswoman Olympia Snowe of Maine, who was elected to the Senate in November.

COMMUNICATIONS EQUIPMENT is tested by Sterling Middle School student Michael Roache inside AN-TRC 145 vehicle as Sgt. James Burrus of the Quincy National Guard 126th Signal Unit explains its use.

Sterling Middle School Completes WWII Project

Sterling Middle School completed a World War II project recently with a full school-wide program.

The project marked the third year of Sterling's participation as an accelerated school in a national program in connection with Stanford University.

Each morning three questions were asked of the student body and students made their way to the media center, seeking out the answers. Scores for each homeroom were posted outside the office.

Novels related to the war were read in language in reading classes. A number of research projects were done in Grade 8 geography classes, and local residents, students' relatives and former shipyard workers told wartime stories.

Members of the Quincy National Guard 126th Signal Unit visited the school and showed students how various pieces of military equipment are used.

Students in all grades participated in a number of activities Among the highlights were a Grade 6 "Time Line" of important dates which was displayed in the school's third floor corridor, a Grade 8 trip to Battleship Cove in Fall River, and a World War II skit and the musical play "Oklahoma" performed by Grade 7 students.

TRANSPORT VEHICLE from the Quincy National Guard holds quite a few passengers, as these Sterling Middle School students discovered. The students learned about the National Guard and its equipment during recent Military Day at the school.

STERLING MIDDLE SCHOOL students Erin Joyce and Jessica Pettinelli rest in a HumVee vehicle during the Quincy National Guard's recent visit to the school. The HumVee has replaced the old Jeep used for decades by the military.

Bernie Ledbetter and Julie Barcello are serving as city leaders and are recruiting Quincy walkers and volunteers for the event, which raises funds for hospice services for terminally ill patients and their families.

Participants of all ages are invited to participate in the mall walk by walking sponsored laps within the mall. There will be entertainment and drawings for prizes. The mall walk is a major source of funding for the hospice, helping to make it possible to provide care regardless of an individual's ability to pay.

WHAT IS HEARTBURN, ANYWAY?

Television commercials call it "acid indigestion." The technical name for heartburn is "gastroesophageal reflux," which describes what causes that burning sensation. Food travels from the mouth to the stomach via a long tube known as the esophagus. Sometimes the valve at the bottom of the esophagus lets a backflow, or reflux, of stomach acid surge back up the pipeline, causing discomfort. Simple heartburn is usually remedied by non-prescription antacids. However, a doctor should be consulted if heartburn occurs two or three times a week. Also, seek immediate medical aid if heartburn is accompanied by nausea, vomiting, numbness in a limb, or a cold, clammy sensation; these are possible heart attack symptoms.

P.S. Simple heartburn can often be prevented through proper eating and other lifestyle habits. Ask your doctor!

If you are experiencing symptoms of heartburn that persist, consult your physician for advice and information. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy or call myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2500. Office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Remember, January is Thyroid Disease Awareness Month!

Quincy Girls Unable To Keep Pace With Lakers

By KERRY BYRNE

Despite a number of outstanding individual performances, the Quincy High School girls' basketball team was unable to keep pace with Silver Lake in an 82-50 loss Friday at the Quincy Vo-Tech gymnasium.

The Presidents were scheduled to take on North Quincy last night (Wednesday). They travel to Taunton Friday night before returning home Tuesday for a contest against Weymouth at 5 p.m.

The Presidents played the Lakers even for most of the second half, but were unable to climb out of the large hole they had dug for themselves in the first half. Quincy trailed 39-15 at the break.

"Their big player, Libby Short, was eating us up," said Quincy head coach Diann Abela. "[At halftime] we used the blackboard to show the girls where she was shooting from and how they were getting her the ball. We had to get out and try to stop her."

Improved defense and invigorated offense marked the Quincy game in the second half. The Presidents came alive behind junior captain Kerri Connolly who scorched the Lakers for 21 points. She finished as the game's high-scorer with 28 points.

They closed the margin to within 14 and appeared to be gaining control of the floor but could not make the final push. The comeback effort suffered a serious blow when forward Angela Hogrell fouled out with 10:33 left in the game.

"Angela is not a great scorer but she's a good rebounder and an aggressive player. With Short in the middle, we needed someone like Angela to get a body on her," said Abela.

Adding big plays to the second-half effort were Mary Kelly and Toni Kabilian. Kelly came off the bench and immediately threw a wrench in the Silver Lake offensive machinery. She followed up her first steal with a thread-the-needle bounce pass between two defenders to a streaking Connolly who laid the ball in. On the Lakers' next attempt to move up court she stole the ball and again fed Connolly for the bucket.

"Mary did a good job, yes," said Abela. "She has a good outside shot. We needed to take some pressure off Kerri."

Kabilian proved to be a sharpshooter as she hit a couple of three-point buckets and ended the game with eight points.

Also playing well for the Presidents were Stephanie Wiltshire, Erin Barry, Katie Gallagher and Muiread Faherty. Wiltshire patrolled the pivot position and battled hard inside. Barry, a freshman, started at forward and will be a bright spot for the Presidents for several years. Gallagher used her speed and quickness well on the defensive end and Faherty looked tenacious as she fought for a series of rebounds that ended with her bucket late in the contest.

The varsity loss to Silver Lake was preceded by a 33-30 win by the Quincy junior varsity which improved the young Presidents to 5-5.

Sophomore Kerry Sullivan paced the win with 11 points. Julie Simon scored six points and played strong defense, and freshman Kerri Duffy ran the team well from the point guard position.

"I could name every girl, we're doing well," said JV coach Bob Noble. "At this stage now we're competitive and we're coming along game by game. We have a good hard-working group of kids - every one of them."

North Boys Have Their Way

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

North Quincy High School's boys' basketball team was ready to play against Old colony League rival Bridgewater-Raynham Friday night. They did not disappoint the local faithful by putting on a clinic in an 82-66 victory.

After Tuesday's (Jan. 17) game at Quincy, the Red Raiders (6-3 overall, 5-2 OCL) travel to Plymouth South Friday. Their next home game is Tuesday, Jan. 24 against Falmouth.

"I think we played them (Bridgewater-Raynham) great tonight," said head coach Ted Stevenson. "The kids showed they wanted to beat B-R tonight, and they did."

North proved early on what their goal was. With the score tied, 2-2, the Raiders poured in 11 straight points. Matt Beston and Brad Gray led the way in the scoring spree. Beston scored 23 points in the first half alone.

They continued to expand the lead throughout the first half, going up by as many as 24 points with seven minutes left in the period. North held a 51-27 lead at the break.

"We were hoping for around a 10-point lead at halftime," said Stevenson. "We felt we could play them tough and scoring 51 points in the first half is unbelievable."

The second half was far more competitive, with the Trojans outscoring North, 39-31. Stevenson took advantage of the large lead by clearing his bench for most of the half. The reserve group was led by Jevon Glenn and Scott MacDougall.

Glenn, a sophomore transfer student from Harlem, New York, showed plenty of promise in the last six minutes of the game as he scored four points and pulled down seven rebounds.

Beston was again the scoring star for North, hitting for a game-high points, including six three pointers. He also grabbed five rebounds and a steal.

Also tops in scoring were Brad Gray with points, Tom Coughlin with nine points and William (Mac) Ngutter with eight.

Other Raiders turning in fine performances were Jerry Fernandez, Eric Zimmerman, Mike Doyle, Jesse Casler, Steve MacDougall, Brendan Welch, Toby Odom and Dave Scott.

"Our team is playing well and practices are harder than anything," said Stevenson. "We are now ready for an always-tough Quincy team."

North Frosh Girls Continue To Roll

The North Quincy High School girls' freshmen basketball team improved to 4-0 in the Old Colony League, and 7-2 overall, with wins last week over Weymouth and Bridgewater-Raynham.

The Red Raiders pasted Weymouth, 51-28. It was the first win over Weymouth by a NQ freshmen team in three years.

Kerry Skehan and Kris Keohane powered the Raider engine on both the offensive and defensive ends.

Ten players got in the scoring column and the team grabbed a season-high 29 rebounds.

The girls overcame a three-point deficit with two-and-a-half minutes left to pin a 40-37 defeat on B-R.

Skehan proved the game's sharpest shooter with two successful bombs from three-point land. Meghan O'Donnell nailed one trey.

Twenty-six points came off steals by the North Quincy defense. Seven different Red Raiders scored.

The North girls' first encounter against their cross-city frosh rivals from Quincy High School was scheduled for yesterday (Wednesday) at 3:30 p.m. at NQHS.

They host Plymouth South Friday, Jan. 20, and Notre Dame Saturday.

Radatz Wins Fans On WJDA

'Monster' Anything But Menacing On Radio Program

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Though his massive frame and flame-throwing ability earned him the moniker "The Monster," former Red Sox hurler Dick Radatz is anything but menacing on his weekly sports radio show on WJDA 1300 AM.

For the past eight Mondays from 6-8 p.m., Radatz and WJDA's John Nicolson and Roy Lind have broadcasted "SportsLine" from Pat Flanagan's at 79 Parkingway. The trio plan to continue the show until Dick decides it is time to retire. Radatz' quick wit, booming voice and enjoyable personality make him a natural for the radio. His vast knowledge of professional, college and high school sports gives him an edge over other sports radio broadcasters.

The majority of the two hours are spent taking phone calls from listeners, playing trivia with the in-house crowd and discussing sports topics with former players and local sportswriters.

Radatz, who graduated from Michigan State University in 1959, signed with the Red Sox the same year and made his major league debut in 1962. That season, he was named the American League Rookie Reliever of the Year, a feat he recalls with pride. In his second year with Boston the big righty was selected to play for the American League All-Star team, the first time a reliever was selected to participate. The crowning achievement in his career with the Sox came when he landed a spot on the Red Sox' all-time team as a reliever.

"The Monster" played just four seasons with Boston, before a trade sent him to Cleveland. The move shocked him, since Radatz believed he and the local fans had developed a close bond.

"I felt I had formed a love affair with this town, that I was appreciated by the fans here," Radatz said before taking to the airwaves. "I guess Haywood [Sullivan, Red Sox general manager at the time] was getting me back for striking him out 20 times [laughs]. It took a while to get out of the funk I was in, and I only played a few more years after the trade."

Radatz, who hung up the spikes in 1969, returned to Boston 15 years later to work on the radio, which he enjoyed doing when he played with the Red Sox.

"I've always liked the radio shows, and this is such a great town to have one in," Radatz said. "The fans here are great and very knowledgeable."

In addition to his radio work, Radatz co-owns two baseball-related businesses with partner Fran Doorakian. One is called Practice Time, a seasonal indoor batting facility in Waltham. The other is National Pastime Legends, in which Radatz is involved in youth baseball clinics that have resulted in eight instructional workbooks for young players and coaches.

That is not all that keeps "The Monster" occupied, though. Radatz is on the Board of Directors of the Major League Baseball Alumni Association, which recently added former stars George Brett and Robin Yount.

"I enjoy keeping myself busy, keeping active in baseball, as you can see," Radatz said.

The following is a question-and-answer session with Dick Radatz:

LF: In regards to the strike, do you see it ending before next season?

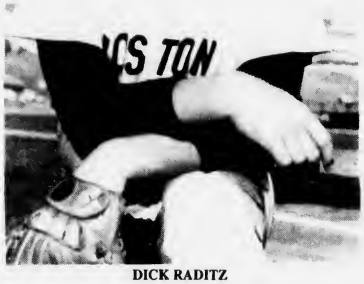
DR: "I don't see an end in sight if the salary cap stays in place. Of course, when I played, I was on the players' side, but now I can see both sides of the issue. The owners have shot themselves in the foot. You can't give someone a three- or four- or five-year deal at $7 million a year, then go broke and ask for the money back. Now, the players' union must realize that the owners are hurting and if they still want to play, they must make concessions, right or wrong, to solve the situation."

LF: Will the fans come back to the game if and when the strike ends?

DR: "The fans have a right to be upset; they have been for the last 10-12 years with all the salaries increasing and the talent pool dwindling. The ball players are a bit arrogant when they are making $4 million a year and want to renegotiate their contract. I think baseball will lose some fans, but the majority will be back, I believe."

LF: What do you feel the biggest difference in baseball is now from when you played?

DR: "Nowadays, players are learning to play in the majors, whereas we played a lot longer in the minors to develop our skills. I was talking to Rico [Petrocelli, Red Sox third baseman in the 1960s and 70s] the other day about this problem. The fundamentals are just not there, even with all the managers and coaches available to help them.



DICK RADITZ

"The most significant difference is the money and the way it is distributed. With the long-term deal, where is the incentive to play well? Players should be paid accordingly, every year, based on last season's performance. Players compare themselves to their peers and demand to get equal pay. Arbitrators see it that way, too, sometimes, which leads to all the trouble with greedy agents just in it for the money."

LF: Should Tony Conigliaro's number be retired?

DR: "I think they should retire it and put it in the concourse where everyone can see it. The numbers above the grandstand, those are Hall of Fame numbers, which should stand alone."

LF: Do you feel Jim Rice should be in the Hall of Fame, and did his unpleasant personality have anything to do with his failure to gain entrance?

DR: "Shouldn't his numbers speak for themselves? I'd love to see him get in. I would hate to see getting selected be based on popularity. I'm not sure what the requirements for the Hall of Fame are any more. It used to be 400 home runs, 3,000 hits, you were in. Now, it seems to be what you do in prime time, the playoffs and World Series that helps you get in. That's what happened with Willie Stargell and the 'We Are Family' teams in the late 70s and early 80s. Maybe if the Sox had won the '75 or '86 Series, Rice would have been voted in. He [Rice] hit almost 400 home runs, hit .298 and was the leading RBI man in the 1980s. Like him or not, he did the job for the Sox.".

LF: Who was your favorite manager to play for?

DR: "Johnny Pesky. I loved the guy, and I'm still very close to him. He was the one who made me a reliever, though I was reluctant to change. I felt it was a demotion, but it turned out fine. He was a lot of fun and I thought he should have stayed on as manager, but the Red Sox felt otherwise."

LF: Who was the toughest hitter you ever faced?

DR: "Tony Oliva. If you ask anyone who pitched in the American League in the 60s, they'll tell you he was as tough an out as there was. He was a dangerous hitter who always made contact and could drive it 450 feet. He was very strong and had lightning-quick hands.

Two other players I admired were Willie Mays and Roberto Clemente. These were guys who dictated the outcome of the game, by getting on base, intimidating opponents with their speed and making great plays defensively. I mean, Mays hit 660 home runs in a ballpark where the wind blew in all the time. Those were guys you'd pay to come watch play the game."

LF: Are there players today you would pay to watch play?

DR: "You have to respect the talent of [Barry] Bonds and [Ken] Griffey - they have what it takes to be great. I also like [Roger] Clemens. He has a great arm and a strong work ethic. He'd be a big winner in any era. I'd like to see him finish some important games for the Sox, though they're haven't been many of those recently."

FORMER RED SOX radio announcer Ken Coleman, left, requests an autograph from former Red Sox star reliever Dick Radatz. Coleman was a recent guest on Radatz's radio show which airs Mondays from 6 to 8 p.m. on WJDA 1300 AM.

Wrestling

Inspired Raiders Win Three In Row

The injury-plagued but gritty North Quincy High School wrestling team improved to 6-3 with consecutive wins over Plymouth South, Xaverian and Duxbury last week.

The Raiders were all but eliminated from the Plymouth South match before it even started, but somehow managed to eke out a 39-33 win.

They forfeited the 103-, 112- and 152-pound weight classes, and 125-pound junior Ed Ford - whom NQ coach Steve Joyce calls "one of my best wrestlers" - was pinned after dislocating his elbow while on the mat, but all-out efforts by the rest of the team turned the tide.

Jason Gibson (119 pounds), Jamie Karvelis (140), Ken Goon (145), Adam Harris (160) and Rob Ragusa all won by pins while Joe West (135) took his match by decision to set up a 33-33 tie going into the heavyweight battle. Steve Vukosa secured the victory with a pin.

Goon's performance was particularly impressive as he wrestled with a sprained ankle.

"The boys I have wrestling are wrestling very tough," said Joyce. "I have just 17 kids on the team, so numbers are a problem, but they have done a tremendous job. We only have one freshman and two sophomores. Those are usually the kids wrestling at the light weight classes and that's where we've been hurting."

The Red Raiders also had to forfeit a number of matches in their 45-24 win over Xaverian and 38-33 win over Duxbury in a double-dual meet Saturday.

The forfeitures gave North little margin for error, but inspired performances by Gibson, West, Karvelis, Vukosa, Sean O'Toole and Dan O'Donnell - each of whom pinned both their opponents - carried the day. O'Donnell wrestled at 145 pounds in place of the injured Goon.

Joyce has been pleased with the work of all his wrestlers but singled out co-captains Karvelis, Ragusa and Goon, as well as Gibson and Vukosa. Karvelis has the best individual record on the team at 14-2.

This week North Quincy faces one of their toughest stretches of the season with a double-dual meet against Hingham and Durfee, and a dual meet against Weymouth, who last week beat previously undefeated Quincy.

"We have some very difficult competition coming our way this week. If we can win one out of those three I will be very happy," said Joyce.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

At all ages and at all stages of life, fear presents a problem to everyone at one time or another. "We are largely the playthings of our fears," wrote British author Horace Walpole many years ago. "To one, fear of the dark; to another, of physical pain; to a third, of public ridicule; to a fourth, of poverty; to a fifth, of loneliness - for all of us our particular creature waits in ambush."

Yet, fear is often a most useful emotion. Fears are normal and can actually be healthy at times. Fear enables one to take appropriate self-protecting measures, if or when needed. Without these measures we would probably be consumed by our own folly, or the enmity and destructive purposes of others.

Fears are nature's way of warning us to be careful and to prepare for the task at hand. They keep us from being foolhardy. We need them, and as long as we use them and do not let them use us, we will have all the courage we need to accomplish our aims. . .

New Roof Needed At Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Spear St., Quincy is in need of a new roof according to Bill MacDonald, chairman of the Diaconate at the church., and a fund raising campaign is planned.

The slate roof which will cost an estimated $200,000 to replace is the original one from when the church was constructed in 1928.

He said the church has used the "band aid" approach for many years. This past October, parts of the roof were actually repaired only to blow off during the December wind storm. During a rain storm, part of the roof is leaking onto the organ and the pews, MacDonald said. He added that, pieces are falling off which threaten to endanger those in the area

Killer Bees Swarm Past Wellesley, 8-1

The Quincy Youth Hockey Mite B team - the Killer Bees - followed up last week's 13-1 stinging of Pembroke with a swarming 8-1 win over Wellesley.

The Quincy squad had to overcome their opposition and a thick fog covering the ice at the Wellesley rink.

Superb passing and team play has been a big reason behind the squad's recent success.

The first goal against Wellesley was scored by Myles Clancy, with Liam Powers assisting. Jake O'Donnell scored an unassisted tally and Danny Sullivan netted one after being set up by linemates O'Donnell and Jon O'Connor.

The lamp was lit in the second period by O'Donnell (2), Powers and O'Connor with Brendan Linnane, Sullivan, Powers and Clancy dishing out assists.

The Shamrock Line finished off the scoring in the final period as Powers scored off a feed from Linnane and Clancy.

Killer Bee forward Taylor Reinhardt made a number of outstanding plays that had the Mom and Dad Bees buzzing. Billy Jones and Brianna Nolan played the superb style of hockey that has come to define this young Mite squad.

Blueliners Gene Nazzaro, Matt Haskins and George Snowling frustrated the Wellesley attackers. Pat Maloney dominated his corner which kept netminder Nick Manning in a relaxed mode.

Using his blocker and glove, Manning easily handled all but one shot that came his way.

The hard-charging Killer Bees also blanked Hyde Park, 6-0.

It was Manning's first shutout of the season.

Scoring for Quincy were Powers (2), O'Donnell, O'Connor, Sullivan and Snowling. Assists were dished out by Chris Sheehan, Mark Lewis, Maloney, O'Donnell, Sullivan and O'Connor.

Great defense was played by Danny Davis, Nazzaro, Reinhardt, Nolan and Jones.

The Bees buzz down to Cape Cod this weekend for the Coca Cola Tournament. They return home to Quincy Youth Arena Sunday, Jan. 23 for a 2 p.m. contest.

Two Mayoral Task Forces To Be Formed

Two task forces relevant to goals Mayor James Sheets outlined in his recent mid-term address are in the process of being put together.

Sheets has charged Data Processing Director Bob Brennan with forming a Technology Task Force which the mayor has said is one of his most important goals of the new year.

"The purpose of the Technology Task Force is to come up with a report to show me how we can reach a level of computerization and communications sufficient to meet this city as we go into the 21st century, and to come up with a system that we can afford," said Sheets.

The mayor said he would like the report by June 30, the end of the current fiscal year. At press time, Brennan could not be reached for comment.

Bernice Mader, Sheets' administrative assistant, has been given the responsibility of putting together a task force relative to the planned Quincy Heritage Compact. Results of a National Park Service study recently suggested that such a compact would be an efficient way of linking the city's historic sites.

The mayor said he would like a report from Mader's task force by the beginning of May.

Mader said at press time she has not had time to speak to anyone about joining the task force, but she plans to include representatives from the Park Service, Metropolitan District Commission and the city's historic sites as well as other organizations connected with tourism and the sites such as Quincy 2000 and the Quincy Historical Society.

Planning Board Has Next Move On Shaw's Project

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Planning Board will have the next move regarding a proposal to build a Shaw's Supermarket on the North Quincy-Wollaston line.

The City Council held a public hearing on the matter Tuesday night after The Sun went to press. The Planning Board held a public hearing last week--which both supporters and opponents of the project attended--but has not concluded its deliberations on the proposal.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers both said this week they want Shaw's to address the concerns of all area residents regarding traffic and other issues before they will support the plan. The site of the proposed project is that of the old Boston Gear Works, 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St., which straddles the line between the two wards.

Phelan and Ayers both added that they will not call for a council vote on the matter until after the Planning Board makes its formal recommendation on the issue. Phelan said he would have a hard time supporting any proposal that does not receive a favorable recommendation from the board.

Members of the Planning Board, like some residents, also expressed some concern about traffic and other issues last week.

Phelan said he is closely examining plans for a parking lot at the corner of Hancock Street and nearby Albion Road, which residents voiced concern over during the Planning Board's public hearing. He called the parking lot "a key issue," but added that he will not be satisfied until all residents' concerns are met.

"I just want to see the issues resolved and make sure things are done properly," he said. "I've received a lot of phone calls both for and against the project."

Ayers said he would like to see traffic improvements planned by Shaw's extended to the corner of Hancock and East Squantum Streets, which is near North Quincy High School. He added that he has spoken to School Supt. Eugene School, high school administrators and abutters of the project about his concerns.

"It's a tough, congested area," he said. "I'm not yet at a level of comfort with this project."

Ayers added that he, also, is concerned about the proposed parking lot. He stressed, however, that he thinks Shaw's is a fine company.

"This isn't against Shaw's," he said. "We'll give them as long as it takes to resolve the issues."

Shaw's has proposed building a single-story structure comprised of a 56,200-square-foot supermarket with a 2,000-square-foot mezzanine, as well as an attached 27,925-square-foot retail store currently planned to house two tenants, at the Boston Gear Works site. The company's original proposal to build at the site was withdrawn in late 1993 after Phelan, Ayers and other councillors indicated they would vote against it.

The new Shaw's plan calls for the opening of its proposed second retail store to be delayed until after the supermarket has been open for nine months. It also includes $300,000 in planned traffic improvements and a $1 million bond to support those improvements.

Phelan said the current plan is better than the original proposal, noting that in addition to the promises it has made, Shaw's has hired landscape architect Mary Smith of Quincy to work with them on the project.

"I think they've (Shaw's) come a long way from where they were the last time," he said. "Those are things that were not on the table before."

The bond amount is similar to that offered on the Home Depot store in West Quincy, which was built by developer Mark Dickinson who is behind the Shaw's project.

The Boston Gear site is currently zoned for industrial use and requires a special permit from the City Council for the Shaw's project. If the Planning Board gives a favorable recommendation, six of nine city councillors would then have to support the proposal for a permit to be granted.

Weld Signs Legislation Naming New Neponset Rail Bridge For Joseph Harold

Gov. William Weld has signed legislation naming the new Neponset River Commuter Rail Bridge after Joseph Harold Sr., the former state Adjutant for the Disabled American Veterans and the father of former state Sen. Paul Harold.

The legislation is now Chapter 322 of the Acts of 1994.

The signing was announced Tuesday by Quincy's legislative delegation who also filed and co-sponsored the legislation: Sen. Michael Morrissey, and Reps. Ronald Mariano, Stephen Tobin and Michael Bellotti.

Paul Harold thanked the city's legislative delegation and Gov. Weld for the honor.

"On behalf of the family, I want to extend our gratitude to the Quincy legislative delegation and to Gov. Weld for this honor for my father.

"As a transportation link, it's one of the most important in our region and a thoughtful tribute to perpetuate my father's name," Paul Harold said.

The legislation, also co-sponsored by House Speaker Charles Flaherty and four other area legislators, was filed to pay tribute to Mr. Harold after he was tragically killed when he was hit by a car crossing Sea St. shortly before Christmas.

Mr. Harold, a decorated veteran of the Battle of the Bulge in World War II, was the state adjutant for the Disabled American Veterans at the State House for over 40 years and was one of the foremost advocates on veterans' issues on both the state and national levels. His efforts on behalf of veterans everywhere earned him the title of "Mr. Veteran" among those who knew him.

"This bill will allow us to give a small amount of recognition to a man whose efforts on behalf of the state's veterans are legendary," Morrissey said. "Joe Harold was one of the hardest working, most dedicate advocates I have ever had the pleasure to work with.

"I am proud to say that I counted Joe as a friend and am glad that I was able to help provide this tribute to him."

Quincy's representatives agreed the tribute was most appropriate.

"We will be working with the Harold family, the Governor's Office and the MBTA to schedule a fitting dedication ceremony for the bridge," Tobin said. "Joe's contributions on behalf of veterans is one that deserves recognition."

Mariano said, "Naming the bridge after Joe Harold is a fitting tribute for the entire Harold family. As a senator, Paul Harold was instrumental in securing funding for the bridge's construction and was a tireless advocate for the restoration of the Old Colony line."

Bellotti said, "Joe Harold will always be remembered as a person who was a friend to many.

He had a way about him that instilled trust and confidence in towards him from the all those who came into contact with him. He will be missed both personally and professionally."

The commuter rail bridge spans the Neponset River, connecting Quincy with Dorchester, and will carry commuter rail trains on the soon to be revitalized Old Colony Commuter Rail system. Trains are expected to begin running in 1996.

The bridge, which is one of the key milestones in the revitalization of the line, cost approximately $24 million to construct.

A ceremony to formally name the bridge after Joseph Harold, Sr. is expected to be held in the spring.

made.

Barry said he is concerned not only about the safety of students from North Quincy High School, who routinely run across Hancock Street to a nearby McDonald's restaurant, but also those from Sacred Heart School, Atlantic Middle School and Parker Elementary School.

"My concern is that as Quincy grows and more and more people drive through it, they encounter our school children at almost every crosswalk and main drag," he said.

Barry, who planned to address the traffic issue at last night's (Wednesday's) School Committee meeting, said at press time he was awaiting a recommendation from Parker parents on what can be done to improve area traffic. Parker lost a "big portion" of its parking lot when renovations were made to the building, he added, and parking and traffic problems have resulted in the neighborhood.

Barry said among the ideas he has discussed with other officials and with parents are the possibility of building a pedestrian overpass and/or installing a flashing light near North Quincy High School.

Ayers, who is chairman of the City Council Public Safety Committee as well as a school zone task force in his ward, has also voiced concerns about traffic problems in the city, particularly in North Quincy. He planned to address the issue at Tuesday night's City Council meeting, which was held after The Sun's press time.

Ayers said is he particularly concerned about increased traffic that may result from a proposed Shaw's Supermarket on the North Quincy-Wollaston line, adding that he would like Shaw's to extend planned traffic improvements to include the corner of Hancock and East Squantum streets near North Quincy High.

"It's a tough, congested area," he said.

According to Mullen, there have been three pedestrian fatalities in the city since the beginning of 1994. As recently this past Sunday, a Quincy woman was injured when she was hit by a car a car, while crossing West Squantum Street, he added.

Figures show that overall, Sunday's was the 57th pedestrian accident in the city within the last six months.

Family Council Meeting Jan. 23

An organizational meeting of the Family Council will be held Monday, Jan. 23 in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The council is an advisory group to Mayor James Sheets' Commission on the Family which was formed to aid needy Quincy families in a number of capacities.

Sheets said the meeting will include the official election of 22 of the 25 people selected to serve on the council, as well as the appointment of four council member to serve on the Commission on the Family.

The public is invited.

ADVICE FOR THE VACATION-BOUND

Figures are unavailable with regard to the number of auto accidents that occur annually. It is known, however, that the number of auto accidents begins to rise in April/May and reaches a peak in early to mid-autumn, accord to the National Safety Council. This trend should prompt those who travel to and from their vacation destinations by car to take some preventative measures. Topping the list is assessing the inflation and tread depth of all tires, including the spare. A tool kit should also be on hand that includes the appropriate jack and lug wrench to the car. Beyond that, all (head) lights should be checked, along with belts and hoses, windshield wipers, all fluid levels, and the condition of the battery. The purchase of a cellular telephone may also be a worthwhile investment.

HINT: Broken fan belts and hoses are the leading reasons for needing roadside assistance.

At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be informed about everything in your car whether or not you are planning a long motor trip. Our friendly, professional staff at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Marshall Undergoing Tests At Mass. General

Sheriff Clifford Marshall, stricken in his Dedham office last week with an apparent stroke, has been transferred to Massachusetts General Hospital where his condition was unknown Tuesday.

Marshall, 58, a Quincy resident, was taken to Norwood Hospital by ambulance last Tuesday. He was discharged from Norwood Hospital Monday and transferred to Massachusetts General Hospital where he is undergoing tests, a family friend said Tuesday.

Last Thursday, Marshall's physician, Dr. Bruce Patterson, said the sheriff "appears to have suffered a small stroke" and that the "sheriff is resting comfortably and is improving each day."

Additional information on Marshall was not available at press time, according to Kate Rivet, a spokesperson for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

"There is no further information from the family at this time," Rivet said, adding the family may provide more information soon.

The family, which has expressed thankfulness for concern shown on the sheriff's behalf, has requested that friends and supporters continue to honor their wishes for complete privacy at this time.

In Marshall's absence, Robert Campbell, the special sheriff of Norfolk County and second in command at the Norfolk County Correctional Facility, is serving as acting sheriff. Campbell, a former Foxboro police sergeant, bail commissioner and deputy sheriff, joined the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office in 1960.

Marshall, who was elected Norfolk County sheriff in 1975, was re-elected to a fourth six-year term in 1993. His public service career started more than 28 years ago when he was elected Ward 2 city councillor in 1966. He later served as a state representative before becoming sheriff.

As the 16th sheriff of Norfolk County, Marshall has initiated several innovative programs to help reduce overcrowding in Norfolk County, including the Braintree Alternative Center and the Electronic Incarceration Program.

Marshall was also the driving force behind the new Norfolk County Correctional Center which opened in 1992, replacing the antiquated Dedham Jail.

Man Breaks Into Pub, Gets Stuck In Duct

A 22-year-old Quincy man was arrested this week and charged with breaking and entering and malicious damage to personal property at Brannagan's, 226 Water St., Quincy.

Kevin Walsh of 1 Nelson St. was arraigned on the charges Tuesday in Quincy District Court. Records of the arraignment were not available at press time.

Walsh was arrested Monday after becoming stuck in a duct of the establishment's ventilation system. He had to be extricated by the Quincy Fire Department before he was arrested.

Quincy Police Sgt. Ron McKim said police received a call at 7:28 a.m. from a member of the cleaning staff at Brannagan's who said staff members heard shouting coming from the ventilation system. After unsuccessful attempts to break into the pub through a window and side door, Walsh apparently had tried to enter through a ceiling vent and become stuck, according to McKim.

"They (the fire department) had to pull him through the roof," he said. McKim noted that Walsh was covered with soot from head to toe after he was extricated.

McKim added that he did not know if robbery was Walsh's motive.

"I guess he must have had spring fever," he laughed, referring to the recent warm weather the region has experienced.

Walsh was charged with malicious damage because of damage he did to the door and window, McKim added.

A Sad Farewell

THE CASKET OF Matt Messing is carried from St. John's Church Monday by his brothers, Dennis, Jr. and Tim, and other family members as Quincy High School ROTC honor guard salutes. Over 1,800 attended the funeral Mass.

Matt Messing's Legacy: A City United

By KERRY BYRNE

A city united is the legacy of Matthew Messing.

Nothing said this more powerfully than the North Quincy High hockey team, led by Josh Wingate, locking in tearful embraces with members of the Messing family as Matthew was laid to rest Monday at Pine Hill Cemetery.

MATT MESSING

Messing, a 16-year-old sophomore hockey player from Quincy High, went into cardiac arrest and died soon after being checked by Wingate in a Quincy-North Quincy hockey game last Wednesday. The check was clean and not particularly hard. An autopsy found that it did not cause any damage to Messing's heart, leading many to believe that the timing of the check and the onset of cardiac arrest were nothing more than unfortunate coincidence.

The death could have further divided a city with a school rivalry that is often intense, often petty. Instead it galvanized the community.

"The relationship hasn't always been the best," said Quincy High hockey coach Bob Sylvia, who was touched by the loss perhaps more than anyone outside the Messing family. "It's been very competitive, but something like this strips it all away. Something tragic puts it all in perspective."

Nearly a week of mourning came to a climax as some 1,800 people gathered at St. John the Baptist Church Monday morning to pay

Board Warns Two Firms About Noise Complaints

The Quincy License Board heard complaints from residents surrounding Home Depot , 177 Willard St., and Wendy's, 191-201 Newport Ave.ranging from early morning pick-ups and deliveries to general cleanliness of the parking lot and surroundings.

The board said a letter from the city will be drafted and sent to Home Depot with time schedule for pick ups, street cleaning and vacumming.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman cited the reason for the letter was the constant "change over of top level people." Building inspector Matt Mulvey suggested a "training seminar" for workers.He noted that customers had complained of "blocked aisles" and noise from vacuming outside at 1 and 2 a.m. James Peters, a new manager at Home Depot assured the board the the present management team "will stay". and will abide by the contents of the letter.

The turnover in management at Wendy's' is affecting the operation.according to board members. They suggested Wendy's hire someone to police the area at least once a week and to make sure the pick-up of trash be at a reasonable hour.

Neighbor Larry Flaherty who complained that the dumpsters were being picked up at early as 5 a.m. also complained that he had said he spoke to Wendy's three weeks ago about a broken fence and nothing had been done as. However, manager Michael Ward said a misunderstanding as to who was responsible for the fence has been corrected that it was promised that a new fence will be constructed within a week it done The board suggested they hire a contractor to maintain the fence plus other parts of the property on a weekly basis. Also a landscaper who would make sure the work is "done correctly".

Shea said the safety issue of rooming houses including sprinkler systems is in the process of being done and that all rooming houses had been notified.

•Granted a request from Fiesta Shows/First Night Quincy for a permit to hold a carnival at Faxon Field the week of April 24, through April 30. Council President Michael Cheney said the proceeds from the carnival will benefit the First Night in Quincy which he called a "kick-off fund raiser".

Cheney Has Doubts, D'Aprix Optimistic Over Decelle Coming

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City Council President Michael Cheney is less than optimistic about the possibility of Decelle, a Braintree-based retailer owned by Burlington Coat Factory, opening a store at the site of the former Child World and Cummings stores in downtown Quincy.

The head of Quincy 2000, however, said he still believes that the project will happen.

Cheney told members of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) Tuesday that despite predictions by Mayor James Sheets and officials from Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation that Decelle should soon arrive in the downtown, he believes that there is a less than 50 percent chance that the store will be built.

"I would say there is about a 45 percent chance that it's coming," said Cheney.

Quincy 2000 has been trying to bring Decelle to the 40,000-square-foot site since January of last year. The clothier reached a tentative agreement to open a new store in the three-story building last September--a letter of intent was signed by Burlington Coat Factory Chief Operating Officer Mark Nesci--but a formal lease has not been signed.

Cheney, who made the comments after several QCBPA members expressed concerns about whether Decelle would ever arrive in the downtown, said he based his prediction on "sources" who have briefed him on the topic.

After the meeting, Cheney singled out one of his sources as being "a very prominent person in the retail industry who is not currently doing business in Quincy."

He added, however, that while he is "very concerned" about the chances of bringing Decelle to the downtown, he applauds the efforts of Sheets and Quincy 2000 to make the project a reality.

"This doesn't put me at odds with the mayor," he said. "I'm extremely hopeful that it will happen and supportive of all that he has tried to do."

Sheets was in Washington, D.C. at press time attending the U.S. Conference of Mayors. However, Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, said he has no doubts about the arrival of the new downtown store.

"I think to play these deals out publicly can do more harm than good," D'Aprix said in a telephone interview. "We believe that Decelle is going to happen, but there are many sensitive issues that have to be dealt with."

Quincy 2000 has been working to help negotiate a lease between New Jersey-based Burlington Coat Factory and the landlord of the building, Walcott Corp. of Boston. D'Aprix attributed the delays in the lease signing to the "heavy retail season" in December and recently-discovered structural problems at the nearly 100-year-old site.

Cheney told QCBPA members his sources have said Quincy ranks "third or fourth or fifth" on a list of potential homes Decelle has compiled, as compared to "first or second," as Sheets has said.

Asked about that statement, as well as Cheney's predictions that the chances of Decelle coming to the city are less than 50 percent, D'Aprix said, "I think it would be irresponsible for us to get into numbers and percentages."

QCBPA President Caryn Smith of Caryn's Corner, who sits on Sheets' Quincy Task Force designed to deal with issues related to the business community, told association members at Tuesday's meeting that she feels there is a "75 percent chance" Decelle will come to Quincy Center.

Other QCBPA members, however, expressed concerns and doubts on the issue.

"This has been going on for about a year and a half, and nothing seems to be being done," said Bernie Reisberg of Bernie's Modern Formal Shop. "I get frustrated hearing about all of these things and then seeing nothing materialize."

Andrea McArdle of Hancock Tobacco wondered if the city should look at other potential tenants for the Child World/Cummings site besides Decelle. She added that there are several other vacant buildings in the downtown which should also be given the same attention.

Reisberg agreed.

"One building has as much priority as the other," he said.

"I think Decelle would be an asset, but if it's too iffy, why not go after someone else," added Deanna Gazarian of Phase II Jewelry.

D'Aprix said Quincy

City Flags Lowered In Honor Of Rose Kennedy

Flags across the city were lowered at half-mast at noon Tuesday in memory of Mrs. Rose Kennedy, who died Sunday at the age of 104.

The flags were lowered at the request of City Council President Michael Cheney, who is acting mayor while Mayor James Sheets is out of town. They will remain lowered until the end of the week.

Cheney, who also sent a letter of condolences to the Kennedy family on behalf of the citizens of Quincy, said Mrs. Kennedy is someone who should be remembered "for her leadership and contributions to the citizens of Massachusetts and of the country."

Age 60? You May Get Benefit Statement This Year

By CAROL BOYLE

If you're age 60 or older and not yet receiving Social Security benefits, you can expect to get a statement sometime in 1995 telling you approximately how much you could receive in benefits.

In February, the Social Security Administration will begin mailing "Personal Earnings and Benefit Estimate Statements" to everyone who is age 60 or older, has earnings posted under his or her Social Security number, and is not currently receiving Social Security benefits.

The statements are intended to help people become better informed about what they can expect to receive in benefits and how much money they have invested in Social Security. They show the taxable earnings reported by the worker's employer(s) and the estimated Social Security taxes the worker has paid on those earnings. By the end of the century, Social Security expects to be sending the annual statements to everyone age 25 or older.

You don't have to do anything when you receive your statement unless you believe the earnings information is incorrect. If the error involves earnings reported by your current employer, contact your payroll office or your supervisor to see about having it correct. If the error involves earnings from a former job, report the discrepancy to Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213. When you call, be sure to have your records of the correct earnings such as W-2s, pay stubs, and tax returns handy.

The initial mailings will continue through September. And in October 1996 and each year thereafter, statements will be sent to individuals who reach age 60 during the year.

The statement shows the benefit amount the worker and his or her family can anticipate at ages 62, 65 or 70, based on the person's current age. If, for example, you're 63, your statement will show the estimated benefits for your current age and for ages 65 and 70. If you're 68, you'll receive an estimate for both 68 and age 70. People who are past age 70 will get an estimate based on their current age. The statements also include estimates of benefits that may be paid should the worker become disabled or die before retirement.

(Carol Boyle is Social Security Manager in Quincy.)

Election Year Warming Up

Looks like there will be more action on the City Council front this election year than in quite some time.

Shaping up are an at-large contest, challengers in at least two wards plus two open ward seats up for grabs.

The action in the wards appears to be brewing in Wards 2, 3, 5 and 6.

The apparent decision by Larry Chretien to vacate his Ward 3 City Council seat to run at-large has a number of potential candidates already stirring. Names being mentioned:

James Boudreau, aide to Senator Michael Morrissey who also held that post with former Senator Paul Harold.

Pat McDermott, active in the Montclair-Wollaston Association.

Howard MacKay who has run for the seat in the past.

Steve Doherty, a member of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds staff.

David McGillicuddy of Elmwood Ave., employed by the telephone company.

They join Charles McIntyre (who ran impressively at-large two years ago) in the potential Ward 3 candidate department this year. His name quickly surfaced last week.

In WARD 5, Joseph Murphy is thinking of running against incumbent Charles Phelan. Murphy is an aide to state Rep. Ron. Mariano, who of course, is also a school committeeman.

IN WARD 6, the name of Joseph Newton of Standish Rd., Squantum, is being mentioned as a candidate for the seat held by Bruce Ayers.

THE WARD 2 seat will officially open soon with the expected announcement from Ted DeCristofaro that he will retire after 14 years.

Whether or not this will produce much action remains to be seen. Ordinarily an open seat does bring out candidates. But if School Committee Vice Chairman Dan Raymondi decides to run for it, he might take it without opposition.

WONDERING IF Joseph LaRaia is or isn't running for re-election as councillor-at-large. He is.

LaRaia says he is definitely a candidate for re-election. There has been talk he might give up the seat to take an appointment. Not so, he says.

He adds that if he is supposed to be in line for an appointment no one has told him. And he doesn't expect one.

SPEAKING OF APPOINTMENTS, don't look for any more musical chairs among City Hall department heads this year.

Mayor James Sheets will keep his "official family" intact the rest of the year with the exception of Grace Guinchiglia who is retiring as his personal secretary. Her successor is still to be named.

Sheets will announce his annual appointments in February but no surprises are expected.

Michael McFarland and Tom Koch have already settled in at their new jobs as executive secretary to the mayor and executive director of the Park-Forestry-Cemetery Departments, along with Al Grazioso who succeeded McFarland as purchasing agent. Koch will be officially sworn in Feb. 2.

ADAMS FAMILY FOOTNOTE: When former Senator Paul Harold recently finished up his teaching assignment at the University College in Cork Ireland, one of his classes represented him with the most recent edition of the Guinness "Book of Irish Facts and Feats."

It noted that 21 U.S. Presidents were to "varying degrees of Irish descent" including our own John Adams.

Adams' mother, Susanna Boylston Adams, was descended from an Ulster farming family.

John Adams did a little farming himself here in Quincy before getting involved in the Revolutionary War and moving into the White House.

Morrissey, Bellotti Urge State Police To Increase QSD Traffic Enforcement

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti want State Police to step-up traffic enforcement along Quincy Shore Drive in response to concerns raised by local residents at the MDC's recent public meeting on the proposal to "Bring Back The Beach."

In a letter to Col. Charles Henderson, superintendent of the State Police, Morrissey pointed out that "...over 100 people attended the meeting, and the number one issue presented by the residents was the lack of a police presence on Quincy Shore Drive."

"The lack of tough, continuous traffic enforcement places commuters and local residents in serious jeopardy each time they attempt to cross the street or travel Quincy Shore Drive in their vehicles," Morrissey added. "This situation is intolerable and must not continue. No matter how much we attempt to clean up the appearance of the beach, people will not return to enjoy it unless they feel safe to do so."

Bellotti, who said he has been in "constant contact" with the State Police on the issue, joined Morrissey in urging the State Police for an increased presence on Wollaston Beach.

"Increasing public safety along Quincy Shore Drive has been one of my highest priorities since being elected to the Legislature," Bellotti said. "The MDC's proposal to bring people 'Back to the Beaches' only heightens the need for an increased police presence at the beach."

Although the MDC has jurisdiction over the beach itself, since the merger of the MDC police into the State Police in 1992, the State Police have been charged with patrolling Quincy Shore Drive. Morrissey and Bellotti pledged to continue to pressure the State Police to increase patrols along Quincy Shore Drive, particularly in the busy spring and summer months.

Free Legal Clinic Feb. 7 At Quincy Court

The Norfolk County Bar Association will sponsor a free legal clinic Tuesday, Feb. 7 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Quincy District Court.

The clinic is a free service to the public and would benefit anyone seeking legal advice but cannot afford it.

Attorneys will be available to answer legal questions in private one-on-one consultations, free of charge. No appointment is necessary.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS ONE of a series of Quincy postcards published by Mackay's drugstore in Norfolk Downs during the 1920's. Now called Forbes Hill, this hard to reach lookout was known as Wollaston's Third Hill when the newly formed Metropolitan Water Board built this standpipe and reservoir in 1903. It is not widely known, but, this point in Quincy, at 200 feet, is the highest elevation on what is defined as the eastern seaboard of the United States. The steel tank inside this fortress-like structure holds 330,000 gallons of water. The reservoir, long ago filled in, held a reserve of five million gallons for Quincy's water system.

Shaw's Project Would Benefit Our City

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As 1995 arrives, the Quincy City Council has a wonderful opportunity to give to the Wollaston and North Quincy areas a major boost by approving the Shaw's Supermarket project for the old Boston Gear site off of Hancock Street.

The Shaw's project, like Stop & Shop on Newport Avenue and Wal-Mart at the south end of the city, accomplishes important goals for Quincy. First, the project will create construction and permanent jobs. Many of these jobs will go to people who live in the immediate neighborhoods. Second, an old vacant industrial site will be transformed into an attractive, productive shopping center that will bring with it major improvements. Finally, the Shaw's project will produce new property taxes that can help keep residential property taxes down.

I am pleased to give my support to the Shaw's project as a Wollaston businessman because I believe the new shopping center will benefit our city.

Is City Being Used By Large Corporations?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Quincy's Planning Board members want to be sure that Shaw's Supermarkets' plans for a new store at the old Boston Gear site won't cause traffic woes all the way north to the Neponset River Bridge. But Shaw's apparently doesn't want to study traffic to the bridge. The company says traffic would thin out that far away from their planned supermarket off Hancock Street between Linden and Hayward streets. Nearly 22,000 cars use Hancock Street daily and Shaw's contends its new store would add 2,700 cars a day on weekdays and 3,000 a day on weekends.

Shaw's Supermarket still apparently has only one exit from the store on Hancock Street; even the smaller Wollaston Market down the street has two exits. I don't care what they say: no updating of traffic signals paid for by Shaw's will offset having one exit from the store on Hancock Street. They can take their $1 million guarantee and shove it for all I care.

Residents of North Quincy and Wollaston fought this fight once before but they're back again. Personally, I have major qualms with both Shaw's going into the old Boston Gear site and less qualms with Super Stop & Shop over on Newport Avenue wishing to build its new superstore at the Pneumatic Scale site. I wish Quincy City Hall were not treating both supermarket chain plans as separate issues because the timing of both plans and the consequences of both will have a major impact on residents of Wards 3, 5 and 6. Folks living in Wollaston and North Quincy will suffer. I live far enough away in the Atlantic neighborhood and will escape most of the traffic problems but I am still concerned for my neighbors living over in Montclair or in the Norfolk Downs area. We are all citizens of Quincy and need to look out for each other.

Personally, I can better accept a new Super Stop & Shop replacing an existing store. But there is really a need for a second superstore so nearby when Wollaston Market is also open for business? But I'm even upset with Stop & Shop for that billboard atop their old store in Neponset Circle which advertises to commuters exiting from the Expressway that a Super Stop & Shop is just across the bridge on Newport Avenue. Is this billboard for Wollaston or North Quincy shoppers or is it for Dorchester residents of Neponset and Adams Village who lost two supermarkets in recent times? And isn't Shaw's also looking north to Dorchester? And isn't that why a traffic study for Hancock Street needs to begin at the bridge?

Both Shaw's and Stop & Shop talk about Wollaston and North Quincy but are they also thinking Dorchester in silence? Supermarket chains are expanding like warring city-states and the bottom line isn't people but profits. Am I right? Quincy doesn't need two superstores so close to each other, do they? Newport Avenue can better serve as a superstore site than Hancock Street, which is just too damn narrow.

My fear is that neither superstore is seriously taking into effort auto traffic from the Neponset area which will add itself onto Quincy traffic. I don't totally believe the figures handed out by Shaw's. I believe, like Ronald Reagan, that we should trust but verify.

Finally, is it hard to believe that one of the real reasons for such an interest in either rebuilding a current supermarket or building a new one has to do more with corporations watching each other than it has to do with serving the consumer public? Shaw's lost last year but came right back--intent, apparently, on stopping Stop & Shop from area domination.

Also, the recent ad campaign by Shaw's and those endless letters of support for a Shaw's wins no points with me. Shaw's is being touted as a savior for the community but I won't be joining their bandwagon until I feel that our community is not being used by large corporations looking into our wallets more than looking into our traffic concerns. I believe it is time to deal with both supermarkets as one issue and for Quincy City Hall to look out for the quality of life of its neighborhoods and people.

School Committee Urges Washington Support For Aid

By PAUL HAROLD

Jan. 26-Feb. 1, 1970
25 Years Ago

The School Committee, under the leadership of Vice Chairman James McCormick, sent telegrams to President Nixon and the state Congressional delegation to support the proposed new federal aid to education proposal.

"Defeat of this plan would mean the loss of $1 million to the 17,000 students in the Quincy schools," said McCormick.

The Health Education and Welfare Department aid to education plan was controversial from its inception, and it was anticipated that the President would veto the bill. McCormick's telegram to legislators was to override the veto if necessary.

DUMP FIRE RAISES ATTORNEY GENERAL'S IRE

The blaze at Cashman's Quarry continued into its third day, polluting residential areas of West Quincy and parts of the Southeast Expressway.

The Metropolitan Air Pollution District threatened the city with court action if the fires continued, saying it would put the matter in the hands of the Attorney General for enforcement.

City officials said the fire was set by persons who wanted to stop or delay the opening of the new city dump. The building demolition materials that were burning were dumped at the site as fill for a new roadway to the quarry which was scheduled to be used as the new dump.

SAFES EMPTIED IN SAVINGS BANK BUILDING

Eight safes were emptied in offices on the second, third and fourth floors of the Quincy Savings Bank Building at 1372 Hancock St.

Detective Capt. Paul LaHive called it a professional job by three or more men with crowbars and other tools to tear apart the two to seven foot high safes.

Ten offices were ransacked, with the theft of cash, checks and securities. Some $53,000 in stocks and bonds from the office of Atty. Melvin Thorner, however, were left behind in a third floor restroom.

The break was discovered by Patrolman Raymond Haskell who noticed footprints on the fire escape in the freshly fallen snow.

Stuffed Squid (Calamari)

Sometimes on a Sunday, if I don't have a big crowd over to eat, and the weather is bad, I prepare various foods for the coming week.

And so it was last Sunday when I cooked some stuffed squid (calamari) and then put them in the freezer until the following Thursday. The following recipe feeds from 6 to 8 persons. But you can make any amount depending on those squid lovers.

Stuffed Squid (Calamari)

3/4 pound squid (about about 12 medium sized squid) about 3 cups bread softened
some basil, parsley and oregano
2 tablespoons grated romano cheese
a sprinkle of garlic powder
3 tablespoons tomato sauce
salt and pepper to taste
enough toothpicks to secure tops.

Soak bread in water and squeeze. Place in bowl and add all other ingredients and blend until stuffing is blended. If it gets too dry, add a bit more of either the tomato sauce or water.

When this is done, the tricky part is stuffing the squid. You can either use your fingers or a small baby spoon. I've used both depending on the size of the squid. Only fill them about three quarters full and place a toothpick on the top of each closing it as carefully as you can. Set aside.

Make a quick tomato sauce with oil, garlic, basil and any other favorite herb. I made the sauce in a large frying pan so the squid would be side by side instead of on top of each other in a deeper pan.

After you make the sauce and it starts to bubble, carefully place each squid and then cook on low heat turning them carefully.

After this was done, I was lucky to have a large space in my freezer to place the frying pan there. It will be much easier to defrost it by just placing it on the stove on low heat until heated through. (you can also store it in containers, but it will take a tad longer to heat.

Sometimes a squid or two might open during cooking, but it's no big deal, they are still edible.

Serve with linguine. You can either cut them in pieces or give each person one of their own. Make sure you remove the toothpicks before serving.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Entrepreneur To Give Address At ENC Commencement Feb. 5

Lois Mitten, owner and founder of Children's Discovery Center Inc., will give the address at Eastern Nazarene College's winter commencement exercises Sunday, Feb. 5 at 2 p.m. in Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, 37 East Elm Ave.

The public is invited.

Children's Discovery Center features five locations in the Toledo, Ohio area that serve 650 children. Its Arrowhead Park Center was one of the first centers in the country to receive national accreditation.

Mitten was named the 1991 Entrepreneur of the Year for Northwest Ohio (a contest sponsored by Inc. magazine, Ernst and Young, and Merrill Lynch) and the 1991 Ohio and Toledo Administrator of the Year. In 1993, she was honored as the Cleveland District and Toledo Small Business Person of the Year.

Mitten has lectured at national conferences, co-authored kindergarten curriculum, and worked as a child care consultant for several private and public organizations. She is a member and former chairperson of the Ohio Day-care Advisory Council and a board member of the Toledo Area Small Business Association, Toledo Chamber of Commerce, and the Ohio Small Business and Entrepreneurship Counsel. She also serves on the Governor's Ohio Families and Children First Task Force.

Mitten recently was named the 1994 Manager of the Year by the Sun Oil Chapter of the National Association. She has been featured in four national magazines, including Inc. and Executive Female.

More than 100 students will receive undergraduate degrees at the winter commencement exercises. Most of the graduates are from the LEAD (Leadership Education for Adults) program, which includes a number of business people from Quincy and the South Shore.

U.S. NAVY CONSTRUCTIONMAN Michael Pagan uses a long bar to remove wooden deck plates on the USS Constitution's gun deck. Unit members of MCB 27 stationed at the Naval Reserve Center in Quincy are among those participating in the refurbishing of the warship at the Charlestown Navy Yard.

Quincy Naval Reservists Help Refurbish USS Constitution

Unit members of MCB 27 stationed at the Naval Reserve Center in Quincy are assisting in overhaul efforts to preserve the USS Constitution in the Charlestown Navy Yard.

The reservists are using their construction skills to help the National Park Service which is currently engaged in the three-year effort to preserve and restore the vessel.

By becoming a part of the team to help the vessel celebrate her 200th birthday upon her return to the fleet in 1997, the naval reservist seabees had to demonstrate their talents by first building camels, according to BU1 Ernest Trombley, leading petty officer of the unit who is heading up efforts at the deck plate level.

"We proved to the Constitution and to the National Park Service that we could perform by constructing three camels in one and a half days," said Trombley. The camels, used as bumpers between a ship and a dock, are being utilized today, he said.

Officials said that because the ship's hull, frames and longitudinals are all made of wood, preservation and selective replacement of many of her structural members is periodically required, while at the same time, preservation of as much of the original content as possible is the goal.

"This ship is a part of history, and now I am a part of history," said CNCM Chris Elias, one of the unit's newest members. Painting, preservation and the removal of wooden decking are just a few of the tasks Elias and other unit members have been performing.

Originally commissioned in 1794, the USS Constitution is the world's oldest commissioned warship and its last major overhaul was in 1922. Since that time, 72 million people have walked the decks of "Old Ironsides" at her berth in the Charlestown Navy Yard.

How to select a hearing aid.

If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.

- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.

BUILDING BETTER CARS

There is new evidence that car manufacturers are listening to consumers when it comes to producing automobiles. A recent poll by the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence reveals that 88 percent of the 200 auto technicians polled thought that new cars were significantly better than they were only five years ago. The reasons most often cited for this development were improved technology, quality, and performance. Not so coincidentally, these same auto technicians said that reliability, comfort/ride, appearance and performance were the qualities that their customers sought in their new cars. Apparently, consumers' wishlists are being answered.

HINT: According to the above-mentioned auto technicians, unwanted noises in new cars were a source of concern among 15 percent of their customers.

Quincy Teen Mothers Program Seeks Donations

An open letter to the residents of Quincy:

Each year over 7,000 teenagers in Massachusetts give birth. Some of these teenagers live in Quincy. Without intervention, teen mothers tend to drop out of high school, go on welfare, and continue on welfare for 10 years or more. This creates a problem not only for young mothers and their babies, but for the taxpayer as well.

It is encouraging that many teens receiving the comprehensive services package offered by such programs as the Quincy Teen Mothers Program tend to earn their high school diploma, go on to college, and earn incomes without a need for public assistance. This is our goal.

For the past 15 years, the Quincy Teen Mothers Program has been an outstanding example of how a school system and the community work together to meet the educational and social problems caused by teenage pregnancy. Churches, businesses, veterans organizations, social service clubs, and committed individuals have all played a major role in the success of this unique program.

While the Quincy Public Schools fund most of the academic portion of the program, we depend upon grants and private donations to fund the remaining expenses such as the nursery staff, space rental, purchase of nursery and program equipment and supplies, and counseling.

We are always in need of financial contributions and each year we seek continuing support from past contributors and friends.

We invite you to please send us a check, however large or small, (made payable to the Quincy Teen Mothers Program) so that we may continue our work with young mothers and children in the City of Quincy.

Commends Dedication Of School Nurses

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Jan. 25 is National School Nurse Day. We want to take this opportunity to thank the dedicated nurses who play a vital role in enabling our children to attend school successfully.

These days, school nurses are seeing sicker children with a wider variety of problems than ever before. The increase in single-parent families, two-career households and economic stress has resulted in more parents relying on school nurses for management of their child's health.

Even children who arrive with families and health plans intact need school nurses when symptoms develop or environments need to be adjusted or treatment needs to be given.

Here at the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America, we know that a school nurse can make the difference between a child breathing and participating at school, or being repeated absentee. Often, by educating school staff, the school nurse can help prevent situations that induce asthmatic and allergic emergencies.

We look forward to the day when all schools have adequate school nurse coverage. We hope you will take time to support school nurses in your community.

A Thank You From The Red Cross

Editor, The Quincy Sun

The American Red Cross, South Area, would like to thank all the good people in the surrounding communities for a very successful Holiday Stocking Program 1994.

This year, we were able to distribute 2,298 stockings and gifts to the needy children of the area, 1,033 of those were personalized for an individual child, especially made for him or her.

To quote one of the grateful mothers, "thank you very much from the bottom of my heart for giving my kids some kind of hope....." That seems to say it all, I certainly can't express it any better, only to say, you, the community make it happen and we appreciate the generosity you show by serving your community through the Red Cross.

Health Crisis Won't Go Away

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

After a long, hard battle--and an estimated $300 spent by obstructionists to defeat health reform--the efforts of President Clinton and pro-reform groups like Families USA to reform the health care system have failed. For now.

The health crisis in Massachusetts or (anywhere else in this country) won't go away. In fact, because Congressional inaction gave insurance companies and other health profiteers carte blanche to raise their prices as fast as they want, things will get worse.

Families USA, the nonprofit, non-partisan consumer group founded by Katherine and Philippe Villiers of Concord has been fighting to improve America's health care system for more than a decade, and we're not going to stop now. But, until we succeed at passing comprehensive health reform, what are consumers to do?

To help consumers survive the health care crisis, Families USA has produced two new guides to the health care system: one national, the other geared specifically to consumers in the Boston metropolitan area. Both will help consumers avoid the quicksand in the health care jungle--and find their way to safety:

•"Health Care Choices for Today's Consumer"--the national edition--has a foreword by First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. The volume gives a consumer's-eye-view of the health care system. It tells consumers what to look for--and what to look out for--when buying health insurance that will truly protect your family, choosing the best hospital, selecting a good primary care doctor, keeping health costs under control, and coping with a long-term care crisis.

•"Health Care Choices in the Boston Area"--with a foreword by Sen. Ted Kennedy--arms consumers with specific resources to help them get the best care when they need it, including extensive listings of doctors, hospitals and health plans, and information about Massachusetts laws that protect consumers.

Both guides will arrive in bookstores next month. They may also be ordered by calling 1-800-699-6960.

Quincy's Susan Trubiano Finally Finds Her Calling

She Feels Self-Satisfaction As A Financial Planner

QUINCY'S SUSAN TRUBIANO, who has worked in various industries during her lifetime, has found self-satisfaction as a personal financial planner. She works for Financial Solutions Associates of Braintree.

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

After serving in the business community for over 25 years, Susan M. Trubiano, Personal Financial Planner, Financial Solutions Associates of Braintree, has finally found her calling.

Although she has worked in many different fields over the years, Trubiano has never felt the same self-satisfaction she has in her current position.

"I've held many corporate positions but I never felt as personally fulfilled as I do working as a financial planner," she said.

A four-year veteran of the financial planning community, Trubiano is a lifelong resident of Quincy who has worked in various industries including insurance, mutual funds, real estate, data processing and communications.

As a financial planner, Trubiano has advised many different people from a wide variety of financial backgrounds.

"Financial planning is for everyone," said Trubiano. "I work with a wide range of people, from those who have almost no money and want to build savings to those who have large sums of money and everyone in between."

In an attempt to reach out to the hearing impaired, Trubiano is currently enrolled in a sign language course.

"I feel they are a group of people who often get overlooked in the service oriented industries and certainly could use the help," she said.

Trubiano is currently enrolled in the Certified Financial Planner (CFP) Program. She also holds National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) Series 7 and Series 63 registrations allowing her to advise and transact financial matters. Additionally, Trubiano holds an Insurance Brokers License, a Real Estate Brokers license and is a Notary Public

As an independent financial planner, Trubiano is free to pick and choose from a wide variety of financial products.

"Being independent is important because I am not bound to any one specific company. I can pick and choose from many different companies, products and investment vehicles to find whatever best suits my clients' needs," she said.

Although she is experienced in various disciplines of financial planning, Trubiano finds retirement and estate planning to be her favorite.

"I find retirement and estate planning to be very challenging and exciting because it is an area of the law which changes often and is very personal," she said.

Confidentiality is an important element of Trubiano's working relationship with her clients.

"One of the most important issues in my business is confidentiality. When I work with a client everything is absolutely confidential and between us," she stressed.

Due to the high regard of confidentiality in which Trubiano works, it is not uncommon for her to find herself in some offbeat situations.

"Often I find myself in the same room as two or more family members or friends whom I work with, without each other knowing," she said.

Not all of Trubiano's client's prefer to keep their financial planning a secret. Very often families come together to discuss their financial needs and concerns.

It is the client/planner relationship and the ability to help people that gives Trubiano a special joy.

"What is especially rewarding for me is to be able to help two generations in one family and to see them grow both financially and emotionally," she noted.

According to Trubiano, trust is a fundamental aspect of a healthy client/planner relationship.

"If you can't trust the person or if you can't be completely open with each other, you cannot expect to have a positive working relationship. If either the prospective client or I feel that the element of trust is not obvious, then we shouldn't work together," she said.

Securities are offered through Royal Alliance Association, Inc., member NASD/SIPC.

To schedule an appointment with Trubiano, call 843-4850.

NO ONE IS to blame in the death of Matt Messing, Fr. James DiPerri of Sacred Heart Church told the 1,800 mourners who attended the funeral Mass at St. John's Church.

Matt Messing's Legacy: A Community United

their final respects in a Mass celebrated by Fr. James Curtin of the Our Lady of Good Counsel parish, the parish in which the Messing family lives.

Members of Messing's family, including his brothers Dennis Jr. and Tim, brought the casket into the overflowing church as the Quincy High Junior ROTC saluted at the entrance.

The buses which lined School St. after dropping off students at the church sent the message that this was one of the largest outpourings of emotion the city had ever seen. John Keohane of Keohane's Funeral Home said 2,500 people attended Messing's wake over the weekend.

In his homily, Fr. James DiPerri of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy tried to console the gathering of Messing's family, teammates who wore their blue and white hockey jerseys, concerned parents, and several hundred teens from the city's two high schools.

"What happened was an accident. There is no one to blame. If it did not happen then, it would have happened another time.

"We bring the body of Matthew into this church, but this is not Matthew. Those things we love about Matthew are in his soul. His body is resting but not his soul.

"Matt's heart ceased to beat, but his soul, the soul of eternity, did not cease."

Fr. DiPerri praised the city's jolted teens during the homily. "This city should be very proud of the dignity and reverence its young people have shown."

The death and the subsequent events were a painful reminder that though students at Quincy High and North Quincy High are often heated rivals, they have a great deal in common as teens coming of age in the same city. The crowds of boys and girls from both schools who wept openly at the church and at the gravesite will be the enduring image of the day.

During the eulogy, School Superintendent Eugene Creedon said the death of Messing was felt on both sides of the city.

"The past few days at Quincy Public Schools have been most difficult for staff, principals, teachers, students and, most of all, parents - we share a common loss."

As he looked at the students who filled the church beyond capacity, Creedon spoke of the adult way in which they handled the loss. "To you, the boys and girls of Quincy Public Schools, we say thank you, thank you for your love and caring, but most of all, for your example. The time has come when we must say goodbye, Matt, but we will never forget you."

"The death of Matthew Messing has touched the heart and soul of this city in a way I've never seen before," said Mayor James Sheets, who attended the funeral along with a number of city officials. "The response of his family, and all those involved with the school system, has been outstanding. Certainly no one who's been involved with this is ever going to forget it."

Quincy High School principal Lloyd Hill, in an interview following the funeral, said, "This was a significant loss. It bonded the two schools together. The rivalry will continue and things will eventually move on, but we will not forget Matt. Both schools felt the loss heavily. We've had other losses in our school before, but this was an accident in a sport that resulted in the death of a healthy young athlete."

Messing was remembered by friends and classmates as an enthusiastic young man who always managed to bring smiles to the faces of those around him.

Scott Pyer, a Quincy High sophomore and a close friend of Messing's, remembered "all the laughs you use to have with him. All he wanted to do was to have you laugh, that's why it hurts so bad that he's not here anymore."

John Breska, a sophomore at Quincy High who played baseball with Messing, called him "a great kid, a funny kid. He had no enemies at all, was a good student. He always had something to say about everyone, he always cheered you up if you were sad."

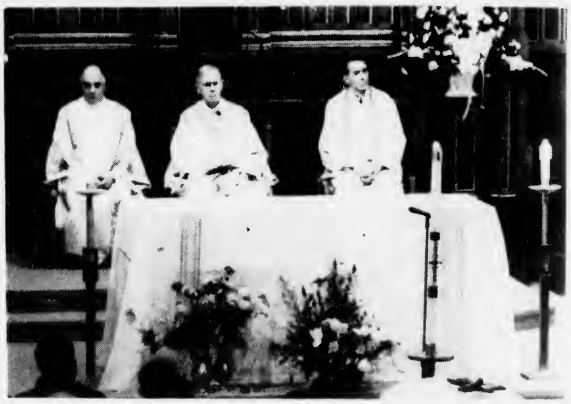
Quincy High freshman Jeff Verlicco said that Messing was the type of kid who was friendly from the moment you met him. "He was a friend of my brother's and one night he just called me to go play basketball. We became best friends for a long time. I didn't hang out with him as much anymore, but I saw him the night before the game and he was ragging on everyone - has was a good kid, though."

Bob Sylvia said, "I think Matty's a good, decent kid. I think there's a heaven, and I think Matty's there."

Bill Morrill, owner of Creative Fairs, for whom Messing worked said: "He was a super kid. You couldn't get a better kid."

Matt's brother, Tim, also works for Morrill. "He's a great kid, too. Their parents brought them up the way kids should be brought up. I feel sad for them and the family."

Many people close to the Messing family were awed by the strength they showed throughout the ordeal.



TAKING PART in the funeral Mass for Matt Messing were, Rev. Deacon Joseph Papile of St. John's, Fr. James Curtin of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church and Fr. James DiPerri of Sacred Heart Church.

"The worst has happened," said Sylvia. "For every parent, coach and player it's a nightmare, everyone has to cope with it. But people can't understand the courage the Messing family has shown. Dennis Messing (Matt's father) has been helping this healing process. He's been a great, unifying force through all of this."

Impact Quincy Director Mitch Finnegan agreed: "I think the family set the tone for all this - it could have easily gone another way."

Fr. DiPerri directed these words to Mr. Messing during the homily: "Despite the trauma of it and the loss and grief that we feel - and you feel more than any other - the ability to be wise, to reach out to others when lesser men would have not, you did that."

Mr. Messing's most touching act was calling Wingate to let him know that he did not hold him responsible for what had happened to his son, that it was just an unfortunate accident.

One could see the bond between Messing and Wingate as they tearfully gripped each other beside Matthew's casket which lay covered in flowers. The victims, one a young athlete from North Quincy, the other, a father from Quincy, now have a great deal in common.

"If Matt Messing left anything behind, he left a unified city," said an exhausted Sylvia Monday evening. "I think we can all be proud saying that we responded in this way."

Quincy Community TV Will Not Show Quincy-NQ Game

Quincy Community Television, which taped last week's Quincy-North Quincy hockey game, will not air or release copies of the footage to the press.

"Out of respect for the family of Matthew Messing, we have decided not to provide footage of the tragic incident which claimed the youngster's life," Continental Cablevision of Quincy Acting General Manager Joseph Hayes said.

"We have had numerous requests for the footage from local and regional media. We understand their requests but nonetheless, because of our sensitivity and respect to the family, the footage will not be released," Hayes added.

A decision not to provide media with the footage was made shortly after the tragic incident which claimed the life of Messing. Messing, a 16-year-old Quincy High sophomore, died of apparent cardiac arrest after a routine check by a North Quincy player last Wednesday evening.

The game was not broadcast live by QCTV Channel 3.

Two Funds For Messing

Two funds have been set up in the name of Matthew Messing.

Messing To Be Honored By City Council Feb. 6

Fallen Quincy High School sophomore Matthew Messing will be remembered by the City Council at its Feb. 6 meeting.

Messing, 16, died Jan. 18 after being knocked to the ice at Quincy Youth Arena while playing in a game against North Quincy High.

City Council President Michael Cheney said at press time he plans to have the silent prayer observed at every council meeting dedicated to Messing. He has also asked Continental Cablevision to prepare a special photo of Messing to be shown during its live broadcast of the prayer at the beginning of the meeting.

"On behalf of the City Council, we wish to express our deepest sympathy for the Messing family," said Cheney. "We appreciate the courage that they have demonstrated during this difficult time, and in the words of (School Supt.) Eugene Creedon (who gave the eulogy during Messing's funeral Monday), we thank them for sharing Matthew with us during this time."

Cheney commended the students of both high schools as well as all the city's middle schools for the way they have conducted themselves since Messing's death.

"Our hearts go out to them as well," he said. "Our students have made us very proud."

Cheney added that the council would also like to thank all others involved, including school teachers, administrators and counselors, for their actions since the tragedy.

Matt Mourned Across The Country

The death of Matthew Messing last Wednesday sent a shock wave through the tightly-knit hockey community that was felt far beyond the Quincy limits.

As word of the loss spread across the nation last week, the Quincy Youth Arena, the site of Messing's final hockey game, served as a lighting rod of condolences.

"The first call came Thursday morning," said Arena director Beverly Reinhardt, "I came in at 6:30 expecting the phone to be ringing off the hook. The first call was from the mothers of the captain of the Dennis-Yarmouth hockey team. She said 'I don't even know the boy, but I haven't been able to stop crying.' She said the team wanted to do something for him.

"The second call came from Lawrenceville, New Jersey, a woman whose son was a goaltender who had no apparent health problems but collapsed and died on the ice four years ago. His heart was twice the normal size. He died instantly. She wanted the Messing's address so she could sit down and write them a letter."

Reinhardt received several other calls, some from as far away as Florida and California, from people offering help. "This accident just seems to have touched so many people," she said.

The Boston Bruins' 1995 season-opener Sunday against Philadelphia was preceded by a 30-second moment of silence in honor of Messing in which the 14,000-plus at the Boston Garden fell deafeningly silent.

Bruins Adam Oates and Cam Neely visited the Messing family Saturday night to offer their condolences.

The Quincy Youth Hockey B travel teams wore black armbands while playing in a tournament on Cape Cod over the weekend. The tourney was also preceded by a moment of silence.

As members of the hockey community, we have to deal with it, it is the ultimate tragedy," said Reinhardt.

QHS Hockey Team's Return To Ice On Hold

The question of when the Quincy High School hockey team will return to the ice is yet to be answered.

"We have to let the boys get over the hurdles in front of them," said head coach Bob Sylvia. "I honestly don't know what they are thinking."

The season was interrupted when Matthew Messing died following a clean check on the open ice during the first period of Quincy High's game against North Quincy last Wednesday. The death led to the cancellation of all sporting events at both high schools as teens mourned the loss of the popular youngster.

The other winter sports were scheduled to resume Wednesday, Jan. 25, but the fate of the team most devastated by the loss, the Quincy High hockey team, is yet to be determined.

"We'll sit down with the boys and see what they want to do," said Sylvia, who added that he had not experienced such a shock in his over 30 years of being involved with organized hockey, both as a player and a coach.

The team planned to practice Tuesday (Jan. 25) afternoon and may take the ice Friday against Plymouth South at 2:45 p.m.

Monday night Sylvia said the Tuesday practice would likely be a "very informal, back-to-the-game type of scrimmage. I think the kids will want to get back on the ice.

"But," added the coach, "I don't know what you draw on during a time like this. We're learning from this."

While lamenting the loss of Messing, Sylvia feels that it is in the best interest of the kids to get back into a normal routine. "Death is not a part of any game, but it is part of life," he said.

Fearful Moments At Basketball Game, Too

Confusion reigned at the Quincy High gymnasium last Wednesday following the Quincy-North Quincy girls basketball game.

"It was horrible. It was just a nightmare, that whole night," said Quincy High girls' basketball coach Diann Abela of a tragedy-filled night that could have been worse.

As word of the death of hockey player Matthew Messing spread through the gym, Quincy High basketball player Kerri Connolly fell to the floor with a severe asthma attack.

"The girls were just shaking hands and I saw Kerri leaning against her father," said Abela. "As I went to give her her inhaler she collapsed. She was out for a while. Her pulse was dropping, her blood pressure was dropping."

"It was very, very unnerving," said North Quincy head coach Ken Panaro. "You have a young lady sprawled out on the floor, blood pressure low, unconscious, plus the murmurs [about Messing] going through the crowd. The girls were very nervous."

Abela said the collapse was unrelated to news of Messing's death, which begin to filter in toward the end of the game. "I don't think she heard until afterwards," said Abela.

Nurses who were in attendance came to the aid of Connolly. They put the girl in ice packs and begin to administer mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"The nurses were really worried. She never came through. She was turning blue. When the ambulance came they gave her an IV and that helped," said Abela.

Connolly appeared unconscious as the ambulance took her to Quincy Hospital.

Connolly was not the only basketball player to be taken to the hospital that evening. North Quincy's Kim Healy, who injured her already bad knee late in the game, was taken by ambulance to New England Medical Center. "They took her [there] right after the game," said Panaro. "They immobilized her knee and put it in an air cast."

Healy could miss several weeks of play. "It's a severe knee sprain. She's waiting to see the orthopedic doctor before we know what to do," said Panaro Tuesday afternoon. "It's still swollen. We figure she'll miss about three weeks.

Connolly was released from the hospital last Thursday and will return to the court this week.

Enrollment For State College Saving Program Begins Feb. 1

Enrollment for the Massachusetts College Saving Program, or U. Plan, will be held Feb. 1 through March 31.

The U. Plan is a state-sponsored savings program that allows parents to lock in tomorrow's tuition at today's rates and offers all that families want in a pre-paid tuition program.

Under the program, families can make either a minimum lump-sum purchase of $300 a year or sign up for a $25 minimum monthly installment plan. The investment is used to purchase bonds representing a fixed percentage of tuition that will be guaranteed by participating colleges and universities, regardless of future tuition increases.

Families' participation in the U. Plan is tax advantaged because the plan uses General Obligation Bonds.

The U. Plan is administered on behalf of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the 67 public and private colleges and universities by the Massachusetts Education Financing Authority (MEFA) and available exclusively at Shawmut Bank.

For more information about the program or to receive a free enrollment kit, call 1-800-449-MEFA or visit any of over 350 Shawmut Bank offices.

Study: Quincy Historic Sites Could Become Part Of New National Park

The city's historic sites, along with others in neighboring communities, will be able to be linked with the Boston Harbor Islands, according to a new study by the National Park Service.

Congressman Gerry Studds and top Park Service officials released the study, which recommends the Harbor Islands be made a national park, on Monday.

Mayor James Sheets, who has long championed the cause of linking Quincy's historic sites with the islands, missed a meeting in Boston at which the study's results were released in order to attend the funeral of Quincy High School sophomore Matthew Messing. Upon learning of the results, however, Sheets said he sees a bright future for the city's tourism program.

"It's quite obvious that Quincy is going to be a major part of the National Park Service program for the Greater Boston area," he said. "I definitely think that Quincy will be a port-of-call for anyone going to the Harbor Islands."

GERRY STUDDS

The 70-page study concludes: "The Boston Harbor Islands meet the Secretary of the Interior's criteria for national significance, suitability, and feasibility for inclusion in the national park system...Their configuration, their assemblage of significant natural and cultural features, and their proximity to a major metropolitan area create a resource that has no parallel in the United States."

Studds said the study's results are good news for Quincy as well as other local communities.

"The recommendation allows us to proceed toward our goal of expanding tourism to the Harbor Islands, linking them by water with nearby historical sites, such as those in Quincy and Hull," Studds said. "It provides the impetus to go ahead with our vision: that visitors could someday take a boat to the islands to camp, hike or explore Civil War ruins--then continue, again by boat, to see other tourist destinations in Boston, the South Shore or North Shore."

Studds and Congressman Peter Torkildsen were recently named members of the National Parks Subcommittee of the House Natural Resources Committee. At a news conference Monday, the two lawmakers discussed legislation Studds will soon introduce to implement the study's recommendation to make the islands a National Recreation Area.

For two-and-a-half years, Studds has been a prime mover in making the Harbor Islands a national park. He has worked closely with private citizens and public officials at all levels of government to conserve this incredible natural resource and realize its economic possibilities as a significant boost for tourism for the entire region.

Studds authored the 1992 legislation that directed the Park Service to conduct the 18-month Harbor Islands study released Monday.

"These islands are an absolute treasure, but for the most part are undiscovered," Studds said. "Making the Harbor Islands a National Recreation Area will attract more visitors to see these gems. Their natural beauty and rich history offer 3 million people abundant opportunities for recreational and cultural experiences."

Studds said the proposal has the enthusiastic support of everyone involved because it will increase tourism and conservation.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, who visited the islands in July 1993, just before the study began, and again last January, said, "We have the makings of a very big and very important concept here. The Boston Harbor Islands radiate out to an area rich in maritime history."

Local officials on the South Shore are also eager for the proposal to go forward. Several Hull officials who accompanied on a boat tour of the Harbor Islands last fall believe ferry service between Hull and one or more of the islands will boost the town's tourism.

Asked what it would cost to make the Boston Harbor Islands a national park, Studds spokesman Brendan Daly said a number of figures have been brought up, but the most recent "rough estimate" he heard was $8 million.

"But I don't know the details of what that would include," said Daly.

Results of a separate three-year National Park Service study released last month indicated that Quincy is among the state's leaders in historic attractions, but suggested formation of a non-profit agency called the Quincy Heritage Compact in order to link those sites with one another and to coordinate tourism efforts.

Quincy, Abela Get First Win

The good news out of Quincy High Wednesday night was that the girls' basketball team picked up their first win, 45-38, over North Quincy High.

The win was the first for rookie head coach Diann Abela.

"I think the girls are playing a lot better," said Abela. "They have a positive feeling. They know how it feels to win and they enjoy that feeling."

It looked like it would be yet another long evening for the Presidents (1-9) when North Quincy (5-6) jumped to a quick 11-1 lead to open the contest.

However, Quincy responded with their best display of basketball this season, outscoring the Red Raiders handily and taking a 25-15 lead into the break. They held North to just four points over the last 10 minutes of the half.

"I haven't seen them [the Quincy girls] play as aggressive as they did Wednesday night. It was not just one girl, it was everybody," said Abela. When asked if that had anything to do with the intensity of the Quincy-North rivalry, Abela replied that it should not matter. "We need the same attitude going into every game."

Kerri Connolly again sparked the Quincy effort with 18 points. Freshman Erin Barry netted 10.

Red Raider Kim Healy paced her club with 10 points despite suffering a sprain to her already bad knee that will leave her out for an indefinite period of time. She will likely undergo physical therapy.

Amey Riley scored nine points for North, who were hindered by the loss of star player Sara Stanton who was out with the flu. Stanton is currently third in eastern Mass. in scoring with 26.3 points per game.

Despite winning her first game as a high school coach, Abela was unable to enjoy it because of the events that unfolded Wednesday evening - the death of Matthew Messing and Connolly and Healy being taken to the hospital by ambulance following the game. "I couldn't enjoy the win, not for a split second, there was just too much going on. I'm happy for the girls more than anything else," she said.

Connolly suffered a severe asthma attack after the game while Healy needed to get her knee looked at. She hurt the knee with three minutes left in the game.

QUINCY'S NOREEN McBride is the captain of the Suffolk University women's basketball team as a junior. She is fifth in scoring in the Northeast Women's Athletic Conference with 17.3 points per game.

North Frosh Girls Top Quincy

The North Quincy High freshman girls' basketball team trailed Quincy High, 12-11, at the half, but turned in a fine second-half performance to pull out a 34-22 win.

Coach Arthur Good felt his Red Raiders (8-2 overall, 6-0 OCL) came out expecting the Quincy team to fall over and let them win. It was not until the second half that they realized this never happens in a Quincy-North Quincy battle.

NQ's Kris Keohane scored nine of her 13 points in the second half, including a three-pointer that proved the back-breaker. .

In all, seven Red Raiders scored. Kerry Skehan and Maura O'Brien netted six points each.

Jessica Dibona led the Quincy club with nine points, including a long-range three-pointer.

Two-hundred fifty people watched the struggle between the archrivals.

Red Raider freshman Laurie Flynn recently got the call to play in the big show under varsity coach Ken Panaro.

"She was brought up for her quickness and ability to learn. She has good size (5 feet 9 inches), shoots the ball well, and biggest of all, she anticipates well, she has instinct which is very important in a basketball player," said Panaro.

Flynn was averaging 16.1 points per game through nine outings with the freshmen squad.

Chris Murphy and Tim O'Connor managed to find the net for Quincy in the tightly-contested struggle.

John Mooney played a great game in the cage. He made several huge stops in the waning moments of the contest to preserve the tie.

Joe Callahan, Matt Miller, Pat Lahar, Jon Paquette, Martin McGrath and Dan Jones played great two-way games.

Maggio, Squirt A's Cruise Past Weymouth

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt A team cruised past Weymouth, 8-1, in a state playdown game at Pilgrim Rink in Hingham.

Killer Bees Win 2 Out Of 3

The Quincy Youth Hockey Killer (Mite) Bees, sponsored by the Quincy Firefighters Association, won two out of three games at the 10th annual Coca Cola tournament at the Gallo Rink on Cape Cod.

The first contest was a 5-0 stinging of the South Shore Seahawks.

Jake O'Donnell, a threat to score anytime he steps on the ice, netted the game's first goal with an unassisted tally in the first period. Myles Clancy also scored in the first off a feed from Shamrock Linemate Liam Powers.

O'Donnell lit the lamp a second time in the middle period, again unassisted.

In the third goals were scored by Powers (from Clancy) and Brendan Linnane (from Taylor Reinhardt).

The Killer Bees also had an easy go of it as they buzzed past Barnstable, 5-1.

Danny Sullivan wowed the crowd when he recorded a natural hat trick in the third period. Assists on two of the goals were made by Jonathon O'Connor and Gene Nazzaro. Powers also scored in the final period thanks to a well-placed feed from Clancy.

O'Donnell scored the Quincy goal in the second period thanks to an assist by Sullivan.

Coach Lewis pulled netminder Nick Manning with 51 seconds left to play, but the Bees were unable to capitalize with the extra attacker on the ice.

Offensive plays by Mark Lewis and Brianna Nolan had the wings of the Mom and Dad Bees flapping on several occasions. Nazzaro was able to slide up from his defensive position and cover the attack a number of times.

George Snowling and Pat Maloney again manhandled the opposition, giving Manning plenty of time to eye the new skates worn by Matt (Flash) Haskins, who was rumored to have slept with the new blades on.

Hard-hitting Danny Davis did a bang-up job along the boards.

The week's results:

College girls:

Sullivan outfoxed the Wolverines, 29-26.

Barrie Koch nailed three of four clutch free throws to secure the win. Kristen Bowes led the Sullivan offense and Corrine Sullivan had a brilliant all-around game.

The Wolverines were paced by the rebounding of Sheila Cannon and the solid play of Rachel O'Hara and Colleen McDougall

Marcia Stedman scored a whopping 20 points for Grazioso as they beat Shea, 27-20.

Liuzzo cruised past McGrath/Ridge, 30-14, behind the great all-around play of Lynette Alessi.

Melissa Pulera shot well for the winning club and Theresa Ryan moved the ball with style.

Allyson McGrath, Casey Ridge and Carey Doolen hustled and rebounded but could not get the ball to fall.

Rookie Boys:

William Gardner scored the winning bucket in the nail-biter. Sean Drew's great rebounding and Dennis Conway's hustling defense helped seal the victory.

The Dolbeare brothers, Mike and Chris, and ace defender Darouin Chiu played well for the Raptors.

The Hornets held on to foil a Bulls comeback, 20-17.

College Boys:

It was a nerve-racking week in the College Boys division with all four games decided by three points or less.

Fourteen points by John Fidalgo led the Tarheels to a 31-30 win over the Yellow Jackets.

Jackie Liuzzo grabbed 12 boards in the winning effort. Ryan Graeber played stellar defense.

Phil Olivera hit the shot for the Wolverines that sent the game into the extra session. Chris Doherty and Shawn Jafarzadeh also played well.

The Minutemen topped St. Ann's Holleran in a wild west shootout.

Pro Boys:

For the second week in a row, LeBlanc iced a narrow victory with some clutch shooting from the charity stripe.

Cheney Has Doubts, D'Aprix Optimistic Over Decelle Coming

2000 is actively seeking tenants for the entire downtown area and that the Child World/Cummings site will be renovated regardless of who moves in.

"We do have a marketing plan and full renovation in place, make no mistake about that," he said.

D'Aprix added that he hopes to see some action on the Decelle deal within the next two to three weeks. Quincy 2000 has a backup plan to look at other tenants for the site, he said, but he remains confident that such measures won't be necessary.

"We have had a contingency plan all along, but we don't even think that's (implementing the plan) going to happen," he said.

Attempts to reach Burlington Coat Factory spokesman Ric Bramble in New Jersey were unsuccessful.

MICHAEL McFARLAND

McFarland is married to the former Martha Sinclair of Barre, Vt. They live with their children, Erin, Ryan and Tara on Summit Ave.

"The addition of Mr. McFarland to the Board of Directors gives Colonial a talented young man with business experience, know-how, and a keen knowledge of community needs," Guarnieri said.

Major Restructuring At The Co-Operative

The Co-Operative Bank of Concord with branches in Quincy announces a major restructuring of its operations.

It is designed to make the bank more responsive to its customers, place greater emphasis on commercial banking activities, and improve profitability through a reduction of operating expenses and increase in revenues.

As part of the restructuring, the bank is exiting the mortgage banking business and eliminating a number of management positions in its retail banking, finance, and administrative functions.

Twenty-seven positions, with an estimated $1 million annual compensation expense, have been eliminated. The bank will take a fourth quarter pre-tax charge of approximately $500,000. This charge will reduce fourth quarter earnings by approximately nine cents per share.

The bank is being reorganized into four major divisions: commercial lending, led by Senior Vice President James A. McBride; consumer banking, led by Senior Vice President Lisa Bergemann; legal/administration, led by Executive Vice President Josiah Cushing II; and finance/operations, led by Senior Vice President and CFO Michael Gilles, all of whom report directly to the chairman and CEO, David Bradbury.

"The decision to discontinue our mortgage banking business, producing mortgage loans for sale in the secondary market, was made after several months of study and evaluation," said Bradbury. "While the operation has been profitable during 19 of the 21 years that we have been operating as a mortgage bank, 1994 was unprofitable. Our outlook for 1995 is for a continuation of operating losses in the origination of residential mortgages.

"The Bank is retaining its profitable mortgage servicing operation which currently services approximately $650 million of loans for other investors. The Consumer Banking Division will continue to offer residential loan products and services through its retail banking network in Eastern Massachusetts," said Bradbury.

"The reorganization will allow us to concentrate on developing our commercial banking business. We have been pleased with the growth in our commercial business since the acquisition of Depositor Trust Company. With the continuing consolidation of the banking industry and the concentration of banking assets held by large multi-state organizations, we are finding an increasing number of business owners expressing interest in doing business with a local community bank. We feel that we are well-positioned to meet the needs of these prospective customers with our full range of deposit and loan products."

The Co-Operative Bank of Concord, with assets of $780 million, is a state-chartered, FDIC-insured co-operative bank with headquarters in Acton, Massachusetts and 16 retail banking offices in Middlesex, Norfolk, and Plymouth counties.

3 Councillors Support So. Artery Mini-Mall

Three city councillors have voiced support for Stop & Shop's proposed mini-mall at the old Duane junkyard on Southern Artery.

The three--Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, whose ward includes the site, Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and Councillor-at-Large Joseph LaRaia--said at a neighborhood meeting at City Hall Monday night they think the proposal is the best plan they have seen for the property.

Kolson said after the meeting that one reason he likes the design of the project is because it will not look like a typical impersonal mall.

"That was one of the things we worked on," he said. "We don't want it to be an obtrusive eyesore or stick out like a sore thumb. I think it will be a very handsome piece of property."

The inclusion of a landscaped walkway and other features the mini-mall a "family-type" place to visit, Kolson said. He added that the project will bring about $150,000 in property taxes, 250 construction jobs and 150 permanent jobs.

Kolson also commended architect John Catlan, the designer of the project and landscape architect Mary Smith for the work they have done.

"They've done an excellent job," he said.

Some activists seeking to preserve the Souther Tide Mill, located a canal from the Duane yard, fear that a mall will ruin their hopes of turning the area into a historic attraction.

But all three councillors, including DeCristofaro, who fought to save the tide mill from destruction, said the two can co-exist. They said the colonial-style mini-mall is a better match for the tide mill than the high-rise condominiums and larger mall that were once planned for the site.

The plan, unveiled to about 10 people in attendance at the meeting, even drew praise from one of the mill owner's heirs, Ted Holt of Quincy. Holt is the nephew of the late Eleanor Cottle.

Stop & Shop wants to apply for a special permit from the City Council, as well as Quincy Conservation Commission approval, to build in a floodplain.

To comply with state waterfront guidelines, the property will have a landscaped walkway along the river, a pier where commercial fishing boats can moor, and a shack for fishing boats to store gear.

Catlan said the buildings closest to the mill would have gray, weathered shingles and peaked, gabled roofs to reflect some of the tide mill's design features.

One restaurant would be separated from the mall by a brick pavilion to give it a smaller, seaside market-type feel. The other would be modified at preservationists' requests so that it will not clash with the tide mill.

However, Joe Chetwynd, founder of Friends of the Souther Tide Mill, said any development on the Duane site could limit plans to turn the mill into a historic park, even though the two properties are owned by different parties.

Cottle's estate has not yet decided how to dispose of the mill property. The city has sought for years to save the mill, has urged the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) to purchase it, and is studying how to preserve.

Chetwynd said the possibility of developing the area in that manner is now "cut in half," and added that the mill land will get "dismembered for parking and pretty soon end up diminished in its potential."

LaRaia said if money were no object, the city would like to own the Duane land and turn it into a waterfront park, but added that since that is unlikely the Stop & Shop proposal is better for the site than the construction of condominiums.

Representatives from Lappen Auto Supply, also on Southern Artery, questioned the drainage on the site. Another resident at the meeting raised traffic concerns.

Kolson said Stop & Shop would add a new traffic signal at the entrance to the property at a cost of about $260,000.

Kolson added that while he and the City Council would look carefully at Stop & Shop's traffic reports when they review the project, but he expects that Southern Artery will be able to handle the extra traffic from the mall.

The council will likely address the project sometime next month after the Conservation Commission has had its say, Kolson said.

At press time, Mayor James Sheets was in Washington D.C. at the U.S. Conference of Mayors. The mayor said before he left, however, that he will reserve judgement on the matter until after the City Council has concluded its deliberations on the matter.

Sheets, who noted that he does not support taking the Duane site off the city's tax roll, added that the Planning Department is conducted the $18,000 study on how to best preserve the tide mill and the other five acres of property. The study was paid for out of the city's federally-funded Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) account, Sheets said.

ARE YOU AT RISK OF OSTEOPOROSIS?

Osteoporosis runs in families, and someday scientists may be able to predict who is most likely to develop the crippling bone-loss condition through genetic testing. Today, however, the best we can do is recognize risk factors and take steps to minimize them as much as possible. Among the conditions that tend to speed bone loss are excessive drinking (more than three or four alcoholic drinks per day), heavy smoking, menopause before the age of 45, use of corticosteroids or anti-seizure drugs, excess thyroid hormone, and stomach surgery or ulcers. In addition, very thin people are more susceptible than heavier people due to lighter skeletal structures, and Caucasians are usually more at risk than people of color.

P.S. Men get osteoporosis too, although only about one-third as often as women do.

Exercising frequently throughout your life is one protection against bone loss. For more information on this topic, see your physician. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself emphasize caring for the patient, rather than simply treating the disease. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. Office hours are by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. I am also board certified in cardiology and internal medicine. Call 472-2550 for an appointment. Your health is our concern!

As Part Of $9 Million Project

$1 Million Fund Drive Planned For Library Addition

By MICHAEL WHALEN

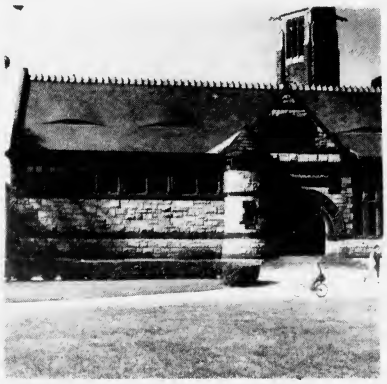
Thomas Crane Public Library officials are planning a $1 million fund-raising campaign for a proposed $9 million addition to its main library building in Quincy Center.

Library Director Ann McLaughlin said at press time that the idea behind the program is to show Mayor James Sheets and the rest of the city that the library is sincere in its desire to help with the burden of funding the project.

"The (library's board of) trustees feel that it's very important to show how committed they are to the project," said McLaughlin. "They want to assist the city in coming up with as much money as possible."

She added, however, that while raising money is the primary goal, she also sees the program as a way for supporters of the library to own a piece of it. Officials plan to sell commemorative gift items such as T-shirts, posters, bookmarks and others, with old furniture from the library being another possibility.

"We plan to develop an advertising campaign, and we hope to generate a lot of community interest," she said. "The library has so many supporters, and we hope the program will be a way to let everybody be part of the process and have a piece of the building."



THE THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

McLaughlin noted that the program will also include a number of other special events, although none have been planned at this point. Members of the library's Development Committee will organize the fund-raising effort, she said.

Committee members include library trustees Arthur Ciampa, John Luon-

Sheets Warns After Washington Trip

MWRA Water, Sewer Rates Could Rise

The city's Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) water and sewer rates could end up rising as a result of the new Republican Congress elected in November's landslide election, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor made his comments after discussions he held with Congressman Gerry Studds and other top officials during the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Washington, D.C. last week.

Sheets said based on conversations he had with Studds and other officials at the capital, he thinks that a total of $100 million originally set aside at the end of former President George Bush's administration to help alleviate the burden taxpayers feel as a result of the rates may be cut from President Bill Clinton's budget.

"It's my belief that the $100 million may very well show up in the president's budget, but it could very well be cut," he said. "I think we could lose the federal funding for the MWRA rates."

Sheets said the city, Studds, and Gov. William Weld will continue to lobby for the funds, which are earmarked for the Boston Harbor Cleanup. Without the federal aid, the brunt of the cost of the harbor project is being paid for by water and sewer ratepayers in the MWRA district.

The mayor added, however, that he is not sure that the lobbying of city and state officials will be enough to save the money.

Currently, annual MWRA rates paid by an average family of four in the city total between $750 and $800, according to Sheets. Federal monies have helped keep the rates leveled off, but the loss of the $100 million could be an increase of between 2 and 3 percent for the average Quincy family, he estimated.

Still, Sheets said that there is no guarantee that the federal money is a lost cause. He also noted that even if the money does slip through the city's fingertips, the effects will not be felt for about 18 months.

As far as other city projects are concerned, the mayor said he is unsure how they will affected now that the Republicans have control of both the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives. Despite talk of a breakdown in communications between Weld and Washington, D.C. on the subject of the return of shipbuilding to the Fore River shipyard, Sheets stressed he is convinced the industry will return to the city and that

Ayers, Phelan: No Shaw's Vote Until Traffic Concerns Addressed

A proposal to build a new Shaw's Supermarket at the site of the former Boston Gear Works on the North Quincy-Wollaston line has been temporarily put on hold.

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan said the council will take no action on the proposal until traffic-related and other concerns of the neighborhood have been addressed.

"The brakes are on until further traffic studies are performed and evaluated," said Ayers, who added that he hopes to reassure residents convinced that the project is already a done deal. "Our main concerns are traffic, the safety of our children and the integrity of the neighborhood."

Ayers and Phelan said they have been working with business owners in their wards who have voiced concerns about the Shaw's proposal.

"Most of the people I have spoken with are opposed to the size of the project and its location," said Ayers. "The fact that the existing proposal offers only one entrance/exit is an area of extreme concern to the traffic congestion. Impatient drivers will seek alternatives routes, thus endangering our neighborhood and the safety of our children."

Ayers and Phelan said they intend to ask the council to view residents' concerns as a "top priority," adding that no vote will be taken on the matter until the resident's concerns are addressed by Shaw's.

Sprinkler Probe Leads To Change In Dates For Boarding House Renewals

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Because of an ongoing investigation into sprinkler systems in Quincy's boarding houses, the Quincy License Board has voted to change the renewal dates on all Lodging House licenses in the City of Quincy from Dec. 31 to March 31.

Chairman Joseph Shea said so many licenses expire on Dec. 31 it is "difficult to enforce the law" with such a time limit.

All owners of boarding houses have been mailed a letter concerning the sprinkler law which went into existence in 1992 The law calls for the sprinkling of all lodging and boarding houses when more than six people live in the unit.

Shea said "the party's over" if the boarding houses do not have sprinklers by March 31, or are in violation of any health codes, their licenses will not be renewed. If there are less than six occupants in the units, licenses can be renewed only if other health and building codes are met.

Shea said that so far he has had about 27 favorable responses from boarding houses who have complied with the law, with several more to. comply.. Shea referred to a boarding house fire back in 1993, in which Police Chief Frank Mullen said "public safety is first" and added that particular fire is "in the back of our minds"

Board Gives Auto Center Warning To 'Clean Up'

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board issued a 30 day warning to the owner of L & J.'s Auto Center, 165 Hancock St. to "clean up": the area and reduce the number of cars displays from 20 to no more than 12.

The warning followed complaints concerning a failure to keep the property clean, abandoned vehicles, illegal signs posted on the fence and allowing a second business to operate without the approval of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

License Board Agent, Det. Sgt. Richard Laracy said the property had "gone downhill" since owner Leslie Jurczuk took over the business in 1992. Laracy said that many "homemade signs "were put up illegally in violation of the building department.

Jurczuk told the board that he had already started to take down the signs.

Building Inspector Matt Mulvey said "half the property looks like it belongs in a junkyard" in which fire chief Thomas Gorman added "If it looks like a junkyard, people aren't going to come in to buy a car."

Jurczuk was also told to replant in the spring some of the trees that were dug up.since he took over.

A second business called Sound Design, also owned by Jurczuk placed on the side, of the building, was established without the consent of the Board of Appeals Jurczuk explained that the name Sound Design was placed on the window to try to "improve business:", and is in fact the same business and not a new one.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the license board will ask Jurczuk to appear before the board at its first meeting in March. The board will then review stipulations agreed in the contract and whether or not they are being complied with.

Your Social Security

Changes In Household Workers Reporting

By CAROL BOYLE

If you hire someone to work in your home, a new law makes it easier for you to pay Social Security taxes on their earnings.

You'll report the earnings once a year instead of quarterly and, depending on how much you employ outside help, you'll pay less tax. Workers covered by this law include maids, child care providers, gardeners, and others who provide household services. Workers under age 18 are exempt unless household employment, including baby-sitting their main occupation.

Effective with 1994 earnings, no Social Security tax is due unless the earnings are at least $1,000. In those cases where a household worker was paid less than $1,000 during the year, you and your employer will receive refunds for the Social Security credits. If you have questions about the changes in reporting household employment and paying the Social Security taxes, call the Internal Revenue Service's toll-free number, 1-800-829-1040.

BENEFICIARIES CAN EARN MORE IN 1995

The amount of money that Social Security beneficiaries can earn in 1995 and still receive their full benefit has increased. Beneficiaries between the ages of 65 and 69 can earn up to $11,280 without having any benefits withheld. For every $3 that a beneficiary earns over this limit, $1 is withheld from his or her benefit. In 1994, the limit was $11,160.

For people under age 65, the limit will be $8,160. For every $2 a person under 65 earns over this amount, $1 is withheld from benefits. In 1994, the earnings limit was $8,040.

People age 70 or older who continue to work do not have benefits withheld no matter how much they earn.

CHECK SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER ON W-2

Social Security is urging workers to check their Social Security numbers and names on the W-2 forms (statement of earnings) employers are required to give employees before the end of January.

You should compare the number with the number on your Social Security card. If a discrepancy is found in the name or number, be sure to contact your employer and the Social Security office.

The name and number on your W-2 must match your Social Security record in order for your earnings to be credited to the correct Social Security record. The earnings records are the basis on which retirement, survivors and disability benefits are paid. Uncredited earnings could affect your future eligibility for benefits and/or the amount of your benefits.

BAR TO BENEFITS FOR PRISONERS EXPANDED

The rule prohibiting the payment of Social Security benefits to people confined for a crime punishable by more than one year imprisonment has been extended to those imprisoned for such crimes by reason of insanity.

The rule now prohibits benefits to individuals found guilty but insane, not guilty by reason of insanity, or incompetent to stand trial for such an offense.

McCauley Eyes School Seat

The name of a top veteran vote-getter of past political battles may be back on this year's city election ballot.

McCAULEY

Frank McCauley, who left City Hall in January, 1990 after four terms as mayor, is mulling over a run for the School Committee.

"I'm seriously considering running for the two-year term on the School Committee," he acknowledges.

McCauley, who is now executive director of the State Retirement Board, has not lost his interest in Quincy politics as evident by his serving as a political analyst elections nights on Quincy Cable TV.

His return to the political arena as a candidate would certainly put some snap, crackle and pop into Election Year '95.

Four incumbent School Committee members are due up for re-election this year although one is expected to move over to the City Council field.

Virtually certain to seek re-election are Steve Durkin, Linda Stice and Sean Barry. Dan Raymondi is expected to vacate his seat and run for the Ward 2 city council seat which Ted DeCristofaro will be retiring from.

BARRY

DURKIN

STICE

Durkin and Stice would be seeking re-election to four-year terms. Barry, who succeeded Peggy King with a two-year stint, has the option of running for another two-year term or a four-year term.

McCauley has been around the political block a few times in a career spanning 22 years, and would have to be considered a major contender this year.

In addition to his eight years as mayor, he has been Ward 1 councillor, councillor-at-large and a member of the School Committee.

How seriously is he considering returning to the School Committee?

Serious enough to note, as a candidate would, that he has had 14 years service on the School Committee: six as an elected member and eight as chairman of the School Committee by virtue of his office as mayor.

He also points out that during his political career he supported construction of the Lincoln-Hancock Community School, the Squantum School addition and the renovation and addition to North Quincy High School.

McCauley also notes that all of his five children went through the Quincy school system and he now has two grandchildren in kindergarten.

Has any Quincy mayor left office and then been elected to the School Committee?

Yes, says McCauley, a history buff.

"Quincy's first mayor, Charles Porter, served something like 15 years on the School Committee after leaving the mayor's office."

THE RECENT DEATH of Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy reminded former state Senator Paul Harold of the first time he met her.

HAROLD

It was back in 1965 and Harold, then a high school student, was serving as a guide at the John Quincy Adams birthplace in South Quincy.

Early one morning, Mrs. Kennedy arrived unannounced and was shown through the house. She said she was hoping to have the Brookline birthplace of her son, President John F. Kennedy, become an historic site open to the public.

She said she was looking for a few pointers as to what an historic birthplace should include. She also mentioned that it would be operated under the National Park Service.

Harold remembered that when he later became a city councillor. And it was through his efforts that both the John Adams and John Quincy Adams birthplaces here were placed under the supervision and care of the National Park Service in the late 1970's.

MY PERSONAL REMEMBRANCE of Rose Kennedy goes back to 1960 when I covered JFK's election as President. I met her at a press party in her and Ambassador Joseph Kennedy's home in the Kennedy compound in Hyannisport.

I didn't realize it at the time but she was then 70 but looked like a woman in her 50's.

When she learned I had grown up in Quincy she wanted to know all about John Adams and John Quincy Adams. I gave her as much information as I could and then had the late City Historian William Edwards send her more. She was most grateful.

GRACE GIUNCHIGLIA, Mayor James Sheets' personal secretary, will be honored at a retirement party Feb. 16 at Siro's at Marina Bay. Her retirement is effective that date—her 65th birthday. (Cocktails at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m.)

GRACE

Tickets are $35 and may be obtained by contacting Helen Murphy, secretary to the mayor or City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The committee includes Michael McFarland, executive secretary to the mayor; City Solicitor Steve McGrath, Tom Koch, executive director Park-Forestry-Cemetery Departments; Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis and former City Solicitor Douglas Randall.

Sheltering Coalition To Receive $4,000 Grant

The Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC) will receive a $4,000 grant from The 590 Fund.

The QISC operates Father Bill's Place, Quincy's homeless shelter. The announcement of the grant was made by Jim Pansullo, manager of the fund and Maureen McCann, fund administrator.

Established in 1968, The 590 Fund, a non-profit charitable foundation which raises funds for homeless shelters throughout Massachusetts, is run by Business 590, WBNW, Boston's only all-business radio station.

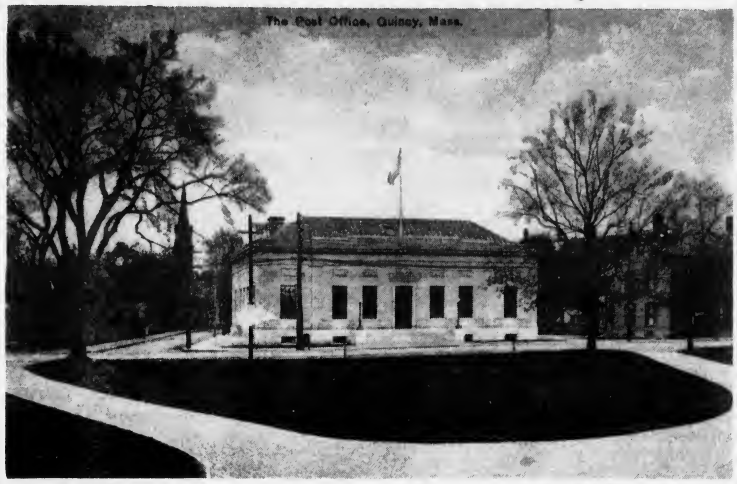
Babysitting Course At Quincy Red Cross

A four-day Babysitting Course will be offered Tuesday through Friday, Feb. 21-24 from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Quincy office of the American Red Cross, 85 Quincy Ave.

The course is open to those ages 11-13. Training includes techniques in emergency action, accident prevention, and supervision and basic care of children. Those who successfully complete the course will receive a Red Cross Certificate.

Cost is $25. Registration deadline is Feb. 15. For more information or to register, visit the office or call 770-2600.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS 1908 POSTCARD shows the newly built Quincy Post Office across the street from the Thomas Crane Library. At that time the library walkway in the foreground had just been repaved with cobblestones as part of the project which also included the first addition to the original library building. And now, once again the walkway has been repaved and another, the third, addition to the library is planned. The post office, too, was expanded from this view. In 1933-34, the single front door was changed to the present three separate doors and second floor windows were added, as was the large back room. And, although not clearly seen in this photo, an original Maple Street entrance was sealed to make room for the superintendents office. At the end of Maple Street is the steeple of the original Bethany Congregational Church which is now the site of the Bank of Boston building.

A Thank You From Fellow Students Of Matt Messing

Editor: The Quincy Sun

On Wednesday, Jan. 18, 1995, the students of Quincy High School lost a great friend, Matthew Messing. The student body of Quincy High School would like to thank the many people who have helped us cope through this emotional time.

First, we would like to thank the Quincy Public School Department, the teachers, the principal and the counsellors. All have been a tremendous help. We thank them all for their love and support. A special thanks goes to the Quincy Police Department and Superintendent of Schools, Eugene Creedon. Thank you Mr. Creedon for your love and compassion.

The biggest thank-you goes to Matt's dad Dennis Messing. Mr. Messing has shown the courage that people can't understand. When your grief was greatest, you helped others grieve. When your pain was deepest, you helped others heal their pain, and thank you Mr. Messing for Matt. We will never forget him and we will always love him. Thank you Messing family, we love you.

What Is The Bottom Line?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

When an open City Council meeting (the proposed Shaw's) can become a closed meeting after the proponents fill a hall, steps and corridors with bused-in steel workers and seniors that have been thanked for their support with caps and sweatshirts, I begin to wonder....

What can we really expect from a Shaw's? Who else can be bought? What really matters to them? What is the bottom line?

Don't worry, Clay Street seniors, Wollaston Market will stay there. Don't worry, Buckingham and Cheriton Road residents, there will not be much side street traffic.

Don't worry, 95 percent of the shoppers will come from local traffic. No, no, no, there will be no influx of Dorchester and South Boston shoppers.

Everything will be fine. Nothing will change. Go to sleep. Go to sleep. Go to sleep....

Supports Shaw's Project

Editor: The Quincy Sun

It's rare that decisions are clear cut. There are always gray areas. This is the way I feel about the proposed Shaw's supermarket on Hancock St., in Wollaston.

The opponents tell us that a bad traffic situation will only get worse, while Shaw's says their solution will solve our problems. Those against the project say that the store's presence will put Wollaston Market out of business and Shaw's claims to have contacted the store owner on several occasions about selling the business. The opponents claim that another supermarket is not needed in this part of the city. Shaw's says its research points to a different conclusion.

Rather than arguing these points, it might be better to look at what can be lost if Shaw's is turned down by the Quincy city council. First, we will not have a chance to find out if the traffic problems can be solved using new computer controls. Second, we may lose a market altogether if Wollaston Market goes out of business at some time in the future. We also lose the opportunity for scholarships for our children that Shaw's brings to each neighborhood it serves. In exchange for these losses, we will be left with a seven acre industrial site in the heart of the area that is not being utilized for the benefit of the city and is not producing a proper amount of property taxes.

We can turn Shaw's down and go back to square one. And continue complaining about traffic problems, and tax rates, and a declining part of Quincy. I hope the Quincy city council steps up to the plate and shows some courage in supporting the Shaw's project.

South Shore Council Of Churches Formed

Feb. 2-8, 1966
29 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

A new South Shore Council of Churches was formed this week to replace both the Quincy Council of Churches and the South Shore Federation of Churches.

Seventeen of the 26 churches in Quincy attended the organizational meeting at Quincy Point Congregational Church which named Dr. Edward Mann as its first president.

The new council that includes churches from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Milton would assume the work of the former church council and federation, including chaplaincies at the hospitals and the district court.

Formal membership in the new council would be voted by each church at its annual meeting.

WASHINGTON ST. GAS STATION OPPOSED

For the second time in less than three months the license board heard support and opposition for plans to build a service station at the corner of Washington St. and Southern Artery.

Applicants Exchange Realty, Duane Realty and Frank Brezniak wanted to build an AMOCO station at 476-486 Washington St. and 5 Baxter St. The two bay garage would replace the existing block of stores.

Councillor Clifford Marshall led the residents' opposition to the station noting while everyone agreed that the existing block of stores were in bad condition, a garage was not the answer.

"With 17 gas stations, within 1/12 miles we are already called gasoline alley," he said.

Among those speaking in opposition were pharmacy proprietor Abraham Slobodkin.

INCREASE TO POLICE BUDGET

Mayor James McIntyre announced an addition of $132,000 to the police budget to add two additional cars and four new patrolmen. He said the additional manpower would allow for the experimentation with one-man cruisers.

Police Chief William Ferrazzi has asked for 12 new men and four new cruisers to supplement the five district cruisers that were in round-the-clock service.

With the Mayor's added monies, the total monies for the department were a record $1.5 million.

Marie's Kitchen

By MARIE J. D'OLIMPIO

One Pan Chicken & Rice

This recipe is made all together in one baking pan. And for those busy people working every day, it is a blessing.

The last time I made this dish, I used chicken thighs and they were still frozen. It took about an hour and a half to cook, but if they are not frozen, it takes about an hour.

Chicken With Rice
6 or 8 thighs (skinned)
1 cup rice
8 ounces of chicken stock (or a can of chicken broth)
salt and pepper
Rosemary (optional)

In a baking dish, place the chicken and season it. Add two cups of water and the chicken stock. Sprinkle the cup of rice around the pieces of chicken.

Bake covered a 350 degree oven for an hour (if not frozen) and an hour and a half if frozen About half way through, remove the cover carefully and turn. If more water is needed, add a little or even more chicken stock if you have it. The rice seems to cook perfectly this way because of the juices from the chicken itself, plus the liquid used.

You can also make this dish with other chicken pieces

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

How to select a hearing aid.

If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.

- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.

"We know a great deal about hearing aids."

Kramer Joins Zane In Boston

Hospital Begins Search For New Chief Financial Officer

The search has begun at Quincy Hospital for a new chief financial officer.

The hospital last week lost CFO Asher Kramer to the same Boston health care network that former hospital director Ellen Zane went to work for last spring. Kramer, who was instrumental in the hospital's financial turnaround, is leaving to work for Zane at Partners Community HealthCare Inc.

Kramer, as the network's chief financial officer, will help develop the new organization of community hospitals and physician groups that will be affiliated with Brigham & Women's and Massachusetts General hospitals.

Zane is president of the network, which is an arm of Partners HealthCare System Inc., a corporation overseeing the affiliation of the two Boston hospitals.

Kramer, 41, a Needham resident, came to Quincy Hospital in 1991, the year after Zane became director and chief executive officer. Together with the other senior managers, they oversaw a period of steady growth in which the city-owned hospital began to turn a profit after several years of steep losses.

This past year, the profit was $1.6 million, down $500,000 from the previous year, but still much higher than in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

Mayor James Sheets said he is sorry to see Kramer leave the hospital, but added that was not surprised of the move because he expected Zane to ask her colleague to join her.

The hospital's management company, Quorum Health Resources Inc., is looking for a replacement. Bob Hersey, Quorum's Boston group assistant vice president, will fill in as needed until the new chief financial officer arrives.

Kramer has worked for Quorum since 1987. He previously served as vice president of finance at the Quorum-run Jordan Hospital in Plymouth. Prior to that, he held financial positions at three other Boston-area hospitals.

Kramer, whose last day on the job was Friday, will begin his new job Feb. 15.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Self Storage And Handling Of Firearms Safety and Responsibility

It is estimated that nearly 50 million households in America contain some type of firearm. Every gun owner has the responsibility to ensure his/her firearm is safely stored and not accessible to unauthorized individuals, particularly the children living in or visiting those households.

How and Where to Store a Firearm

Numerous options exist regarding how and where to store a firearm. First you must consider the personal needs of the gun owner; the types of security and the storage space available. There are security devices on the market; a visit to any sporting good store will help you decide what is best for your needs.

Some of the more commonly used devices are safes for single or multiple firearms. There are also separate locking boxes, and locking mechanisms which attach directly to the firearm.

Proper security and storage of firearms is the responsibility of all gun owners. Everyone in the household should be educated in the need for safety and responsibility.

What about Ammunition?

Just like firearms, ammunition should be secured and stored to prevent unauthorized access. Many lockable storage containers sold today are especially adapted for ammunition as well as guns.

Storing ammunition separately from the firearm is recommended for additional safety.

Youngsters Have Responsibilities, Too

The best rule of thumb for those who find a gun and are unsure what to do is:

Stop, don't touch it. Leave the area. Call an adult.

Guns are not toys and should never be treated as such.

Teaching responsibility, to both young and old, is absolutely essential to prevent accidents and tragedies.

Who can I call for help?

If you need help locating stores which sell locking or securing devices, contact your local Crime Prevention Officer.

Keep a check list

Gun owners should maintain an up-to-date list of their firearms, including a full description, make, model, caliber, serial number and approximate value. In the event of a fire or theft, the information can be provided to the insurance company or law enforcement.

(The preceding information was furnished by The Massachusetts Neighborhood Crime Watch Commission.)

Stress Commitment To Entire Community

Bakery Owners Blend Asian Heritage, American Flavor

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

Blending both an American flavor and their deep-rooted Asian heritage, Timmy Bakery owners George Toye, Simon Ma and baker Tony Kuan began their commitment to Quincy's entire community--Asian and otherwise--when they opened their new business at 412 Hancock St. in December.

To meet the needs of Quincy's quickly-growing Asian community, Timmy Bakery offers an Asian menu of cakes and pastries as well as traditional American cakes and cookies.

By offering everything from coconut cookies and French pastries to wedding and birthday cakes of different cultures, Timmy Bakery offers a diverse menu.

"We try to appeal to the Asian community as well as the rest of the community," said Toye, a 20-year veteran restaurant owner.

Even the name of the establishment--Timmy Bakery--reflects the owners' desire to cater to Asians and non-Asians alike. "Timmy" is the Chinese word for bakery.

The bakery itself has a decidedly Asian flavor. The white walls of the takeout shop are covered with posters and photographs of Asian culture. Against the window, taped to the wall, is a poster of photographs which recognizes its new patrons.

All the cookies, cakes and other pastries at the bakery are cooked from scratch by Kuan, the head baker.

The long hours at the bakery which Toye and his co-workers work are worth it, according to Toye.

"Nothing is easy," admitted Toye. But, despite the long hours and hard work, he added, ultimately it is worthwhile.

Toye is hoping to bring a Chinatown to Quincy by offering Asian cuisine to Quincy residents.

"It's the same as Chinatown, but closer and more convenient. You don't have to deal with the traffic and parking ," he said.

Although he has worked in the restaurant business since he moved to the United States in 1974, this is his first attempt at operating a bakery.

"It's something different, a new adventure," he said.

Toye is not alone in his belief in the bakery's commitment to a quality at affordable prices.

"The food is good and it is very convenient. I don't have to go Chinatown to get good Asian pastries," said Sandy Cheung, a Quincy resident and regular customer at the bakery.

Timmy Bakery, 479-3880, is open Monday thru Friday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

APMA Health Hints On Aerobics And Running

Putting your best foot forward when you run or do aerobics can be a lot easier if you follow these steps to foot health from the experts at the American Podiatric Medical Association (APMA):

•Proper shoes are crucial to successful, injury-free aerobics. Because of the many side-to-side motions, shoes need an arch design that will compensate for these forces and sufficiently thick upper leather or strap support to provide forefront stability and prevent slippage of the foot. Major shoe companies have designed special shoes for aerobics which provide the necessary arch and side support; they also have soles that allow for the twisting and turning of an aerobics regimen.

•Good running shoes should provide cushioning for shock absorption and ought to be able to fully bend at the ball of the foot area. Visit the shoe store in the afternoon when feet are slightly swollen and wear thick running socks when trying shoes on. Shoes fit properly if the heel is snug and does not slide and there's a thumb's width between the longest toe and the top of the toe box.

•Hardwood floors, especially with padded mats, are the best surfaces possible for aerobics classes.

•The best and safest way to start a running program is with a five-day-per-week conditioning program for 12 to 16 weeks. Begin with two sets of two-minute jogs interspersed with five minutes of fast walking. If muscles are stiff, walk only. As the weeks progress, gradually increase the number of minutes jogged per set to 20 minutes.

•When warming up for aerobics, do not bounce or use ballistic stretching. Knees should always be loose. As you work out, monitor your heart rate to stay near the target heart range (start with 220, subtract your age, then multiply by 0.8 to find target heart range).

•When running, lean forward slightly at the waist to develop a smooth, even stride. Feet should touch the ground with the weight toward the rear. Do not land on the toes or slap your feet on the ground. Keep feet powdered and dry to prevent blisters.

•Common aerobics injuries include arch pain, heel spurs (calcium deposits build up on the underside of the heel bone), shin splints, stress fractures, and calf pain. Runners are prone to knee pain, shin splints and achilles tendinitis. If you experience any of these injuries, see your doctor.

For free brochures that can tell you more about sports and your feet, call APMA at 1-800-FOOT-CARE (1-800-366-8227).

The Migraine Diet

By DR. ROGER CADY

Most people learn about a connection between food and headaches early in life--the first time they wolf down an ice cream cone. Later, they may discover neurological hazards of monosodium glutamate (MSG) or of having one beer too many. But for people who suffer from a migraine, almost anything they eat can result in a headache--if they have a sensitivity to it.

Usually, no single food is responsible for causing migraines. It's believed, however, that a combination of natural and artificial biochemicals, acting during a time of heightened susceptibility, may cause the changes in a person's body chemistry. This, in turn, triggers the headache.

One theory is that certain foods cause expansion of the blood vessels in the brain. This sets off a chain of physical reactions similar to those of a migraine. Alcoholic beverages (particularly beer and red wine) and nitrite-containing foods (such as cured meats like hot dogs, bacon, sausage and ham) cause this blood vessel expansion.

Contradicting this theory, however, may be the foods that contain the amino acid tyramine or other amines (like chocolate, citrus fruit, aged cheeses, yogurt, sour cream, beans, nuts, herring or liver), or beverages that contain caffeine (coffee, tea or colas). These are also believed to act as migraine triggers, but the reasons why are not clearly understood.

You may find it helpful to keep a food diary to record what you have eaten prior to a migraine attack. This can help you identify your food triggers. Then, speak with your doctor about making appropriate changes in your diet.

If you suffer from migraines, consult your doctor. There are treatment programs that may help.

For a free newsletter on living with migraine called HeadWay, write: HeadWay, P.O. Box 500, Wendell, NC 27591-9900.

Sunglasses Should Protect Eyes

Your sunglasses can do more than help you look good. They can help you continue to see well, too.

Explains Dr. Kim Robbins, an ophthalmologist and member of the Better Vision Institute Advisory Council, "UV-A and UV-B rays may harm the retina, the innermost portion of the eye; the cornea, the transparent coating of the eye; and the lens, located in the interior portion of the eye." Wearing UV-absorbent sunglasses can protect your eyes from potential damage.

This is as true in the winter as in the summer. Skiers should beware of sun glare off snow, which at high altitudes can lead to "snow blindness."

For more information on protecting your eyes with sunglasses, contact: The Better Vision Institute, P.O. Box 77097, Washington, D.C. 20013 or call 1-800-424-8422.

Health Hints About Cooking

For safety's sake, in the kitchen or at the grill, remember not to place cooked food on the same plate used for raw meats and poultry; the same rule applies to grilling utensils. You'll risk contracting salmonella, a type of food-borne bacteria that may cause food positions.

Grill meat and poultry to the "doneness" stage. Cook red meat to 160 degrees and poultry to 180 degrees. Check for "doneness" by using a thermometer, inserting the tip into the thickest part of the meat or poultry.

THOSE CONDEMNED TO REPEAT HISTORY

Those who love and care for their offspring enough to guide their financial futures by drawing up wills should also consider leaving behind records of their family's medical histories. If good health is the most valuable possession that a person can have, knowledge of one's family medical history may be more important than a trust fund. It is estimated that one-third of all diseases are passed on from generation to generation. This genetic link characterizes such diseases as heart disease, diabetes, several cancers, Alzheimer's Disease, alcoholism, and depression. Those who are aware that they are at risk for such diseases, may take certain steps to reduce their chances of developing them. At the very least, an at-risk individual is more likely to look for early signs of disease by virtue of the early warning that a family medical history can provide.

P.S. Start with a family tree when preparing a comprehensive family medical history.

If you are visiting a physician for the first time, be sure to give a full family history to help provide information critical to your health. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, we specialize in the treatment of heart problems, hypertension, and cholesterol. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Hours by appointment. We're here are 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550. Presented as a public service for the benefit of all by the offices of COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE.

Quincy Schools Bus Snow Routes

Quincy Public Schools Department announces the following list of emergency snow/weather routes.

Emergency snow/weather routes are implemented on a call-by-call basis declared by School Supt. Eugene Creedon. Declarations are announced on radio stations WJDA (1300 AM) and WBZ (1030 AM) as well as the three Boston television stations Channels 4, 5 and 7.

Students should be aware regular bus routes are in place unless declared otherwise by the superintendent. The emergency snow/weather routes have fewer stops and do not travel along as many residential streets; instead, the routes are aligned mostly along main streets.

Hard Hitting Marks Return To Ice

Quincy Ties Plymouth South In First Game Back

By KERRY BYRNE

The question on everyone's mind was would the Quincy High hockey team play competitively in their first game since the death of teammate Matt Messing following an on-ice collision just 10 days before.

The answer - a resounding "yes" - was made apparent within minutes as the Presidents (2-6-2) dished out a flurry of hits during a 5-5 tie at Quincy Youth Arena Friday afternoon against Plymouth South (4-7-1).

"I think our goal was to show the kids once again that the game can be fun. I think we did that today," said Quincy High head coach Bob Sylvia, whose young team is still trying to deal with the tragic loss of their sophomore teammate.

The coach called the events of the previous 10 days "an experience not to be forgotten" and the "lowest of the lows" but felt this first game back was "like a big hurdle we got over."

Freshman Chris Haidul and burly junior Jay Fennelly delivered early blows that set the tone for what became a chippy affair.

Fennelly's hit on Panther Mike Staruski at the 3:03 mark of the first period caused anxious moments as the Plymouth South player lay motionless on the ice for several minutes and had to be helped by an EMT. He later returned to the game.

"Checking is nothing personal," said Sylvia. "It's in the rules to remove the man from the puck. This is the way you play the game. They [the Quincy High players] had to do that."

The large crowd fell silent several times as EMTs were called upon to tend to players hurt during the contest. No serious injuries were reported.

Plymouth's Ryan Puntiri scored the first goal, but three tallies by Quincy sophomore Mark Glynn in the game's first 17:15 gave the Presidents a 3-2 lead.

Third-period goals by Steve Barrett and Matt Langille put Quincy ahead, 5-3, before two goals by Panther Danny Reardon knotted the contest. Reardon also scored in the first period. Panther Shawn McCormack tied the game at 3-3 with a second-period goal.

Quincy had more than their share of opportunities to win as Plymouth was whistled for nine penalties - including one on goaltender Eric Pestilli, and another, a bench penalty, on coach Terrence Doherty. The Presidents were penalized just once. They capitalized three times (Glynn twice, Langille once) on the man advantage but gave up two shorthanded goals by Reardon.

Although his team was not able to hold on for the win, coach Sylvia was pleased with the play of his team in light of all that they've been through in recent days. "I think we were skating well but we were a little rusty out there."

The coach addressed how he dealt with the players before the game. "I told them to have fun, really. We weren't making Matty the Gipper for all this," he said, in reference to the football player whose death, according to sporting lore, once served as inspiration for a win by the Notre Dame footbal team under coach Knut Rockne.

"We wanted to go ou there and just play our bes for Matty."

DENNIS MESSING, father of the late Matthew Messing, was on hand as the Presidents returned to the ice for the first time since the death of his son.

MARK GLYNN, who recorded a hat trick in Quincy's 5-5 tie with Plymouth South, sports a #16 patch in tribute to Matthew Messing. The DB patch is for Doreen Barrett, the mother of Quincy hockey co-captain Steve Barrett, who passed away last season.

Pee Wee C's Blank Dedham

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee C club earned an exciting 3-0 win over Dedham thanks to some strong team skating.

Assists were dished out by Matt Kenney, Graham McShane and Tom Gouthro.

John Mooney was impressive in goal as he earned his second shut out of the season.

Mark Fitzpatrick, Matt Glynn, Pat Lahar, Matt Miller and Joe Callahan played strong two-way games to help secure the win.

JUNIOR BRUINS DIDIER Alther (left) and Ryan Krueger, both of Quincy, played in the Boston Garden Monday night. The two are hoping to raise money to play in the Tournoi International de Hockey Pee Wee in Quebec in February. It is the largest youth hockey tournament in the world. Donations can be sent to either Alther at 68 Lawn Ave., Quincy, 02169 or Krueger at 185 Manet Ave., Quincy, 02169.

By KERRY BYRNE

Three Quincy athletes took center stage at the Boston Garden Monday night in between periods of the Bruins-Florida Panthers game.

Two of the young athletes, Didier Alther and Ryan Krueger, played for the Boston Jr. Bruins in their game against the Middlesex Braves.

The Bruins and Braves battled for 10 minutes in between the first and second periods.

Krueger (#30 in your program) played half the game in net for the Jr. Bruins and gave up one goal, but made an awesome glove save near the end of the contest to rob the Braves of a go-ahead score. The 14,000 people in attendance went wild as he did a butterfly split and snatched the puck out of the air, though no chants of "Krueger, Krueger, Krueger" could be heard. The 12-year-old brick wall was honored with the game puck for his dexterous display.

Alther, a forward sporting #2, did not register in the scoring column but he did unleash at least two impressive hits along the boards that drew "oooohhhs" and "aaaahhhs" from the Gallery Gods.

Both boys said playing the Old Barn was the highlight of their young hockey careers.

Controversy marred the end of the game. With the score tied 1-1 the Braves went wild as they thought they knocked the winning goal past Krueger with no time remaining. No official ruling was made but the green light marking the end of the game went on while the red light signifying a goal did not. NESN announcer/hockey sage and former Bruin great Derek (Turk) Sanderson, known for his gentlemanly play and Puritanical lifestyle back in the 1970s, agreed that the goal did not count.

Both Krueger and Alther are 12-year-old honor roll students at Broad Meadows Middle School.

Honored between the second and third periods were recipients of "Good Sport Awards," sponsored by the Boston Garden.

Among the Good Sports was North Quincy High senior Jamie Karvelis, a football player and wrestler.

Karvelis, looking sly in his scally cap, was on the ice as his name was announced before the Garden faithful.

The award was given to Karvelis because he is "a kid who has really kept his academic, athletic and personal life together through adverse conditions," said North Quincy High football coach and Guidance Counselor Ken McPhee, who nominated the senior for the award.

Karvelis was also nominated by wrestling coach Steve Joyce.

Of the 20 or so Good Sport Award recipients Monday night, one will win a $3,000 college scholarship.

"Jamie is a good student and a great kid. Everyone in the school loves him," said McPhee.

Two years ago, North Quincy senior Pat Shea won the Good Sport Award.

Game Director James O'Connor released the line-ups for the 17th Annual Shriners All-Star Football Classic and two Quincy boys are on the roster.

Dave Carney, a six-foot-two-inch, 225-pound linebacker, will represent North Quincy High and Butch Palaza, a six-foot-four-inch, 275-pound offensive lineman, will represent Quincy High.

Yesterday (Wednesday) Palaza was scheduled to sign his letter of intent to play football at Boston College next season.

Carney is being looking at by Harvard University (he's also a smart cookie, ranked #43 in his class) and several Div. II and III colleges.

The game itself is quite a ways off, June 17 to be exact.

All proceeds from the game benefit the Shriners Burn Institute of Boston.

Mite House

Linnane's 4 Goals Not Enough To Break Tie

Brendan Linnane, of Killer Bee and Shamrock Line fame, netted four goals but they went for naught as his Lydon Russell club tied Doherty & White, 6-6, in the Mite House League.

Matt Tobin and Joey Norris (Trophy) also scored for Lydon. Assists were dished out by Mike Nord (3), Tobin (2), Kristen DiMattio and Dan Durocher.

Hard-skating Taylor Reinhardt (two goals) continued to play well for Doherty & White. Other goal scorers were Nick Manning, Steve Crispo, Jake O'Donnell and Pat Casper.

O'Donnell made two assists. Single assists were made by Matt Jones, Ben Metcalfe, Rick Cullen and Casper.

Mike Faherty recorded a hat trick to lead Purdy's Ice Cream to a 7-3 win over Samoset Pharmacy.

Alex Shaffer netted two goals for the winning club. Pat Kelley and Paul Graham scored once each. Rob Newcomb was the game's top playmaker with three assists. Kelley and Graham handed out two assists each. Shaffer and Joe O'Keefe also assisted.

Steve Kelley, Matt Lavery and Myles Clancy lit the lamp for Samoset. Lavery and Matt Haskins aided on two goals each while Clancy made one assist.

Brendan Conley's two goals were the difference for M.Sugarman as they scrapped out a 4-2 win over Paul Harold Club.

Billy Barter and Dan Reggiannini also scored for the winning club. Assists were made by B. Conley, Ryan Conley, Jarrod Abbott, Chris Sheehan and Reggiannini.

Tony Benigni and Jeff Bossart netted the Harold Club goals. Steve McGrath and Bryan Lynch made the assists.

Danny Sullivan scored two goals for Barry's Deli as they sliced up Granite Rail Pizza, 7-3.

Single goals for Barry's were netted by Kyle Carmody, Andy Patten, Matt Germain, Justin Swierk and Andrew Donovan. Germain, Swierk and Steve Cassidy dished out two assists each. Single set-ups were made by Patten, James Dunn and Frank Sorrento.

Mike McKeon, Matt Giordani and Jon Griffith scored for Granite Rail. Steve Maggio handed out two assists. Mark Lewis, Pat Devlin and Griffith made single assists.

Squirt House

Quincy Sun remained among the Squirt House League elite with a 6-1 win over Burgin Platner.

Two goals by Rob Mooney and Dave Germain powered the Sun. Jon Tallent and Bruce Maggio netted single goals. Assists were dished out by Dan Sheehan (2), Matt Conso and Germain.

Jim (Slashin') Cashins posted a hat trick to lead Doran & Horrigan to an 8-1 win over Granite Auto Electric.

Other top scorers for Doran were Jill McInnis (one goal, two assists) and Chris Anderson (two goals). Mike Donelin and Colin Maxey netted single goals. Assists were made by Ryan Tobin, Steve Dunn, Shawn Richardson, Pam Sullivan, John Ryan and Maxey.

North Unable To Stop Undefeated Barnstable

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The young and improving North Quincy High girls' basketball team ran into state powerhouse Barnstable Friday night and head coach Ken Panaro, despite a 71-34 setback, was pleased with his players' performances.

"My girls played an exceptional game tonight," said Panaro. "They played very well. They hustled, they ran, they did everything they could do. They played a great defensive team."

The Red Raiders (5-7) next take the court Wednesday, Feb. 8 at Medford. Their next home game is Tuesday, Feb. 14 against Bridgewater-Raynham.

North kept pace with the quick Barnstable (14-0) team for much of the first half. It took Barnstable a good deal of the period to grind out a lead.

Both teams started slowly. Barnstable took nearly two minutes to score the game's first points. NQ's Sara Stanton helped keep it close with nine of her team's first 11 points. North trailed by only eight with five minutes to go in the half, but could manage just one more point to go into the break trailing 30-12.

The Red Raiders came out on fire in the second half with Stanton scoring the first five points of the period. That fire was soon extinguished as the size and experience of Barnstable proved too much for North Quincy.

North made a late run behind the play of Amey Riley and Kristen Proude but only their pride emerged the victor.

Stanton scored 16 points on the night, nine in the first half. She continues to lead the Old Colony League in scoring with 25.1 points per game.

Other top scorers for North were Riley with seven points, Kelly Keegan with six, and Proude with five.

Panaro also pointed to the play of Keegan and Liz Fitzpatrick, both of whom were all over the court throughout the game. Fitzpatrick had the game's toughest assignment: covering Barnstable star Tanya McIntyre, last season's OCL Player of the Year and one of the favorites to capture the honor again this year.

Kerry Ginty, Liz Ceurvels, Kristen Kelly, Dawn Kohler, Erica Crawford, Jill Picardi and Laurie Flynn also saw action against the Red Raiders of the Cape.

North has begun to adjust to life without Kim Healy. Healy, who suffered a knee sprain against Quincy Jan. 18, will undergo physical therapy and could be back for the final week of the season.

Recreation Program Wins State Excellence Award

The Quincy Recreation Department recently received the Massachusetts Recreation and Park Association Annual State Award for Excellence in the Field of Program Outreach.

The award was for the program "Cable Camp and Afterschool Cable Club", which has been sponsored by the recreation department and the Quincy Community Television Council. Equipment and facilities were supplied by Continental Cable System.

Recreation Director Barry Welch accepted the award on behalf of Camp Director Darlene Mendoza, producer on staff at Continental Cablevision as well as Mike Robinson and Bette Campbell who assisted with the camp.

"Cable Camp" is a Television Production Workshop for youths entering grades, 6, 7, 8, and 9th and is conducted for four weeks during July and August. The Program is offered as part of the recreation department's self-supporting programs.

"Afterschool Cable Camp" is a continuation of the program conducted during the school year. Both activities were cited as an example of recreation opportunities that appeal to those youth who may not have the interest in traditional sports activities, offered by the recreation department.

This marks the second honor for the co-sponsor program, which also received the New England Cable Television Association Public Service Award for Outstanding Cooperation Between a Municipal or Government Agency and a Local Cable System.

John Whalen, Jr., director of recreation in Longmeadow, made the presentation to Welch at the MRPA State Conference.

Five North Frosh Girls Move Up To JV

Five players from the North Quincy High freshmen girls' basketball team were moved up to the junior varsity last week.

Kristen Keohane, Kerry Skehan, Megan O'Donnell, Amanda McCloy and Kelly Fernandez will now ply their trade on the next level. Their basketball skills, enthusiasm for the game and the need to increase their playing experience at another level were cited as reasons for the move.

"This experience will go a long way to enhance the varsity team in the future," said freshmen coach Arthur Good.

This unit has contributed 22.8 points per game to the freshmen team.

The North Quincy girls, now with their top six players (Laurie Flynn was called up to the varsity two weeks ago) seeing time on the varsity and JV squads, battled the Thayer Academy JV team to a 12-12 tie at the break before falling in the second half.

Five different players scored for the young Red Raiders.

"The team was very competitive and gave an excellent winning effort," said Good.

Games on consecutive days appeared to take the toll on the NQ frosh as they fell to Fontbonne, 37-26.

The Raiders made a roaring comeback to take a 22-21 lead into the break, but in the second half fatigue appeared to take its toll.

Tremendous efforts were given by Francesca Lorenzano and Jocelyn West but the constant barrage of fresh legs off the Fontbonne bench proved too much.

Six players scored for North Quincy.

The 'Fab Frosh' have an 8-4 record and are undefeated (6-0) in the Old Colony League.

The young Raiders host Plymouth South today (Thursday) at 3:30 and travel to Brockton for a contest also at 3:30.

Paul Lentini (nine points) and Neal Rosenberger (two points) took control late in the game and fought off a furious Duxbury rally after Goodrich and McCann fouled out.

Also keying in on defense were Brian Burke, Chris Chaput and Jim Fitzgerald.

Max Repoff, Chris Doherty and Brendan Bowes all pitched in for the rolling Sacred Heart club.

A Thought For The Week

February marks the birthdays of two of the world's great figures; George Washington, who gave us our nation, and Abraham Lincoln, who preserved it for posterity.

Let us remember that they captured the imagination of the world by their characters, their principles, their philosophies and profound achievements. Their names are forever linked with man's eternal struggle for freedom.

As we pay homage to these great Americans-Washington and Lincoln-let us remember that they are more than any others embodied and exhibited our distinctive civilization. We honor them for the virtues that made them great. We honor them for their unswerving loyalty and patriotism. Both represented the cause for freedom. It is with deep respect and admiration for their leadership that we pay tribute to them in this month that marks their birthdays.

One does not recall that any nation in history produced two men 87 years apart, who indubitably determined the nation's destiny. America was indeed very lucky to have produced two such towering men in the compass of a century.

Early Goals Lift Mite A's

Outstanding hustle and early scoring led the Quincy Youth Hockey Mite A's to a 6-3 win over Charlestown.

Quincy's Matt Lavery and Brendan Conley scored goals on the game's opening shift as blueliners Tim Duggan and Andy McDonough refused to let the puck out of the Charlestown zone.

Lavery was assisted by linemates Conley and Kevin Richardson. Conley's goal was unassisted.

Quincy took a 4-0 lead in the first on goals by Brendan Craig (from Matt Grazioso and Patrick Maxey) and Richardson (Lavery).

Defenders Joe Norris (Trophy), and Pat Casper played impressive hockey throughout the first period.

Conley's second was goal assisted by Richardson and Lavery. Ryan Conley scored the final Quincy goal off a feed from Matt Germain.

Outstanding netminding by Andy (Stonewall) Patten and inspired hustle by Danny Duggan allowed Quincy to fend off a late Charlestown charge.

The stingy defense was sparked by Sean Richardson, Jill McInnis and Jim Cashins. Goalie Shaun Flaherty made a number of great saves as he narrowly missed the shut out.

CITY OF QUINCY
1995-96 CONSOLIDATED PLAN-FEDERAL PROGRAMS
COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BLOCK GRANT (CDBG)
HOME PROGRAM
EMERGENCY SHELTER GRANT (ESG)
IDENTIFYING PRIORITY NEEDS, REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS
AND NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARINGS

For Fiscal Year 1995-96, the City of Quincy will receive federal funds from the US Housing and Urban Development (HUD), as follows: Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), $2,639,000; Emergency Shelter Grant (ESG), $90,000. The Quincy-Weymouth HOME consortium will receive $651,000 of HOME grant funds, of which $446,586 is expected to be available for Quincy.

HUD requires consolidated planning and submission for these programs. Therefore, the City, through its Department of Planning and Community Development, developed a WORKSHEET FOR IDENTIFYING AND SETTING PRIORITIES AMONG HOUSING AND COMMUNITY WORKSHOP NEEDS to solicit community input in identifying priority community needs. The City will also utilize the results of needs assessment activities undertaken by other City agencies and non-profit organizations.

Eligible CDBG activities include acquisition, public facilities and improvements, demolition, public services, removal of architectural barriers, rehabilitation and preservation, special economic development activities, and planning activities. Eligible activities must also either benefit low and moderate income people or address slums and blight conditions.

Eligible HOME activities include the acquisition, development or rehabilitation of rental housing, first-time homebuyers programs/projects, affordable housing projects of Community Housing Development Organizations (CHDO), etc.

Eligible ESG activities include the renovation, rehabilitation and conversion of buildings for use as emergency shelters, provision of essential social services, payment of operational costs, and the development and implementation of homelessness prevention activities.

The PCD prepared two REQUESTS FOR PROPOSAL (RFP) Packages to explain the program requirements and to guide those who would like to obtain funding from these federal programs. One RFP is for public services activities; and the other is for other types of activities, programs, and projects.

To obtain the needs worksheet and Request for Proposal packages or for any questions, please call (617) 376-1362 or visit the Department of Planning and Community Development, City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169. Proposals must be received by the PCD no later than March 3, 1995.

The schedule for the public hearings are indicated below. During these hearings, the City will have an interpreter for the deaf and hard of hearing and a translator for Chinese or Vietnamese residents who do not speak or understand English well. Translators for other languages may be made available upon requests.

the only question is when.

Other topics, including the amount of money the city will receive through the federal Crime Bill and how the city will be affected by the Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution are even less certain, Sheets said.

On the subject of the Crime Bill, Sheets noted that Congress originally intended $17 billion to be distributed throughout the country over the course of seven years, with communities picking up part of the tab as a result of the deal. Now, Sheets said, there is talk that the figure may be reduced to $10 billion, but cities and towns would not have to contribute any of their own money.

"So it's almost a wash," said Sheets. "It's hard to evaluate which way is the best."

Regarding the Balanced Budget Amendment--which requires that the federal government balance its budget over a seven-year period--Sheets said he is unsure exactly how it will affect the city because the government may end up making budget cuts, or raising taxes, or both.

"I don't think anybody knows how cities and towns will be affected by the new Congress," said Sheets. "I do know this, though: the change brought about by the election is more deep and durable than the media has indicated. It's not just a blip on the radar screen that's going to go away--it's going to be there for a while."

$1 Million Fund Drive Planned For Library Addition

go, Arthur Foley, Thomas Hurlebaus, Sandra McCauley and Mary Weafer and community members Henry Bosworth, Alfred Toy, Nancy Magee, Linda Chapman and Paul Harold.

Luongo, treasurer of the board of trustees, said businesses, community organizations, schools and individuals will be solicited during the program.

"It's a community thing, and we hope to get good community support," he said.

McLaughlin said there is no concrete timetable for the program, but she hopes it will kick off in the next couple of months.

Plans call for a 40,000-square-foot addition and 50 to 100 parking spaces for the Crane site at 40 Washington St. About one-third of the $9 million project is expected to be paid for by a state bond for library construction, while library officials expect the rest to be funded by city monies, primarily in the form of a bond issue.

The Boston architectural firm Childs, Bertman and Tseckares Inc. (CBT) was chosen by the library's Selection Committee in December as the designer of the project. The firm was selected from a group of six finalists that had been chosen from an overall field of 22 applicants.

CBT has been charged with working on a schematic drawing of the library addition as well as a cost estimate for the project. McLaughlin said she hopes the firm has completed its work by mid-February because she plans to apply for the state grant March 2.

Library officials are confident the library is a priority for the state and should receive in excess of $3 million in grant money, a little more than one-third of the total cost of the project. The Crane building, which has been designated a National Historic Landmark, was originally built in 1882 and expanded in 1908 and 1939. No major work has been done to the library since then.

McLaughlin said that while the library will try as hard as possible to raise the $1 million, she is hopeful that the Sheets administration will provide the balance of the funding for the project once the library receives the state grant. Money obtained through the fund-raising program could then be put toward additional costs that might result from the project.

Sheets said he is supportive of the library's plans but cannot commit any city money to the project until the Crane building obtains the grant. And while some bonding will definitely be necessary, he added, he hopes that it will not total as much as $5 million or $6 million.

Still, Sheets said he is pleased that the library is willing to make the extra effort in the form of the fund-raising program.

"I think that has to become very much a part of helping to pay for the library addition," he said.

Sheets and McLaughlin said they plan to meet in the next couple of weeks in order to look at the projected construction cost totals. The mayor added that he is hopeful other revenue sources can be found to help pay for the project.

AN ILLUMINATING IDEA

Motorists should not be surprised to see daytime running lights as an automatic feature on all cars sometime in the near future. As it is, one U.S. car manufacturer has already built daytime running lights into 600,000 of its cars and trucks. Why? Since December, 1984, when Canada mandated that all vehicles built or sold there must have lights that automatically go on as soon as the ignition turns on, daytime multi-car crashes have been reduced by nearly ten percent. Sixty percent of all Canadian vehicles are equipped with, or voluntarily use, daytime running lights. Their beneficial effect upon safety stems from the fact that they make oncoming cars easier to see, especially at dusk, when it is raining, or anytime when the light is low outdoors. Expect to see the U.S. follow Canada's example.

HINT: In Finland, the use of daytime running lights on cars has reduced daytime multi-vehicle crashes by more than 25 percent.

Free Cash To Be Used For Remainder Of FY95

Weekend Storm Wipes Out City's Snow, Ice Budget

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city's $300,000 FY95 snow and ice budget has been exhausted as a result of Saturday's winter storm that dumped more than seven inches of snow in Quincy.

City officials estimate that the city has now spent between $50,000 and $100,000 more than what was originally budgeted for winter snow and ice clean-up operations.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said Quincy will now have to rely on the city's free cash (cash reserve) account for the rest of the winter following the weekend storm.

"It's gone," said Colton, referring to the snow and ice budget.

Colton said roughly $200,000 of the snow and ice funds are spent before the winter, mostly so that the city may stock up on tons of salt and sand to be used before and after plowing operations during and following a storm.

"I don't think people would want us to wait to buy it until after it snows," he said with a laugh.

The storm that blew through the area this past weekend cost the city about $100,000, according to Colton. Twenty city plows were utilized in addition to 63 private plows that were used for 11 hours each, and costs for the hired equipment alone total about $45,000, he said.

In addition, Colton said, between 40 and 50 DPW employees worked overtime hours throughout the storm. About 1,000 tons of salt and 800 tons of sand were used over the weekend, he added.

"I haven't seen the overtime yet," said Colton, who stressed that his pricetag of $100,000 is only an estimate.

Colton said last month's storm which dropped between four and five inches of snow in the city cost Quincy about $50,000. Colton attributed the lesser figure to the smaller amount of snow and the fact that the January storm occurred on a weekday, which meant significantly less overtime pay for DPW employees.

Although Colton's figures--$200,000 spent in

No Elephants, Lions, Tigers, Bears

Council Bans Circus, Carnival Animal Acts

By MICHAEL WHALEN

They say an elephant never forgets, but he can forget about coming to Quincy.

Lions, and tigers, and bears? No way.

The City Council Ordinance Committee has unanimously approved a proposal by Quincy Animal League President John McDuff banning the use of lions, tigers, elephants and other animals for display in circuses, carnivals and similar operations.

The council as a whole will officially pass the measure into law at its Feb. 21 meeting.

McDuff, who appeared before the council Monday night along with four other local animal rights activists, was thrilled by the decision.

"I'm delighted," he said. "The City of Quincy has done itself proud."

About 15 other proponents in the audience broke into applause after the council voiced its support.

The new ordinance will include certain exemptions because of an amendment introduced Monday night by Council President Michael Cheney.

"This ordinance shall not apply to domestic animals including, but not limited to, dogs, cats, horses and farm animals except that no domestic animal shall be used in competitive animal races," the amendment states. "This ordinance shall not apply to exhibits deemed educational by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals."

D'Aprix To Update Council On Decelle, Other Projects

Quincy 2000 President Charles D'Aprix will appear before the City Council Oversight Committee to give an update on a number of projects that the city's public-private partnership is currently working on.

D'Aprix will appear before the committee Tuesday, Feb. 21 at 7 p.m.

Councillor-at-Large Joseph LaRaia, who called for the update, said he is mainly interested in the current status of negotiations between Quincy 2000 and Decelle, a discount clothier which signed a letter of intent to move into the site of the former Child World and Cumberland Farms stores last October. A formal lease, however, has yet to be signed.

Decelle, which is based in Braintree, is owned by Burlington Coat Factory which is headquartered in New Jersey.

Council President Michael Cheney told The Quincy Sun two weeks ago that it is his belief that there is less than a 50 percent chance that the deal will be completed based on conversations he has had with retail industry sources.

D'Aprix, however, has continued to maintain that the lease will be signed, attributing the delay mainly to serious structural problems at the site that have to be worked out.

Quincy Man Dies After Car Bursts Into Flames

A 71-year-old Quincy man died of an apparent heart attack Monday night after his car burst into flames in the parking garage at Carney Hospital in Dorchester.

Officials said Kenneth Williamson of 540 Hancock St., a parking attendant at the hospital, died at 9:55 p.m., about one hour after the fire. Four hospital security guards were injured pulling him from the burning car.

William Henderson, a hospital spokesman, said Williamson had burns on his upper body and face. Cardiac arrest appeared to have been the cause of death, he added.

Officials said Williamson completed his hospital shift around 9 p.m. and got into his 1984 Pontiac Grand Prix, which was just inside the parking garage. The car did not start until he sprayed starter fluid into the air intake.

Williamson then got back in the car and was apparently letting the engine warm up, officials said, and several minutes later a loud pop could be heard and smoke and flames began showing from under the hood.

Officials said the rest of the car burst into flames when security officers opened the driver's door.

The injured guards were all treated in the hospital's emergency room. They are: Alvin Russell, 56, of Mattapan; Sgt. Kevin Keating, 37, of Dorchester and Chris Lawlor, 31, of Milton, who all suffered from smoke inhalation and Donald Freeman, 55 of Dorchester, who was burned on both hands.

Starter fluids come in aerosol cans and often contain highly flammable ether.

Since 1981, Williamson had lived alone in the Fenno House, an apartment building owned by Wollaston Lutheran Church. A Navy veteran who worked on submarines in World War II, Williamson was a member of the North Quincy Veterans of Foreign Wars Post.

QCAP Accepting Fuel Assistance Applications

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) Inc. is accepting applications for Fuel Assistance.

Residents of Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton who need help in paying their home heating bills may be eligible for the federally-funded program. Eligibility is based and household size and income. For example, a family of four must have an income of less than $22,200.

Homeowners and renters may be eligible. Some Fuel Assistance recipients will also be eligible for free energy conservation programs.

QCAP Energy Director Lawrence Chretien said, "Compared to last year, we have seen a dropoff in the number of people applying for Fuel Assistance. We think it's partially because the economy is improving, but the biggest factor seems to be that this winter's mild weather has had the effect of making some people forget about Fuel Assistance. Statewide, as well as in our service territory, the number of applications is down from last year, despite the fact that we know large numbers of eligible households haven't yet applied.

"People should realize that a few hundred dollars in assistance this year is as valuable to them as it was last year," Chretien added. "We're especially trying to encourage senior citizens and the unemployed to apply. The best way to look at Fuel Assistance is that for seniors, it's a supplement to their Social Security or pension. For the unemployed, it's a temporary supplement to their unemployment compensation. In both cases, assistance is there for people who have been paying taxes all along."

For more information about Fuel Assistance, call 479-8181. Appointments are necessary for new applicants.

Plaque, Adams Shore Playground To Be Named After Matthew Messing

Fallen QHS Sophomore Honored By City Council

Fallen Quincy High School sophomore Matthew Messing continues to pile up honors following his tragic death Jan. 18.

The City Council agreed Monday night to honor Messing's memory by forever placing his name at Boyson Park in Merrymount and the City Council Chambers in Quincy City Hall.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson suggested that the "Tot Lot" playground section of Boyson Park be renamed after Messing. He also that a letter be sent to the School Committee, School Supt. Eugene Creedon and the principals and students of Quincy. and North Quincy high schools for the way the young people conducted themselves immediately following the tragedy.

The Quincy Park and Recreation Board must approve the name change at the playground, but Kolson said he does not think that will be a problem.

In addition, Council President Michael Cheney suggested that Messing's name be placed on the "Local Heroes Plaque" which Kolson had placed in the Council Chambers last year in recognition of heroic Quincy residents. Cheney said Messing is a hero because of the way his death united the city.

Messing was also honored at the beginning of Monday night's meeting with a prayer said by Fr. James DiPerri of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy, who Cheney said has been "very active in the healing process" since the sophomore's death. Among those on hand for the prayer were Messing's stepmother Cindy and brother Tim, a 1994 graduate of Quincy High.

Messing, 16, died of cardiac arrest after being legally checked by an opposing player during a game against North Quincy High at Quincy Youth Arena.

CONGRESSMAN GERRY STUDDS (far left) recently met with Mayor James Sheets, Planning Director Richard Meade and Executive Secretary Michael McFarland in his Washington, D.C. office. The four discussed a number of issues, including the proposed Balanced Budget Amendment which would greatly affect the budget of state and local governments as well as what kind of an impact the new Republican-led Congress will have on issues related to Quincy.

Council Plans Restoration Of City Hall Chambers

The City Council has passed a resolution to create a Restoration Committee to begin planning the refurbishing of the City Council Chambers in Quincy City Hall.

The chambers have not received major aesthetic changes or repairs in more than 20 years.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, who introduced the resolution, said he wants to have the walls, doors, floors and other features of the chambers restored and beautified. Such work is long overdue, he said.

Planning Board Continues Discussion On Shaw's Proposal

The Quincy Planning Board was scheduled to discuss a proposed Shaw's Supermarket on the North Quincy-Wollaston line last night (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Shaw's has proposed building a new store at the site of the former Boston Gear Works located at 10 Howard St. and 477-479 Hancock St. Although the board has already discussed the matter, it decided not to conclude its deliberations until after the City Council held a public hearing on the proposal last month.

The council, which has the final say on whether Shaw's will receive a special permit at the site, will not take any action on the matter until after the Planning Board makes a formal recommendation.

Board meetings are open to the public.

Your Social Security

Changes In Household Workers Reporting

By CAROL BOYLE

If you hire someone to work in your home, a new law makes it easier for you to pay Social Security taxes on their earnings.

You'll report the earnings once a year instead of quarterly and, depending on how much you employ outside help, you'll pay less tax. Workers covered by this law include maids, child care providers, gardeners, and others who provide household services. Workers under age 18 are exempt unless household employment, including baby-sitting their main occupation.

Effective with 1994 earnings, no Social Security tax is due unless the earnings are at least $1,000. In those cases where a household worker was paid less than $1,000 during the year, you and your employer will receive refunds for the Social Security credits. If you have questions about the changes in reporting household employment and paying the Social Security taxes, call the Internal Revenue Service's toll-free number, 1-800-829-1040.

BENEFICIARIES CAN EARN MORE IN 1995

The amount of money that Social Security beneficiaries can earn in 1995 and still receive their full benefit has increased. Beneficiaries between the ages of 65 and 69 can earn up to $11,280 without having any benefits withheld. For every $3 that a beneficiary earns over this limit, $1 is withheld from his or her benefit. In 1994, the limit was $11,160.

For people under age 65, the limit will be $8,160. For every $2 a person under 65 earns over this amount, $1 is withheld from benefits. In 1994, the earnings limit was $8,040.

People age 70 or older who continue to work do not have benefits withheld no matter how much they earn.

CHECK SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER ON W-2

Social Security is urging workers to check their Social Security numbers and names on the W-2 forms (statement of earnings) employers are required to give employees before the end of January.

You should compare the number with the number on your Social Security card. If a discrepancy is found in the name or number, be sure to contact your employer and the Social Security office.

The name and number on your W-2 must match your Social Security record in order for your earnings to be credited to the correct Social Security record. The earnings records are the basis on which retirement, survivors and disability benefits are paid. Uncredited earnings could affect your future eligibility for benefits and/or the amount of your benefits.

BAR TO BENEFITS FOR PRISONERS EXPANDED

The rule prohibiting the payment of Social Security benefits to people confined for a crime punishable by more than one year imprisonment has been extended to those imprisoned for such crimes by reason of insanity.

The rule now prohibits benefits to individuals found guilty but insane, not guilty by reason of insanity, or incompetent to stand trial for such an offense.

Movement On Ward 3 Front

The first candidate for the Ward 3 City Council seat has stepped forward.

Patrick McDermott filed papers with City Clerk Joseph Shea this week to set up a political committee.

McDermott, an aide to Senator Michael Morrissey and president of the Montclair-Wollaston Association, says he plans to make an official announcement in March.

More contenders are expected for the seat which is being vacated by Larry Chretien who will soon announce he is running at-large this year.

Among those being mentioned is James Boudreau. If he does run, it will add an interesting sidelight to the election. Boudreau is also an aide to Morrissey. The latter no doubt, would walk a fine neutral line if McDermott and Boudreau run against one another.

A new name has also entered the Ward 3 picture this week. Robert Marshall of West Squantum St., a bridge tender at the Fore River bridge and a member of the Montclair School PTA is indicating an interest in running. He's the brother of Tom Marshall, owner of The Flower Loft.

Other possible candidates include Charles McIntyre, who made a strong run for an at-large seat in his political debut in 1993, Howard MacKay who has run for the Ward 3 seat in the past, Steve Doherty of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds staff and David McGillicuddy, an external affairs executive with the telephone company.

AND IT LOOKS like there could be a contest for the Ward 2 City Council seat that long-time incumbent Ted DeCristofaro will be retiring from this year.

Many observers have felt that if School Committee Vice Chairman Dan Raymondi, a veteran campaigner, runs for the seat, as expected, he would frighten off other candidates.

But another name has surfaced as a potential contender: Paul Donnelly, a member of the Conservation Commission.

DESPITE THE WEATHER, state Rep. Michael Bellotti is out knocking on doors in West Quincy—specifically Precinct 1 in Ward 4.

BELLOTTI

That's a brand new precinct in his representative district and he's visiting his new constituents to get acquainted and hear their thoughts.

Bellotti is also hosting a fundraiser for QUILL, the Quincy College Independent Living and Learning Program tomorrow (Friday) from 8 to 11 p.m. at The Fours, Cottage Ave., Quincy Sq. Donation: $10 per person.

Incidentally, Mike and his pretty wife, Gayle, are expecting their first little constituent April 15.

AYERS

KOLSON

The wager: the loser would have to take the winner to dinner at the latter's choice of restaurant in the other's ward. Kolson, Ward 1, picked Amelia's in Ward 6.

"He ate like a horse," says Ayers. "I don't think he had breakfast that morning or dinner the night before."

To which Kolson muses: "Just call it good planning ahead. I fasted all week."

ROUNSEVILLE

When he closes on a house, he presents the buyer with a 21/2 x 5 foot American flag, bracket and pole to mount it by the front door.

"If I ever sell a real big, expensive house," he says. "I'll give a 10-foot by 10-foot flag with a 40-foot flagpole. And I'll even dig the hole for the flagpole."

RAY CATTANEO will be honored at a dinner Thursday, March 23 at the Quincy Elks Home, Quarry St. (Social 6 p.m., dinner 7 p.m.)

CATTANEO

Cattaneo, who recently retired, served 22 years in the Quincy Park-Forestry-Cemetery Departments, the last seven as executive director.

He succeeded the late Richard Koch Sr. in 1987. And, in turn, was just succeeded by Koch's son, Thomas Koch, who had been Mayor James Sheets' executive secretary.

Sheets is honorary chairman of the committee. Koch and Barry Welch, Recreation Director, are co-chairmen. The committee includes:

City Clerk Joseph Shea, Brian Buckley, director Council on Aging, Michael McFarland, executive secretary to the mayor; Police Chief Francis Mullen, Henry Roche, commander Morrisette Legion Post; Dave Perdios, Michael Gaudiano, Frank Osborne and John Cattaneo.

Concourse Committee Meeting At City Hall Annex Feb. 16

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the proposed Quincy Center Concourse will meet Thursday, Feb. 16 at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room in City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

According to Chairman David Ezickson, the CAC has almost completed the preliminary stage of gathering information from city and planning officials regarding the proposed $5.9 million project. The concourse would link Burgin Parkway and Hancock Street in the downtown.

Ezickson said the CAC, which is comprised of several representatives of the business community and homeowners, would like to receive comments and suggestions from the general public and senior citizens.

Meetings are open to the public. Written and oral questions, recommendations and concerns may be presented.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD PHOTO-POSTCARD was postmarked May 1909 when it was mailed to Hilga Nilson in Providence by her father who was working in the Quincy quarries at the time. One of thousands of immigrant craftsmen who brought their skills from Europe to Quincy, this quarryman stands proudly next to an example of our famous granite which extracted in blocks like this, and every other shape, from the hills of West Quincy. The best grained dark and blue granite found it's use in the form of attractive memorials, great commercial structures and memorial buildings. Lesser grades and scraps were used for all types of stonework; from breakwaters to house foundations and cobblestones. One can only wonder what beautiful highly-polished sparkling memorial standing today was fashioned from this block by one of Quincy's artisan stonecutters. "Quincy Granite - lasting until everlasting."

Take A Long Hard Look At Shaw's Plan

Editor, The Quincy Sun

The City of Quincy, the Planning Department, the City Traffic Engineer, and the City Councillors should take a long hard look at the proposed plan of Shaw's to locate at the site of the Boston Gear Works. This is the same plan that was presented and turned down by the council last year.

Hancock St. is a mess, in fact traffic is much heavier than a year ago, and no improved traffic lights will control the volume of traffic that goes up and down this street daily. No attempt has been suggested to divert the traffic from Hancock St., except of course to converge on the quiet safe neighborhood.

With the large increase of cars, some 2500 to 3000 per day, will the fire, police, ambulances and other emergency vehicles be able to get through to aid people in need? Maybe a helicopter will solve the problem, but who will pay for this? Large delivery trucks will be up and down constantly day and night.

There are many small businesses who have been in the area for many years also paying taxes, and being a good neighbor to everyone. They will be affected. No one can compete with the powerful large corporations whose only goal is to make money at the expense of anyone. The city does not need any more empty stores.

Most important are the children of the city, their safety should be the prime concern of everyone. There are four schools in the immediate area with over 1500 children attending these schools, plus a large day care center, they are coming and going daily, a good number using Hancock St. The youth are our future and we should watch out for their best interest and safety now so that hopefully they will watch out for ours in the years to come.

The city and our elected officials who have been chosen by the citizens of Quincy as their spokesmen had better look at this situation and the good of the people before they consider this proposal.

The business people who support Shaw's, and have had large picture advertisements in the local papers--are they all residents of Quincy? It was very nice of Shaw's to do this, but is the free publicity worth the safety of everyone? Hardly.

The meeting at City Hall, Shaw's had many union workers and employees carrying signs in support, are they all residents? I was really taken aback to see a bus that picked up seniors at the three senior citizen buildings in Wollaston and were treated to a free buffet at Coddingtons, at the expense of Shaw's, they were given free Shaw's sweatshirts, caps, and buttons, they were all wearing them. Isn't this a bit intimidating? I am sure Shaw's can find a more suitable location for their market in a less congested area and not disrupt this neighborhood for the safety of everyone.

Sheets Sworn In As Councillor

Feb. 9-15
1974

By PAUL HAROLD

Two months after he was elected Ward 4 Councillor, James Sheets was sworn into office.

The delay was the result of a conflict of interest question that was raised concerning his job at the city sponsored Quincy Junior College.

The case was resolved this week by Superior Court Judge Harry Kalus who ruled that Sheets could collect both his salary as councillor and college professor. He said there was no conflict of interest in the law because as councillor Sheets would not exercise direct supervision over the school department.

John Gillis, city clerk, said he was glad the court ruled the way it did. "I'd have sworn Sheets into office back in January when he was supposed to have taken the oath even though I thought there was a conflict of interest," he said.

ALTERNATE GAS SALES BEGIN

In an attempt to reduce the lines at gas stations, Mass. adopted the Oregon plan which allowed for cars to gas up on odd or even dates, depending on the first digit of their license plate.

Although some observers said there was no difference in the lines, most gas station owners thought the new system worked well.

Forest Mason of Hancock Exxon said lines were very manageable and he was pleased with the plan.

Prior to the state adopting a uniform system to deal with the gasoline shortages, stations were giving preference to long-time customers. Atty. Bryan Stevens had brought George McGinn, owner of McGinn's Shell station on Furnace Brook Pkwy., to court to challenge preferred sales.

MEADY CALLS FOR NEW CITY AUDITORIUM

Leo Meady of Quarry St., social events chairman for the 350th Anniversary Commission, said the city should resurrect plans of several years ago to build a combination City Hall and public auditorium.

He noted there was a need for such a facility and that it would be a fitting memorial to mark the anniversary celebration.

"In recent years people have rebelled against statues, fountains and the like as memorials for anniversary events. A so-called living memorial seems to be desired today," he said.

Stuffed Artichokes

Between shoveling all that white stuff last week-end, I had six artichokes in the refrigerator just waiting to be cooked.

If you like artichokes, you will find them easy to prepare. After they are stuffed, they can be cut in halves or be eaten whole.

STUFFED ARTICHOKES
6 artichokes
6 slices of bread (soaked in water)
about 2 tablespoons seasoned bread crumbs
2 tablespoons tomato sauce garlic powder
salt and pepper to taste
stems of artichokes (cut up in small pieces)(optional)
a tablespoon olive oil

Place the artichokes in a large pan, cover and boil until they are dark green in color. (about 10 minutes).

While these are cooking, soak about six slices of bread in water (one slice per artichoke). Squeeze the water out and place in a bowl Add the tomato sauce, the salt and pepper, the bread crumbs, the stems cut up (after the artichokes are cooked) the garlic powder and mix until mixture is the consistency of mashed potatoes.

When the artichokes are done, cool and clip the edges of the leaves with a scissors, and cut off the stems so the artichokes can stand well in a pan after they are stuffed.

To stuff the artichokes open the top of each one and place the stuffing. Place them in a deep pan arranging them side by side. On top of each, sprinkle a little olive oil. In the pan, put a cup of water and a little tomato sauce. Cover and cook on top of the stove for 30 minutes. (or until leaves are tender). If you chose to bake them, place them in a covered baking dish and set the oven at 350 degrees and bake the same length of time.

WHALE DAY was recently held by fifth graders at the Lincoln-Hancock School. Students were involved in extensive study of whales that focused on notetaking and research skills. Activities included whaling journals, making of scrimshaw and oil lamps, and construction of the 30-foot whale in photo.

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

YMCA'S Kids Unlimited Celebrates 10th Anniversary

Kids Unlimited, the child care program of the South Shore YMCA, serving children ages two and nine months to six years, recently celebrated its 10th anniversary with an informal ice cream and cake party.

Under the management of its original director, Marcia Bailey, and two out of three original lead teachers, enrollment has increased from an original nine children to 68 since Feb. 1985.

Bailey attributes the success of the center and its unusually low staff turnover to nurturing programs, child care scholarships, staff benefits and ongoing education. "Here is a nurturing environment where children develop manners, learn to solve their own problems, and can become creative learners. Also, because the Y sets aside child care scholarship funds, we can help families in need. This in itself is very gratifying. Staff members receive Y memberships, continuous education and are encouraged to bring their own special talents to the program."

"We feel privileged to be able to provide not only a nurturing but also a stable environment for children. In this way we feel we can better serve the families that participate in this program," adds Mary Moore, executive director of the South Shore YMCA Quincy Division.

Weekend Storm Wipes Out City's Snow Budget

advance, $50,000 for last month's storm and $100,000 for the weekend storm--would seem to indicate that the city is currently about $50,000 over its snow and ice budget, City Auditor Robert Foy said between $50,000 and $100,000 is a safer estimate. There are additional expenses, including equipment maintenance, that could place the total closer to $100,000, he explained.

Colton also noted that a few thousand dollars has been spent on postcards, printing and advertising to notify residents of the city's recently-changed parking regulations.

"We spent $7,000 just for postage," he said.

Foy said the additional monies have been taken from the city's tax, water and other receipts, an act that does not require City Council approval if the funds are used for snow and ice operations. At the end of the winter, the DPW will have to replace any such funds by receiving the council's permission to dip into the free cash account.

Currently, the city has just over $2 million in free cash, Foy added.

Mayor James Sheets said that while he generally does not like to use free cash for any reason, sometimes it is a necessity.

"We're okay with free cash," he said, referring to the total amount currently available to the city. "We just kind of hope, you know, that there'll be no more snow (this winter)."

The grin on Sheets' face suggested that the mayor is aware that likely will not be the case.

Colton said he felt things went very smoothly for his department over the weekend, during which the city declared a local state of emergency between Saturday at 9 a.m. and Sunday at 9 a.m.

"We had great cooperation from residents regarding the parking procedures, with very few problems," he said. "I think that shows in the job that we did. I think that everyone performed very well."

Colton noted that only 85 cars had to be towed during the weekend, adding that "probably between 250 and 300" would have had to have been towed during a similar storm last year.

In addition to cooperation from the public, Colton said new DPW equipment including three $135,000 snow plows as well as greater manpower and better route planning all helped the cause.

Sheets said the work done by the department over the weekend was "outstanding."

"Based on everything I heard and everything I saw, the DPW did an exceptional job with this storm," he said.

Officials from Quincy Emergency Management were also busy during the storm. Deputy Director Tony Siciliano said an Emergency Management Operations Center at the DPW building (55 Sea St.) was opened Saturday at 8 a.m. and remained open until midnight.

Siciliano said five volunteer telephone operators worked at the center on stand-by alert to assist callers in any way they could, while other Emergency Management officials gave residents rides to Quincy Hospital, clinics or any other appointments they had.

"Whatever came up, we took care of it," he said, noting that things went smoothly because officials followed the city's Comprehensive Emergency Management (CET) Plan for winter storms. He added that he worked closely during the storm with Quincy Police Capt. Fred Laracy, who is acting police chief while Chief Francis Mullen is out of the city.

Siciliano also praised Colton and his department for the work they performed over the weekend.

"The DPW did a spectacular job staying on top of the storm," he said.

Sheets said Quincy Emergency Management and the police department deserve a lot of credit for the smooth operations during the storm.

"Tony's people always do a great job," he said.

The mayor also singled out a new federally-funded program run by Quincy Council on Aging Director Brian Buckley that sends teen-agers out to shovel sidewalks for senior citizens as being a major factor during the weekend.

The City Council also praised Colton, the DPW and others involved with the snow removal operations at its meeting Monday night.

The storm dumped a total of 7.1 inches of snow on the ground in the city, according to Quincy meteorologist Rob Gilman. It contained blizzard-like conditions--winds blowing at 35 miles per hour accompanied by blowing or falling snow--for at least of couple of hours on Saturday, he said.

"It's an extraordinary storm system," Gilman said Monday. "It tends to make only make the air cooler, but it's bringing air tremendous distances in a short amount of time."

Gilman explained that the storm, which has settled near Quebec, Canada, was expected to be "nearly stationary for the next several days" and brought arctic air from that region down to Massachusetts which was responsible for the near zero-degree temperatures the city has experienced this week.

McCauley Opposes Move To Enlarge School Committee

Two current proposals to expand the size of the Quincy School Committee -- one of which would include members elected by ward -- would result in greater pressure to increase school spending, says former Quincy Mayor and School Committee Chairman Francis McCauley.

McCauley, who announced last week that he is considering running for a two-year term on the committee, said that the proposals advanced by committee members Daniel G. Raymondi and Stephen Durkin would result in an unwieldly body whose members would focus on ward issues rather than serving the educational needs of the city as a whole.

"The only results you'll see from expanding the School Committee are longer meetings and more pressure to increase spending," McCauley said.

Currently, the School Committee has seven members -- six elected members who represent the city as a whole and the mayor, who serves as chairman by virtue of his office. Raymondi's plan would increase the size of the committee to 11 members: six elected by ward and four elected at-large, with the mayor as chairman.

Durkin's proposal, meanwhile, would add two members to the board, but keep all members elected at-large.

McCauley said that when he first ran for School Committee in 1971, he advocated expanding the committee to nine members -- six elected by ward and two at-large, with the mayor as chairman. After being elected to the committee, however, McCauley said he changed his mind when he saw the problems a committee based on ward representation would create.

"I saw that committee members elected at large viewed educational problems on a city-wide basis, rather than with the parochial view that a committee member representing a particular ward would take," he said.

As an example of the failure of large, ward-based school boards, McCauley pointed to the problems experienced by the Boston School Committee when it expanded several years ago from five members elected at-large to 13 members -- nine of them representing districts and four elected at-large.

"The change to ward representatives in Boston proved disastrous," he said, "and led to an appointed school committee".

McCauley added that while there are numerous arguments against an expanded board, he can think of no benefits for such a move.

"The question I would ask the plans' proponents is "What hasn't been accomplished by the Quincy School Committee to date that would have been accomplished by an expanded school committee?" he said. "Nothing, that I can think of."

JOHN CHIASSON

Bill Chiasson said: "Hospice of Boston not only supported and cared for my father, but they were there for my family. I know my father would be proud of what Ed is doing."

Another son, John Jr., said: "My father touched so many people in his lifetime. We wanted it to continue even though he is gone."

Acupuncture Can Help Ease Cigarette Withdrawal

By DANIEL KARP
Licensed Acupuncturist

Acupuncture is a highly effective treatment for cigarette withdrawal. With patients who express a strong determination to stop smoking, the success rate over several years of clinical experience is an amazing 90 percent.

If you have made up your mind to stop smoking and would like some help, acupuncture can definitely help you!

Why is acupuncture so effective in helping people stop smoking? Because it is highly effective in treating the three major problems people encounter as they go through withdrawal: nicotine cravings, tension and irritability, and "breaking the habit." Our patients routinely report a significant drop in their craving for nicotine--even after one or two treatments. Acupuncture is well-known as a muscle and nerve relaxant, and the calming and soothing effects of acupuncture are tremendously helpful during the tense period of withdrawal.

Finally, acupuncture treatment of the nervous system can help a person break the cigarette habit by interrupting the reflex habit arc (hand-mouth reflex) stored in the brain, nerves and muscles.

If you are ready to kick the habit, I can help you! Call 471-5577 for a free consultation. Today is a great day to stop smoking!

FREEZE-FRAME DIAGNOSIS FOR HEART DISEASE

One of the sneaky things about coronary-artery disease is that it's not that easy to tell who's got it or how bad it is. Blood cholesterol tests can help identify people at high risk, but they can't give firm answers about a specific individual's health. Angiography, in which tiny instruments are inserted into arteries, offers a way to look at the inner condition of the circulation system, but it is an invasive procedure. However, doctors at the University of Miami School of Medicine have developed a technique called the Ultrafast CT, in which multiple X rays are used to "freeze" the motion of a beating heart, allowing a glimpse of the arteries and the extent of any calcification, which is a major symptom of atherosclerosis.

P.S. To reduce your risk of coronary artery disease, stop smoking, control high blood pressure, eat less fat and exercise regularly.

If you have a history of heart disease in your family, routine physical exams and proper diet and exercise are among your best defenses against future illness. Our office, staffed by caring professionals, offers a pleasant environment for medical care. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself offer complete medical care with a focus on treating heart disease. Case Study

A medical doctor, in practice for 16 years, never recommended Chiropractic for his patients. He understood little about the principles and practice of Chiropractic.

He eventually had the good fortune of meeting a Chiropractor . . . Only by virtue of the trust that the Chiropractor inspired, the medical doctor decided to ask him to treat his chronically painful neck, of 15 years duration. In the last 5 years he had experienced severe daily headaches.

In his past 16 years of practice, he had seen some astonishing results but the response that occurred after merely one treatment, he found to be truly remarkable. Following the initial treatment, he remained headache free for a week, longer than in the past 5 years. After continued treatment he remained almost completely headache free for 2 months.

It was apparent that for all his years as a physician he had not been open to nor had he taken the opportunity to consider the benefits of Chiropractic care. As a neurologist, he was keenly aware of the many cases of headache requiring medical or neurosurgical care but was not aware that Chiropractic could provide results of such magnitude.

He strongly recommend to his medical colleagues that they be more receptive to and scientifically explore the benefits of Chiropractic as practiced by many skillful Chiropractors like Dr. Freedman across the country.

CHIROPRACTIC WORKS-NO DRUGS-NO SURGERY. Dr. Barry Freedman has been the Director of FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC for the past 15 years, with offices at 112 McGrath Highway, Quincy Center. He is President of the Massachusetts Chiropractic Society, teaches nutrition at Massasoit Community College and lectures extensively at many organizations and schools, including Harvard University School of Medicine and Boston University School of Nursing. If you have any questions about chiropractic or need information about lectures for your organization please call Dr. Freedman's office at 472-4220.

Everything you'd ever expect in a modern hospital room. Except a roommate.

Virtually every room at our hospital is a private room. Most have spectacular views of Boston Harbor or the Blue Hills. But it won't cost you or your insurance any more. We just think that's the way you deserve to be treated.

Chiropractic Centennial This Year, But Roots Go Back Much Further

Chiropractic is considered a relatively young health science. Its centennial is being celebrated this year. Nevertheless, its historic roots can be traced back to early civilizations, according to Dr. Barry Freedman, a well-known South Shore chiropractor and president of the Massachusetts Chiropractic Society.

Some of the earliest indications of spinal manipulation go back to 2700 B.C. during the Chinese Kong Fou period. Much later, between 460 and 377 B.C., Hippocrates, the father of modern medicine, was known to have taught the philosophy of the body's innate (in-born) ability to heal itself. It was also about that time that the beneficial effects of the "laying on of hands" became known.

Chiropractic is a branch of the healing arts which is based on the premise that good health depends, in part, on the correct functioning of the nervous system. Chiropractors do not use drugs or surgery. They do perform corrective spinal adjustments on specific vertebrae in the spine and related structures to correct misalignments or subluxations, Dr. Freedman said.

Chiropractors also consider all aspects of a patient's life. This includes environment, diet, exercise, physical and emotional stress factors with an eye to prevention.

Chiropractic is a conservative approach to health restoration and biological maintenance. Chiropractic places emphasis on maintaining the body's structural integrity so that the body may function at its best. This provides the individual with the maximum opportunity of functioning at his or her best, according to Dr. Freedman.

Chiropractic is an effective method of treatment for many different types of health problems that originate in the spine and the nervous system. Doctors of chiropractic provide preventative and corrective care to patients from every walk of life: from infants to senior citizens, from office workers to factory workers, from weekend sports enthusiasts to professional athletes.

Dr. Freedman noted that chiropractic is now the third largest health care profession in the Western world after medicine and dentistry. There are approximately 36,000 chiropractic in the United States, 3,000 in Canada, 2,000 in Australia, 1,000 in Japan, 300 in France, and 100 to 300 in each of Belgium, Denmark, Great Britain, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, New Zealand, and South Africa.

In the blink of an eye may not take up much time, but all together your eyeblinks do. Over the average lifetime, a person blinks an estimated 333,000,000 times.

Skin Care Tips For Winter Trips

(NAPS)—Don't forget to keep your skin looking and feeling its best during your winter travels. Whether you're heading south to the beach or north to the ski slopes, your skin is exposed to dramatic climate changes that leave it feeling dry and irritated. Here are some easy skin-saver tips:

• Lower the temperature. After a freezing day, a hot shower may feel good, but it contributes to skin dryness. Combined with dry, heated air, this spells dry skin disaster. Remember to use Caress® Body Bar to help skin retain moisture.

During your winter travels, remember to pack a moisturizing body bar

• Exfoliate your skin. After bathing, gently scrub skin with a mild cleanser and a terry washcloth for a quick exfoliation. If necessary, follow up with a moisturizer all over to prevent dry, chapped skin.

• Bring along moisture. Don't forget to pack a moisturizing body bar, like Original Peach or Softly Scented Caress Body Bar (now available in new travel sizes), to keep skin feeling soft and smooth in any climate.

• Let your skin breathe. Wear layers of loose cottons underneath heavy winter clothing to prevent skin from chafing and flaking from perspiration.

• Moisturize the air. Help your skin retain moisture when you return from your tropical trip or ski holiday by using a humidifier or placing a basin of water near your radiator to add moisture to the air.

Judith Prebluda Opens Psychotherapy Practice

Judith Prebluda, M.A., L.M.H.C., A.D.T.R., a licensed counseling psychotherapist and an advanced dance/movement therapist, has opened a new practice in Quincy.

Prebluda is also a second degree Reiki practioner, and a long time student of Native American and Tibetan Buddhist studies. She calls her work "body and mind psychotherapy," because it bridges the body/mind connection.

In addition to bringing 15 years of counseling experience to her work (specializing in trauma related and substance abuse related issues), Prebluda has been studying various forms of healing approaches that work with the "chi", or "life force energy" that flows around and through the body. These approaches include Reiki and Native American studies.

She is also a registered dance movement therapist, a discipline which utilizes movement and body awareness to express and work through issues on a physical as well as an emotional level.

Prebluda's practice is located at 29 Cottage Ave. (Suite 11), Quincy Center. To make an appointment or for more information, call 773-0433.

DR. LINDA WILSON is congratulated by Quincy College Board of Governors Chairman and School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi during investiture at United First Parish Church in Quincy Center making her interim president at the college. Wilson is the first woman to head the school.

'Significant Landmark In My Life'

Linda Wilson Installed As Interim College President

By MICHAEL WHALEN

"This is definitely one of the most significant landmarks ever along my life's path."

These were the words of Dr. Linda Wilson after she was installed as the new interim president of Quincy College. The convocation ceremonies were held last Friday at United First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

Wilson, 47, is the first woman to head the city-owned college, which serves about 6,000 students on campuses in Quincy and Plymouth.

Among those on hand for the event were Mayor James Sheets, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Quincy High School Principal Lloyd Hill, members of the Quincy College Board of Governors, City Council and School Committee; other city officials and representatives from more than 20 other Massachusetts colleges and universities. Guest speaker was Selena Respass, director of the Office of Violence Prevention for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

Wilson said she was "thrilled" about her new role at the college, adding that she has dedicated her life to the field of education.

"This is truly an experience I'll never forget," said Wilson. "My one constant companion in life has been education. Education has provided me with some of the best times in my life....Work is love made visible, and I love education."

Wilson, a native of Quincy, also spoke of the "symmetry" of her new position, saying that in a way it makes sense for her to run the college because she and the school have a lot in common, including deep roots in the community and the fact that the elementary school she attended was the same building that is now the college's Coddington Hall.

She added that she plans to increase the college's role in the community and hopes to continue to grow along with the school.

"Success is a continuing process of becoming the best you can be," said Wilson.

Respass was relatively brief in her remarks, but praised Wilson for being the first woman to run the school.

"Throughout any woman's career, leadership is always the key to success," she said.

Board of Governors Chairman and School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi described Wilson as "an accomplished administrator and experienced educator" and the perfect person to lead the college into "a new semester" in its history.

"On behalf of the Board of Governors, I congratulate you," he said.

Sheets also had kind words for the new interim president.

"This is your day," the mayor told Wilson. "You have and love and our support and we will work with you. Education has been transforming the lives of young men and women for many, many decades, and that process will continue at Quincy College, now and into the future."

Wilson was selected in November by the Quincy College Board of Governors to replace former Interim President Donald Young, who served in the position for over a year. She officially began her new duties Jan. 3.

Young had replaced O. Clayton Johnson, who was fired and is currently appealing that decision in court.

Wilson, who now lives in Rockland, was chosen from nearly 100 applicants from learning communities throughout the United States. She has served in a number of capacities at the college since 1979 and has held several positions with the Quincy Public Schools since 1969.

Most recently, Wilson served as director of the Drop-Out Prevention Program in the Quincy Public Schools. She has taken a leave of absence from the school system in order to run the college.

Wilson, a 1965 graduate of Quincy High School, has received degrees from Brown University, Northeastern University and Boston College. She has also taken supplemental courses at Northeastern and BC as well as Boston University and Bridgewater State College.

Bellotti Elected Vice Chairman Of Natural Resources Committee

Rep. Michael Bellotti has been elected by the membership of the Massachusetts House of Representatives to serve as vice chairman of the House Committee on Natural Resources.

Bellotti, who has served as a member of the committee since he was first elected two years ago, welcomed the challenge before him in his new assignment.

"The greatest concern for my constituents has and continues to be high water and sewer rates resulting from the unfunded federal mandate to clean up Boston Harbor," Bellotti said.

In addition, as a member of the committee, Bellotti has been able to successfully lead the fight for water and sewer rate relief.

"This year we hope to garner $50 million to help alleviate the burden on Quincy and Massachusetts residents and as vice chairman of this committee I will be in an even better position to help achieve this," he said.

Bellotti added that he will continue to work on the many important issues that affect the residents of Quincy and encouraged them to call or write to him with their concerns and views.

"I have considered it a great privilege and responsibility to serve my district and look forward to the next two years in my increased capacity."

Council Plans Restoration Of City Hall Chambers

Asked when he wants to have the work done, Kolson grinned and shouted, "Soon!"

The first step in his plan is to form a Restoration Committee to begin discussing changes with the Quincy Historical Society, Kolson said. The building is located in the city's historic district.

The second step will be to devise a plan to secure private funding for the restoration so that it does not cost any taxpayer dollars, he added.

According to City Clerk Joseph Shea, such work has not been done in the chambers since the administration of then-Mayor Walter Hannon in 1973.

NQ Gets Tourney Spot But Bows To English

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

The North Quincy High boys' basketball team dropped a 70-61 decision Friday to Boston English, one of the toughest teams in the city of Boston.

English's (14-1) only loss this season was to a New Jersey powerhouse.

The Raiders (10-5) were scheduled to host Taunton Tuesday (Feb. 7) in a pivotal Old Colony League match-up. A win by North would put them in a tie with Taunton for first place in the league. North hosts Weymouth Friday at 7 p.m.

Against English, North found the opponent too quick in the first half as an inability to hold on to the ball led to a 10-point deficit. Brad Gray helped the Red Raiders stay in the game by scoring 12 of his team-high 22 points in the first half. North trailed 41-24 at the break.

"We've been a little sluggish in the first half of our last few games," said North Quincy head coach Ted Stevenson. "I'm proud of them for the second half when they came out and played great. But it takes two halves."

The Raiders, led by Gray, would improve their effort considerably by scoring the first eight points of the second half. Better inside shooting and rebounding, the lack of which caused the first-half slump, led to the turnaround.

Jerry Fernandez also contributed to North's improved play by scoring six points after being held scoreless in the first half. He also grabbed four rebounds and two steals in the second period.

The Raiders were able to hold English's lead to single digits for most of the second half. When Tom Coughlin scored two of his 11 points with seven minutes left, the English lead was cut to 52-49.

But that was as close as North would get as the fast-paced English team netted the next six points. Four points by Coughlin and three-point baskets by Matt Beston and Jesse Casler kept the Raiders close, but high-powered English was not to be denied.

Toby Odom, Eric Zimmerman, Mike Doyle, Mac Ngutter and Dave Scott also saw playing time for North Quincy.

On Thursday night the Red Raiders qualified for post-season tournament play for the second consecutive season with a 72-58 win over Plymouth South in a make-up game.

Gray led North with 17 points and Beston followed with 12.

The MIAA lowered the tournament requirements this year to 10 wins or a .500 record.

The Raiders can now concentrate on their goal of winning the Old Colony League title. Wins over Weymouth, Bridgewater-Raynham and Quincy will give them a shot the title and a high seeding in the tournament.

Quincy's OT Win Highlights Tough Season

By KERRY BYRNE

Jeff Russell nailed a 14-foot jumper at the end of regulation to knot the score at 62-62, and Tom Clark took over with six points in OT, to give the Quincy High School basketball team a 70-68 win over Plymouth South Friday night.

"Clark was the difference in overtime," said Quincy head coach John Franceschini. The senior also grabbed five boards (three offensive) in the extra session.

Russell's buzzer-beater gave him 14 points while senior co-captains Dave Sawan and Jason Downey scored 11 each.

The win lifted the Presidents to a 4-9 overall record and a 3-8 mark in Old Colony League in what has been a season as tough as Franceschini had expected for his young and often outmanned club.

"Right now basically what has been the big deterrent during the season is our shooting percentage - 39 percent from the floor and 62 percent from the line," said Franceschini.

As a prime example: in two games against Bridgewater-Raynham the Presidents lost by a total of seven points while missing a combined 29 free throws and shooting 32 percent from the field.

"That's been the old sticky-wicket this year," said the coach. "The problem has been consistency on the offensive end. With so many players coming back this will be a focus of ours during the off-season."

Despite the offensive woes, the team has kept themselves in many ball games with tough play on the other end. "Our defensive effort has been tremendous. We're not dealing with a very big team and a lot of times we're overmatched in the middle," said Franceschini, who one day hopes to coach a player taller than 6-2.

Among those who have had to bang bodies this season are three sophomore forwards, Bobby Walsh, Scott Pyer and Geoff King. "Bobby and Scott played great defensively against Plymouth South," said the coach. "King has been doing a great job on the boards for us."

The Presidents have also received great leadership from their co-captains. "Dave and Jason are having superb seasons. They're playing even beyond what we had expected at the beginning of the year." said Franceschini.

Coach Fran also singled out Dave Gunther, for the leadership he has provided at point guard, and senior guards Jim Lencki and Chris McPartlin.

"Basically we've been playing a lot of people, 10, consistently."

Quincy faces a tough stretch this week with a game against the OCL-leading Taunton Tigers today (Thursday), a trip to Barnstable Friday and a game against Silver Lake Tuesday.

"We have a lot of basketball to go and a lot of things we'll be working on," said Franceschini.

Squirt, Pee Wee Games Cancelled

The Quincy Youth Hockey squirt and pee wee league games scheduled for Saturday at the Quincy Youth Arena were cancelled due to the storm.

The games will be made up at a later date.

Palaza To Attend BC On Scholarship

By KERRY BYRNE

Quincy High offensive lineman Butch Palaza, who spearheaded the Presidents' punishing ground attack last season, became the school's first football player in several decades to receive a full scholarship to a Division I college.

Last week, on national letter of intent day, the 6-foot-4-inch, 280-pound offensive lineman signed with Boston College during a ceremony at the Quincy High Pride Room.

Palaza became the second football player in as many years from the city of Quincy to receive an athletic scholarship to a Division I school. North Quincy's Brian Raftery, a defensive lineman, is in his second semester as a freshman at Rutgers University in New Jersey. The two battled each other during the 1993 Thanksgiving Day game and may do so again when BC and Rutgers square off in their annual Big East match-up.

Palaza's parents, Augustus and Judy, School Superintendent Eugene Creedon, Principal Lloyd Hill and a number of Palaza's coaches, classmates and teammates were on hand for the signing. Several North Quincy High football players were also in attendance.

"This is a special day for Quincy High football and the Palaza family," said former Quincy High head football coach Jack Raymer, who hosted the ceremony in which Palaza and his parents signed forms officially declaring the young man's intent to attend Boston College.

Afterwards Raymer, who retired from coaching at the end of last season, spoke highly of his prize player. "Butch is a great kid. He has worked awful hard. He has a good work ethic, which he's shown on the field, with the weights and in the classroom. And he hasn't even reached full physical development yet. They [Boston College] like that because they can develop him even more over there. You probably won't even recognize him next year.

"He's just a good athlete, that's most important," said Raymer. Palaza is also the track team's best shotputter. An offensive tackle in high school, he will likely be moved to guard or center at Boston College. He is considered "too small" to play tackle at the Division I college level.

Palaza was recruited since his junior year by BC, Rutgers and a number of Yankee Conference Schools. He cited the proximity of The Heights as one of his main reasons for choosing to attend BC.

In high school, Palaza was a force to be reckoned with on both sides of the ball. On offense, the pigskin was likely to go behind him whenever a first down was needed. The Presidents averaged nearly 200 yards rushing per game last season. Making this more impressive was the fact that nearly every defense they faced ran an eight-man front because of their limited passing attack.

On defense Palaza had monster outings against Marshfield, with three sacks and a half-dozen stops behind the line of scrimmage, and against Barnstable, against whom he batted down a pass for a two-point conversion with no time left to preserve a 14-13 win.

Sam Brown, Quincy High's leading rusher last season, spoke at the ceremony. "How many yards did I get last year," he said while looking at Palaza, "1,200? I think I got 1,000 of those behind Butch."

Palaza's scholarship worth could reach as high as $150,000 and include a master's degree if he is at Boston College for five years. Many football players are 'red-shirted' for one year, giving them an extra season of athletic eligibility.

In the 1950s, Quincy High wide receiver Jimmy Colclough entered Boston College and went on to play several years for the then Boston Patriots, becoming one of the most prolific pass catchers in team history.

Quincy Mat Men Seek Post-Season Success

The Quincy High School wrestling team was scheduled to meet cross-town rival North Quincy last night (Wednesday) and hoped for a win to end their season at 13-2 overall, 3-2 in the Old Colony League.

Though falling short of their preseason goal of winning the league title, head coach Lou Venturelli has not conceded the season. "We've had a very successful season, but we want the sectional title! Coach [Larry] Taglieri and I feel that with our best effort it is within our reach."

Leading the Presidents this season have been the four senior captains: Gregg Santoro is 10-1 in dual meets, heavyweight Mike Feeley is 9-1, Matt Miller has an 8-1 dual meet record and two-year captain Bryan Gallahue is 11-2.

Senior John Richards (9-4), Rich Bergeron (7-2), Matt Strauchon (4-2) and Billy Mitchell (5-3) have also been major contributors to the Presidents' success.

Coach Venturelli singled out the work of Bergeron: "Rich has been tremendous. He's wrestling two weight classes above where he could be and always gives his best effort."

Despite the wealth of seniors who will leave the squad at the end of the season, Quincy's wrestling future is still bright. Rich Testa (10-3), Seve Tan (5-3), Mark Froehlich (5-3) and John Cheverie (7-3) have excelled this year and will be counted on again next season.

Other underclassmen who saw varsity action are sophomores Chang Diep and Quang Pham and juniors Tuan Tan, Brian Woodberry and Jake Drohan.

Two weeks ago, heavyweight Drohan's dramatic pin in the day's final match lifted the Quincy High wrestling team to a 31-30 win over Brockton. It was the first varsity win of his career.

The South Sectionals will be held Saturday at Weymouth (South) High school.

The meets begin at 10 a.m. and will last until about 10 p.m.

The top four finishers in each weight class qualify for the Division One state tournament next Friday and Saturday at Westfield High School.

Killer Bees Tie Waltham

The Quincy Youth Hockey Killer Bees, sponsored by the Quincy Firefighters Association, skated to a hard-fought 2-2 tie with Waltham Sunday.

The Bees went into hibernation Saturday due to the foul weather and this may have affected their play Sunday. "The Bees may have had their stingers softened with the day off," said coach Kevin Lewis.

Danny Sullivan, known as Old Reliable because of his sturdy play, beat the Waltham goalie in the opening period for Quincy's first play. He was assisted by Jake O'Donnell.

Liam Powers buzzed in for the Killer Bees second goal off a feed from Shamrock-Liners Myles Clancy and Pat Maloney.

Several other Quincy scoring attempts were nullified by the tough Waltham defense.

Bee defenders George Snowling, Matt Haskins, Chris Sheehan and Danny Davis swarmed all over the Waltham forwards whenever they tried to attack goalie Nick Manning.

Manning was not called upon often but proved up to the task when needed.

Quincy forwards Billy Jones, Gene Nazzaro, Jonathon O'Connor and Brendan Linnane pressed the issue in the Waltham zone.

Quincy could of pulled out the win had they not been without the services of defender Taylor Reinhardt and her father, coach Richie Reinhardt. Both were home helping Ma Bee with the birth of Kyle.

"Congratulations," said the doctor afterwards, "you're the proud parents of a bumbling baby bee."

On May 6 there will be a reunion at the Quincy Lodge of Elks on Quarry Street for all those who played football for Quincy High School between 1950 and 1959.

The event will cost $25 and spouses and guests are encouraged to attend. Ron Ivil (Class of 1956), who is helping to put together the reunion, expects upwards of "250 people to attend."

Reservations can be made by calling Ivil at 337-4347 or Vin Moscardelli at 328-1312.

Jack Raymer may no longer be the Quincy High head football coach, but he's still my first choice to be emcee for any function at which it would appear unprofessional if I fell asleep.

He was in top form last week when he hosted a ceremony for Butch Palaza as he signed his letter of intent to play football at Boston College next year.

The first person he took a shot at was Quincy High Principal Lloyd Hill, who was an all-American football player during his days at Brown University.

"The only difference between Butch and Lloyd," said Raymer, "is that Butch wore a facemask when he played."

He then tried to dupe the Palaza family. Raymer held up a pile of forms which they had to sign that day. "Butch will sign three copies of these, and my mortgage," he deadpanned.

But to prove he's a good sport, the girthsome Raymer even took a shot at himself. He talked of how the 280-pound Palaza was expected to put on weight in college. When the gathering gasped in disbelief Raymer said, "I guess I was one of the few that never had a problem gaining weight in college."

Jack is certainly a good sport. Some of my best high school memories are from when I played under him on the Quincy High football team.

How I fondly recall him urging me on, "Kerry, tackle the other team, you simp."

Yup, every fall as the leaves crack under my feet I think of the old coach: "Byrne, you imbecile, the jock strap goes under the pants."

And, when I watch coaches and players arm-in-arm after a thrilling win, I remember that indestructible bond that was forged between player and coach so many years ago. "Byrne. Byrne who? You're not that midget loser kid who sat on the bench for four years? I thought you joined some freak religious cult and moved to Gambia. Get out my face before I call the police."

Ahh, memories.

I wanted to give my regards to little Billy Barter, who plays Mite hockey for M. Sugarman Co.

During a game Saturday against Doherty & White, Billy fell into the boards and jammed his neck. The crowd became frighteningly silent as the boy lay motionless for several minutes. He was secured to a straight board and taken to the hospital.

Fortunately, Billy is back up and about, and, after a visit with the neurologist to make sure all the pieces are still together, should be playing hockey soon.

Lorraine Rooney, of the Quincy Youth Arena, said "Billy's father said he was chomping at the bit" waiting to get back on the ice.

Quincy resident and Fontbonne graduate Noreen McBride is in the midst of a superb season as captain of the Suffolk University women's basketball team.

McBride is averaging 19 points and 7.6 rebounds per game while playing 38 out of 40 minutes in each contest.

Former North Quincy High basketball player Jeff Jones is playing this season for the Crusaders of Eastern Nazarene College.

A 1992 graduate of NQHS, he is now a junior majoring in business.

Jones' sister, Jennifer, a 1993 graduate of Quincy High School, is playing hoop on the women's team at ENC.

She is joined by QHS classmate Colleen Gallagher.

Jones is majoring in elementary education and psychology. Gallagher is pursuing a degree in physical education.

As of my last report, sophomore Jeff Craig, of Quincy, was leading the Plymouth State College hockey team in scoring with 11 points through 13 games.

North Girls Top Quincy Behind Relays, Shotput

Strong showings in the shotput and relay events lifted the North Quincy High girls to a 63-28 win over Quincy High in their annual winter track showdown.

The Red Raiders won the 4x440 relay behind Melissa DeBonis, Kelly Duggan, Ursula Feurtado and Suk Ng. The 4x176 relay was taken by NQ's Casey Ngo, Jasmine Gonzalez, Phyllis Poon and Jen Pineo.

Kristy Deptula, Jen Pineo and Wingsze Yuen and led a Raider sweep in the shotput. Deptula edged Pineo by just one inch, 31 feet 6-1/2 inches to 30 feet 5-1/2 inches.

Quincy's top performers were Kasey McNaught, who won the 50-yard dash in a time of 6.5 seconds, and Kathryn Lencki, who took the two mile in 12 minutes, 47.3 seconds.

Other North Quincy winners were Poon (50-yard hurdles in 8.1 seconds), Gonzalez (600 in 1:40.8), Pineo (300 in 43.7), Feurtado (1,000 in 3:16.2), Kelly Duggan (mile in 6:05.9) and Beth Crowley (high jump, 4 feet 2 inches).

Quincy's Katie Sullivan (300), Katie Gallagher (600) and Leah Schofield (1,000) captured second place finishes.

Other Red Raiders who performed well were Ng (second in the 50 hurdles), Ngo (second in the 50), Collen Cotter (second in the two mile) and Racheal Repoff (second in the high jump).

East Meets West In Kiwanis Hockey Tourney

Teams from coast to coast will take part in the Quincy Kiwanis Club's 22nd annual Youth Hockey Tournament.

The week-long charity event takes place during school vacation, Feb. 20-26, at the Quincy Youth Arena. Many participants have called the tournament one of the most exciting youth hockey tournaments on the East Coast.

The Division "A" AHA-sanctioned tournament will feature teams in Bantam, Pee Wee, Squirt and Mite divisions. Teams from California, Colorado, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and from throughout Greater Boston have already entered the tournament.

Local teams include Quincy, Pembroke, Medford, Braintree, South Boston, Arlington, Milton, Winchester, Needham, Newton, the South Shore Seahawks (Scituate, Hull, Cohasset) and the Mohawks (Randolph, Stoughton, Avon). Each team is guaranteed at least three games.

A pass, good for admission to all games, can be purchased at the door for $5. Single admission at the door is $3 for adults and $1 for students.

Proceeds provide scholarships, YMCA camperships, financial assistance to families in need and support for the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute at the New England Medical Center in Boston.

North Frosh Girls Split Two

Hot-shooting from the charity stripe gave Silver Lake a 40-35 win over the North Quincy High freshmen girls' basketball team.

The loss was North Quincy's first in the Old Colony League this season. They are now 9-5 overall and 7-1 in the OCL.

Six players scored for North Quincy but they could not overcome key Laker foul shots (13 for 15 from the line).

Kerry Skehan highlighted the Raider effort by going over the 100-point mark for the season.

In their next outing, the young Red Raiders revamped their game plan and came away with a 46-20 win over Plymouth South.

North went from a three-guard attack to a power inside game.

Nine players scored for the Red Raiders, including Katie (KJ) Johnson, who netted her first points of the season.

Skehan went 3 for 3 from three-point land before leaving the game with a broken finger. She will be sidelined for an indefinite amount of time.

North Quincy Girls Strong At State Relays

The North Quincy girls scored in three relays, winning two, to place third in the Class B state relays held at Wheaton College Saturday.

The Red Raiders' 23 points gave them a third-place tie with Dartmouth and Acton-Boxboro. Reading won the meet with 40 points, followed by fellow Middlesex League power Wakefield with 34 points.

North Quincy's impressive shotput trio of Jen Pineo, Kristy Deptula and Wingsze Yuen captured the event with a total of 93 feet 8-1/2 inches, nearly six feet better than the second place team.

Pineo recorded a personal best throw of 34-4-1/2. Deptula threw 30-7 and Yuen 29-1.

NQ's other win came in the shuttle hurdles. Phyllis Poon, Alyssa Cobban, Suk Ng and Lynne Garland finished in a time of 31.9 seconds.

The shuttle dash team of Casey Ngo, Sarah Beston, Ng and Poon placed fourth in 26.4 seconds. The winning Acton-Boxboro team ran just just .3 seconds faster at 26.1. A slip by Ngo and conservative starts by the other three cost the team tenths of seconds.

With strong late-season showings and a number of underclassmen returning, coach Geoff Hennessy is excited about the future prospects. "Only Cobban is a senior. We'll be back and we'll be even better next year," he said.

Despite Saturday's howling Nor'easter, all 30 teams arrived for the events' 9 a.m. start.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Valentine's Day is for children, lovers and romantics. Well, essentially, yes, but when it comes to affairs of the heart, everyone is included.

Valentine's need not be expensive. A happy note written in your own handwriting... a telephone call to someone who might not otherwise receive a call.

Some people find it hard to say "I Love You," but on Valentine's Day they express that sentiment with special remembrances or gifts. It is also a day that "mushy" sentiments on brightly colored paper are not really taken seriously (i.e. Valentines exchanged by children at school). There, the important thing is the number of valentines received, not the sentiment. As people mature, the sentiment becomes more important than the number.

It takes only a little time to send a valentine, or a note, or to make a telephone call to someone, especially someone who is a little "out of circulation" these days. A little surprise gift will make that someone feel special, and you'll feel good too!

How to select a hearing aid.

If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.

- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.

"We know a great deal about hearing aids."

Cross-Country Ski-A-Thon Fundraiser Feb. 25 To Benefit Carroll Center For The Blind

A 12-hour Cross-Country Ski-A-Thon Fund Pledge Raiser will be held Saturday, Feb. 25 at White Mountain Village in Jackson, N.H. to benefit the Carroll Center for the Blind.

For nearly six decades, the Carroll Center has pioneered rehabilitation services for newly blinded adults and other visually impaired persons.

Bob Seamans, of Quincy, is founder and co-chairperson of the event. Last year Bob skied 72 miles in 12 hours raising thousands of dollars through pledges. "I encourage everyone to participate in the 1995 ski-a-thon. Cross-country skiing at this level and type of terrain is easy, healthful and fun," Seamans said.

There are no trail or entry fees, and colorful commemorate long-sleeve t-shirts will be given to all participants regardless of the amount of distance skied.

Each year, the Carroll Center for the Blind provides more direct professional services to blind individuals than any other private agency for the blind in New England.

Five Local Athletes Win Medals At Auerbach Meet

Five athletes from North Quincy and Quincy High schools won medals at the Red Auerbach Freshmen-Sophomore Invitational meet at MIT Saturday.

Several other local athletes turned in personal best performances in the meet which featured nearly 1,000 athletes.

In the girls 50-yard dash, North Quincy sophomore Casey Ngo placed fourth with a time of 6.5 seconds, though many coaches and spectators felt she was a clear second. "With no photo-timing equipment we're at the whim of human error," said North Quincy coach Geoff Hennessy. "We're not disappointed."

Red Raiders Patrick Egan and Sarah Beston advanced out of the qualifying heats in the 50 but did not make it to the finals.

Egan, a freshman, placed second in the high jump with a leap of 6-0. He came close to clearing the 6-2 mark a couple of times.

Freshman Kristy Deptula of North Quincy took third in the shot put with a personal best heave of 30-6-1/2.

Quincy High medals were won by sophomores John Ryan and Kathryn Lencki. Ryan placed fourth in the shot with a toss of 40-1-1/2. Lencki finished fourth in the two mile, clocking in at 12 minutes, 34.2 seconds.

NQ freshman Mike Costales ran his best 50-yard hurdles of the year with a time of 7.2 seconds. "This kid is on his way to becoming a major player in hurdling," said Hennessy.

James Cheung, also a North hurdler, ran his best time of the year but did not advance.

Other Red Raider competitors were Peter Wong (50), Jeff Chu (300), Tom Chan (300), Jasmine Gonzalez (600), Joe Linskey (1,000), Mike Devin (mile), Carrie Jarvie (mile), Vivian Chan (mile), Jimmy Wan (two mile) and Brian Wells (shot put).

North and Quincy were scheduled to square off yesterday (Wednesday) in their annual meet. The two rivals will also participate in the Class B state relays at Wheaton College Saturday, Feb. 4.

The week's other hat trick was recorded by Granite Rail Pizza's Josh Giordani in their 4-3 win over Samoset Pharmacy.

Mike McKeon was responsible for the other Granite Rail goal. He also picked up an assist. Other assists were made by Paul Grazioso, Paul Lennon, Pat Devlin and Gene Nazzaro.

Steve Kelley, Bret Martinson and Steve Ohlson lit the lamp for Samoset. Jessica Poggi had the team's only assist.

Andrew Patten assisted on goals by Matt Germain and Dan Sullivan as Barry's Deli edged Purdy's Ice Cream, 2-1.

The Sacred Heart girls also defeated Weymouth, 25-18.

Ridge again led all scorers with 12 points. Dennis scored seven. Alison McGrath, Julie Burke and third-grader Ashley Ridge each netted one hoop.

McGrath controlled the boards with 15 rebounds.

St. Moritz Claims Weekend Split

The St. Moritz Devils squirt major hockey team skated to a weekend split.

They pasted the Mass./Conn. Braves, 10-0, Saturday and were blanked, 2-0, by the Springfield Pics Sunday.

The Devils bedeviled the Braves netminder with 39 shots in the win. Quincy's Miah Hasson paced the win with four goals.

Adding to the lopsided win were Steve Segalla of Quincy with two goals, and his brother John with one. Also netting single goals were Tom Hughes of Quincy, Richie Howe of Milton and Nathan Shaller of Newton.

Great teamwork made the St. Moritz win possible. Chris Follett of Hanover dished out three assists. James McDonald of Everett and Ryan McInnis of Wellesley each had two. With one assist apiece were Pat Balaconis of South Boston, Kevin Lynch of Milton and Brett Wood of Newton.

Adam Pinaeult scored all three goals for the Braves in Sunday's contest St. Moritz seemed to outplay Springfield but could not manage to put the puck in the net, despite a number of great opportunities.

Devils' goalies Nick Sarno of Milton and Josh Wallace of Somerville played superb but were unable to stop every puck.

They were fronted well by the defensive duo of Tim Egan of Braintree and Steve Cavanaugh of Hingham.

Kevin Patten of Quincy appeared to put the Devils on the board but a quick whistle led to a disallowed goal.

Last week the Devils lost, 7-1, to the Boston University Jr. Terriers at UMass-Boston's Clarke Arena.

The loss was the Devils' first of 1995.

The game was played evenly for the first eight minutes, but two Terrier goals at the end of the opening period left the Devils at a disadvantage they could not overcome.

In the second period Kevin Patten and Richie Howe combined for one of the most spectacular plays of the season. Patten stopped a slap shot in front of his own goalie then skated to the blue line and delivered a perfect pass to Howe. Howe took the puck at center ice, deked several defenders, then slapped a backhander past the netminder for St. Moritz' only goal of the game.

Kevin Lynch and John and Steve Segalla attempted the close the gap in the third period, but their blistering shots were off the mark.

Playing impressively for the Devils were defenseman Brett Woods and goaltender Nick Sarno.

The Terriers put the game away with two tallies late in the final period.

Pee Wee B's Cruise Past Brookline

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee B's skated easily past Brookline, 5-2.

Five different players scored for Quincy: Mark Giese, Matt Gregory, Domenic Papile, Matt O'Connell and Mike D. Sullivan.

Assists were dished out by Mike Cunniff, Tom Gaeta, Andrew Nestor, Chris Lumaghini, Rene Lumaghini, Papile and Giese.

Shane Kabilian played outstanding defense and Steve McGonagle and Ryan Murray hustled in the offensive zone.

Pat O'Donnell played another outstanding game in net.

by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroaty

PICK A NUMBER, BUT NOT ANY NUMBER

To determine which octane level is best for your specific model car, consult the owner's manual. Beyond that, circumstances can play a role in varying a car's gasoline needs. For instance, when driving at high altitudes, car owners may find that they can get by with a lower octane fuel. This owes to the fact that the thinner air at high altitude creates a richer air/fuel mixture, which has the effect of lowering an engine's octane requirement. On the other hand, placing a car under the strain of hauling a trailer (or other kind of heavy load) may well create the need for higher octane gasolines, due to the extra heat generated by the engine. Whatever the case, choosing an octane rating higher than the one needed to eliminate knock will not provide any added benefit.

HINT: A car's octane requirement usually increases along with high mileage.

Don't hesitate to ask any questions about what type of gasoline you should be using or about anything else related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Happy Valentine's Day!

Council Bans Circus, Carnival Animal Acts

Cheney explained that certain uses of animals can be educational for children while others, such as pony rides, are relatively harmless in terms of the animals' well-being.

Still, the new law, which was introduced by Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, states that "No living or non-living non-domesticated animals shall be displayed for public entertainment or amusement in circuses, carnivals or other similar entities on property owned by the City of Quincy, on city-owned property under lease, or on private property. As used in this paragraph, 'displayed' shall include, but is not limited to, animal acts and performances, animals rides and competitive animal races."

McDuff and his colleagues told the council that animals traveling with circuses and carnivals are often transported in narrow cages and other cramped quarters that barely allow them to move. In addition, some animals are beaten, left chained to a post in the hot summer sun for hours, and mistreated in other ways, they said.

"It's our belief that circuses are, by their very nature, cruel to animals," said McDuff.

Atty. Kathleen Hanabury, a lifelong Quincy resident, said animals deprived of their natural habitat react in different ways--sometimes violently--to their confinement. Statistics show that there is one animal handler death in the country per year as a result, she added.

"In short, reports show the only way to prevent [such accidents] is to eliminate animal captivity," said Hanabury.

Quincy Dog Officer Phyllis Berlucchi said she decided to support McDuff's proposal because the status of the health of circus animals is always questionable.

"I'm in favor of banning large circus animals," she said. "I believe they are not very well taken care of."

Susan Carbone, program director of the Somerville-based Citizens to End Animal Suffering and Exploitation (CEASE), agreed.

"Highly social animals are being kept isolated," said Carbone, who led a similar effort that resulted in animal acts being banned in Revere.

McDuff listed several organizations, including the MSPCA and CEASE, which he said were in favor of his proposal.

Cindy Haigh, director of the South Shore Human Society, said she is constantly frustrated by the fact that it is virtually impossible to legally prevent the mistreatment of animals at circuses and carnivals. She noted that she once received a telephone call from two girls between the ages of 11 and 12 who were crying because they had seen teenagers at such a local event throwing objects at a group of "racing pigs."

Haigh regretfully had to tell the girls that there are no concrete laws "to remedy this injustice."

Kolson said he introduced the ordinance because of what he has learned about the treatment of carnival and circus animals.

"I don't think it speaks very well of us as a quote, unquote 'civilized people,'" he said.

Cheney, who noted that he was skeptical of McDuff's proposal when it was first made public last July, said he subsequently changed his mind after taking his wife and daughter to a circus and seeing the way the caged animals were treated.

Other councillors, including Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, voiced similar sentiments.

"I think this is a step in the right direction," said Ayers, who added that he is familiar with such treatment of animals because of circuses and similar events that have been held in his ward.

Cheney said the law would be administered by the Quincy License Board, which grants all permits for circuses and carnivals that wish to come to the city. The Quincy Police Department will enforce the law and shut down any operators that attempt to violate it.

McDuff noted that this is the third major victory for the Quincy Animal League in its 13-year history. Ten years ago, lobbying by the organization resulted in the City Council passing a home-rule petition banning the seizure of animals in Quincy pounds for experiments by Harvard University. Soon after that, the practice was banned throughout Massachusetts.

Five years ago, McDuff added, the group was a driving force behind the construction of the city's modern animal shelter on Broad Street.

Passage of the new ordinance in Quincy would make the city and Revere the only two Massachusetts communities to implement such a ban. In the entire country, only two others have done so: Hollywood, Fla. and Tacoma Park, Md.

64 Struck By Cars In Seven Months

Three-Way Program Aimed At Cutting Pedestrian Accidents

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City officials are looking at ways of improving the safety of Quincy's pedestrians, including the possibility of major renovations at a number of the city's more dangerous intersections.

A meeting of Quincy's Pedestrian Safety Task Force is scheduled for today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in the office of Mayor James Sheets. The group includes the mayor, Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, Police Chief Francis Mullen, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Council on Aging Director Brian Buckley and the City Council, which will be represented by Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien.

Sheets said at press time the meeting will focus on the "three E's"--engineering, education and enforcement. He added that such a "three-pronged offensive" is necessary in order to ensure that proper procedures are followed by pedestrians and motorists alike.

Since July of last year, 64 pedestrians have been struck by cars in the city.

Engineering will be discussed in depth at today's meeting, Sheets said. One possibility that will be discussed is the restructuring of several key intersections that have been targeted as trouble spots throughout the city, most of which are in Quincy Center and North Quincy and to a lesser degree, Wollaston.

Sheets said he has spoken with Gillon about devising a plan to change the intersections in question. In particular, he said he is concerned about the intersection of Hancock, Dimmock and Adams streets in Quincy Center, where a 74-year-old-woman was killed in a crosswalk Jan. 6. A 73-year-old man was also killed while crossing Adams Street Feb. 9.

The mayor added that he is also concerned about the intersection of Hancock and East Squantum Streets near North Quincy High School. A 46-year-old man was injured while crossing near the school Monday morning.

Sheets could not guess the total price of the work that needs to be done but said the Quincy Center intersection alone probably will cost between $50,000 and $100,000. There are a number of funding sources that could be tapped to pay for the projects, including state monies, the city's free cash account, and others, he added.

Mullen said there are other changes that could be made in addition to restructuring the intersections.

"Adding traffic signs, lowering speed limits, prohibiting 'U' turns and moving crosswalks are all considerations that will be made to create a safer environment for pedestrians," said the chief.

Sheets said education is another key component in the plan to improve pedestrian safety.

"Both drivers and pedestrians have some very bad habits," said Sheets, who noted that the majority of Quincy pedestrians struck by cars in the recent past were walking outside crosswalks. He added that Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance has volunteered to be a resource in

Superintendent Updates School Committee

Growing Number Homeless Children In City Schools

A growing number of homeless children in the city are being educated by the Quincy Public Schools.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon planned to join Asst. Supt. Carol Lee Griffin in updating the School Committee on the situation at its meeting last night (Wednesday).

"We just want to make the School Committee aware," said Creedon. "This is one issue I'm not sure if the School Committee is aware of."

Creedon said the numbers of homeless children in Quincy have been increasing, and that the city has about the fourth or fifth highest number of such children in the state.

"We're behind places like Boston, Springfield and Worcester, which have much higher numbers, but after that we're close to the top of the list," he said. "We are providing education for these homeless children. It's not breaking our back financially at all, (and) we're proud of the job we're doing."

Creedon added that the school department's concerns for the children are not that unusual.

"There are no problems with these youngsters, they are fitting in well," he said. "We are concerned with issues like their nutrition and parental support. While they're here in Quincy, it's our job to educate them if their parents so choose."

One Man, 1000 Sit-Ups

Sit-Up Marathon Raises $10,000 In Friend's Memory

A one-man sit-up marathon held Tuesday in memory of the late John Chiasson of Quincy received over $10,000 in pledges.

Ed Ryan of West Quincy did 1,000 sit-ups in 34 minutes during the event, which was held at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy Center. Ryan, the owner of Ed Ryan Plastering, said he did the sit-ups in memory of Chiasson because "John was one of the the greatest men I have ever known."

Chiasson, director of community service for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, died Dec. 24 after a long bout with cancer.

Among those on hand for the marathon were trainer Chris Marshall of Quincy, who helped Ryan prepare for the event and about a dozen members of Chiasson's family.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Hospice of Boston. The suggested pledge for the marathon was $1 per 100 sit-ups, and Chiasson's son Bill said when all the pledges are received the goal of $10,000 should be easily surpassed.

Sales of T-shirts that were available at the event will also help boost the total, he added.

Chiasson said he and his family are also grateful to the YMCA for allowing the use of its facilities, World Gym for providing a sit-up mat and Dunkin' Donuts for supplying donuts and coffee.

Cites Traffic As Major Concern

Ayers Distributes Survey On Shaw's

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers has distributed a one-page survey to about 2,000 residents who would be most directly impacted by a proposed Shaw's Supermarket on the North Quincy-Wollaston line.

Shaw's has applied for a special petition to build at the old Boston Gear Works site located at 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St. Plans call for a 56,200-square-foot supermarket with a 2,000-square-foot mezzanine and an additional 27,925-square-foot retail store.

Ayers said he has spent the last few weeks knocking on doors in the neighborhood, to distribute his survey and to personally ask people about their feelings on the issue. Although Shaw's has agreed to make traffic improvements and other concessions, Ayers said a number of residents are still concerned about the traffic impact in the area.

"No one knows the potential impact of this project better than the people who live and work there," said Ayers. "I'm just doing my homework and speaking directly with the residents of Ward 6."

Ayers and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan have asked the Quincy Planning Board and City Council to refrain from voting on the matter until more extensive traffic studies by City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon are completed. Gillon, who left Quincy last last year to take a job in Boston but returned this month because of family reasons, has reassumed his work on the Shaw's project.

The Planning Board is expected to vote on the matter next month, after which the council will render a final decision.

"With a project of this size and scope, we need to wait until all of the traffic data is assessed," said Ayers. "Obviously, the area affected is much broader than the Hancock Street corridor. We need to consider critical school safety zones and side-street traffic as we evaluate the Shaw's proposal."

Ayers said at press time he also planned to discuss traffic and school safety at last night's (Wednesday's) School Committee meeting.

•Granted a request from Rypan Inc., doing business as Shooters Club Cafe, 58 Ross Way for an entertainment license.subject to a 90 day review by the Quincy Police Department and the license board. Police Chief Francis Mullen asked that the entertainment license be changed to a request for a Cabaret License.(in which no more than 7 band members can perform.at one time) License Board Chairman Joseph Shea said the license board is planning a review on all entertainment licenses in the city and amend the "price structure".

Education Reform Topic At Central PTO Meeting

Central Middle School, 1012 Hancock St., will have education reform on the agenda at its PTO Meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in its Learning Center.

The Student Learning Time Regulations, as adopted by the Massachusetts Board of Education last Dec. 20 will be discussed.

The regulations set statewide minimum standards for the amount of "structured learning time" for those core subjects that all students are required to take. A Learning Time Implementation Plan is to be prepared to ensure full compliance with the new requirements by September, 1997.

The regulations will affect all in the school community, starting with the next school year. The public is invited to the meeting.

Search Continues For Missing Quincy Woman

Police are still investigating the disappearance of a 26-year-old Merrymount woman who has not been seen or heard from since Jan. 20.

Donna Parry, who was last seen watching television and folding a load of laundry in her bedroom at her family's home at 105 Putnam St., vanished without a trace nearly a month ago. Members of her family believe she might have joined the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, which became embroiled in controversy in the 1970s because of its recruitment methods.

Parry had been studying for a master's degree in nutrition at the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut, which is now run by the Professors World Peace Academy, an arm of the church.

Although Quincy police believe the Unification Church has been recruiting students at the Bridgeport campus, a spokesman for the church's regional office said Parry is not known to be a member anywhere in New England. The church's chaplain in Bridgeport said he does not even know her.

DONNA PARRY

Parry's car was found Jan. 25 across the street from South Station in Boston. There were five parking tickets on the windshield, the earliest dated Jan. 21 at 3:23 p.m.

Police said there is no evidence of foul play, but they have not ruled out the possibility. A nationwide missing person's bulletin has not yet provided any answers to the mystery.

"We are pursuing all possible avenues, not just at the University of Bridgeport," said Sgt. Ronald McKim of the Quincy Police Department. "We're kind of at a loss right now, but we're still plugging away."

McKim said Parry's father, retired Quincy Police Lt. Gordon Parry, contacted police after his daughter failed to call home after a seemingly routine drive back to the university. McKim said Donna Parry always called her family after returning to school.

Subsequent phone calls to the school by the elder Parry revealed that his daughter was nowhere to be found at the school and that her car was not on campus.

Donna Parry, a 1986 graduate of Quincy High School, is white, 5-foot-4, weighs about 135 pounds, has blue eyes, brown hair and a fair complexion. She may be wearing a 3/4 length brown coat with a fur collar, gold earrings and a gold-colored wristwatch.

MacKim said it is the department's first missing person's case in about 27 years where the individual has not turned up, dead or alive, within a few days.

Anyone with information regarding Parry's whereabouts is asked to call Lt. Thomas Casey, Lt. Neil MacDonald or Sgt. McKim at 479-1212.

Chretien Candidate For Councillor-At-Large

Ward 3 City Councillor Lawrence Chretien has announced his candidacy for councillor-at-large in the city's municipal election in November.

Chretien told The Quincy Sun at press time he feels now is the right time for him to launch such a campaign.

"I have made a clear decision," he said. "This year I am a candidate for the office of councillor-at-large."

Chretien, who lives at 166 North Central Ave., has been Ward 3 councillor since 1988. He said he is running for an at-large seat because he works to work on issues that affect the entire city.

"There is on important difference between being a ward councillor and a councillor-at-large," he said. "As a councillor elected at-large, I would have the opportunity to spend more time on city-wide issues. Specifically, I want to continue working to make our schools the best, our economy the most prosperous, and our quality of life the highest in Massachusetts.

"This is going to be a very straightforward and positive campaign," Chretien added. "People will have three votes for councillor-at-large and I just want to be one of their choices. I am going to ask voters to look at my qualifications and record as someone who effectively served his ward and provided some leadership on important citywide issues. For examples, I will point to my advocacy for education, my initiation of the city's recycling program, and the leadership I've shown on fiscal matters."

Political insiders have been speculating that Chretien would make a run for an at-large seat this fall. The cost per person at a recent Chretien fundraiser was $100, an amount considered too high for someone running for ward councillor.

All three of the city's incumbent at-large councillors-Council President Michael Cheney, Timothy Cahill and Joseph LaRaia-have said they are running for re-election.

Chretien, 33, is a 1979 graduate of North Quincy High School and holds a bachelor of science degree in resource management from the State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry. He also holds a master of science degree in economic policy from Northeastern University.

Chretien is employed as energy program director at Quincy Community Action Programs Inc., a private non-profit organization. He is also chairman of the Quincy School-Community Partnership and the Quincy Recycling Committee.

"I think my qualifications are worth something, especially today," he said. "Voters are looking for people who have management skills and are capable of making the right economic decisions."

Chretien added he will formally announce his candidacy at a reception Friday, March 3 at the Quincy Sons of Italy Hall, 120 Quarry St. Tickets for the event are $15.

Your Social Security

Questions And Answers

By CAROL BOYLE

Q. I'm going to move this year. I have my Social Security checks deposited directly in my bank account. Does Social Security need to know my new address even though I have direct deposit?

A. You should report a new address even if you have direct deposit because important letters from Social Security are sent to your mailing address. Your benefits could be stopped temporarily if Social Security cannot locate you because you have not reported a change of address. Call Social Security at 1-800-772-1213 and tell them your old address, your new address including the ZIP code, your new telephone number, and your Social Security claim number.

Q. How do I file a Medicare claim?

A. Service providers--doctors, hospitals, medical labs, etc.--are required to submit Medicare claims. You should notify your Medicare carrier if your doctor or other provider refuses to submit a Part B claim for you. The phone numbers and addresses of carriers are listed in The Medicare Handbook.

Q. My father died in late November. Social Security tells me that I must return his November benefit check even though he was alive through most of the month. Why is this?

A. Social Security benefits are not pro-rated. To be entitled to a Social Security benefit check for a given month, the person must be alive the entire month. No benefit is payable for the month of death. On the other hand, when people start receiving Social Security, they get a benefit for the first month they're eligible, even if they don't meet all the eligibility factors until late in the month.

Q. I'm 67 years old and have Medicare hospital and medical insurance. How much will I have to pay in medical expenses before Medicare will start paying?

A. In 1995, after you have met the Medicare hospital insurance (Part A) deductible of $716 and the $100 medical insurance (Part B) deductible, Medicare will begin paying its portion of the approved charges of your hospital and doctor bills.

Q. I'd like to distribute Social Security information to my church school adult class. Does Social Security have any free material?

A. Yes. Social Security produces a pamphlet called Understanding Social Security which gives a general overview of all Social Security programs. Other pamphlets and factsheets are also available which describe the retirement, survivors, and disability programs, as well as information on the Medicare and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) programs. All publications are free of charge and may be ordered by calling Social Security's toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213.

Q. I've been receiving a Social Security benefit since my dad died two years ago. I'll be 18 in February but I won't graduate from high School until June. Will my Social Security benefit stop when I turn 18?

A. No. Social Security benefits can be paid as long as you attend high school full time or until the month you graduate or reach age 19--whichever occurs first.

Q. Does continuing to work after you are 65 have an effect on your Social Security benefits?

A. Yes. Working beyond age 65 adds to your life-time earnings. These earnings are used to compute your Social Security benefits. In addition, you receive credits for each month you delay retirement after age 65. That could increase your benefit 4.5 percent a year for people are 65 this year.

(Carol Boyle is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Tidbits, Anyone?

Tidbits, anyone?

If you like facts and figures (and even if you don't) you might find these a little interesting:

•Thirty-three percent of the people living in the U.S. reportedly think there have always been people on the moon.

•Fifty percent are too young to remember the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

•Sixty percent are not old enough to remember the Korean War.

•Seventy percent don't remember life "before TV."

•Eighty percent are not old enough to remember the 1929 stock market crash.

Those little nuggets are sent along by George Mathieson of Canton, a consultant for non-profit organizations and a long-time Quincy Sun reader.

MATHIESON

Mathieson got those items out of a business publication "Communications Briefings" via a retailing issues letter at Texas A & M University.

Hearing from Mathieson reminds us of the big Massachusetts Constitution Bicentennial Celebration here in 1979 and wondering how people in Quincy remember it.

Mathieson played a key role in the planning of the special events under then Mayor Arthur Tobin and former James McIntyre who was chairman of the Constitution Bicentennial Committee.

How many of you recall that glorious four-day weekend Sept. 6-7-8-9 in 1979? Do you remember:

•The Constitution being delivered from the State Archives under guard in a Brink's armored car to the John Quincy Adams birthplace where the precious document was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin. (It became the model for the U.S. Constitution).

•The contingent of West Point cadets stepping smartly in a parade down Hancock St.

•The stirring concerts by the Quincy Symphony Orchestra and the U.S. Naval Academy Showband.

•And the 1200-pound anniversary cake whipped up by Ernie Montillio that was cut into something like 2,000 pieces and distributed.

•And the spectacular fireworks display off the Quincy shorelines, plus many other activities.

It was a weekend that brought a city proudly together.

Remember?

THE FUND-RAISER Rep. Michael Bellotti hosted for QUILL, the Quincy College Independent Living and Learning Program, drew a good crowd at The Fours.

Including, of course, present city and state elective officials. And if you like to watch potential candidates, they were there, too.

Five potential contenders for the Ward 3 City Council seat Larry Chretien is vacating to run at-large were very much in evidence: Charles McIntyre, Patrick McDermott, James Boudreau, Steve Doherty and David McGillicuddy.

Senator William Keating of Sharon and Rep. Paul Haley of Weymouth were also there looking like early-bird campaigners for the office of Norfolk County District Attorney that William Delahunt will be leaving in four years.

THE DEATH of Weikko Luoma last week takes from the community one of those nice persons who don't come along often enough in one's lifetime.

WEIKKO

A decorated World War II veteran, he founded West Quincy Motors in 1950 and anyone who ever took his or her car there for servicing always knew they got an honest deal. His sons, Doug and Phil, are carrying on that reputation.

Weikko was active in the community and Faith Lutheran Church where as fate would have it, he suffered a fatal heart attack. If he had had a choice, he probably would have chosen there.

To his wife, Miriam, and Doug and Phil go our sincere condolences and our fond memories of a very special person.

THERE'S A NEW face at City Hall. Mayor James Sheets has appointed Kerry Driscoll of Lawn Ave., Quincy Point, as his new personal secretary. She succeeds Grace Giunchiglia who retires this week. (And who will be honored tonight at a dinner at Siro's in Marina Bay.)

Driscoll is a graduate of Northeastern University where she received a bachelor's degree in criminal justice. She has worked in several law firms, including the office of now City Solicitor, Steve McGrath.

Giunchiglia has been breaking her into the routine of the mayor's office.

"I am sure she will do a very good job because she has been taught by the best," said Sheets in a tribute to Giunchiglia.

Cerebral Palsy Seeking Volunteers

Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore, 105 Adams St., Quincy, is in need of volunteers.

Specifically, the agency is looking for individuals with typing or word processing skills who can contribute four to eight daytime hours per week to help with special events, outreach, and other programs.

The organization is also looking for individuals who would like to volunteer at the adult recreation program, held on Wednesday nights from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Lincoln Hancock School in Quincy.

Anyone interested in helping the organization achieve its goal of providing services to disabled children, adults, and their families should contact the center at 617-479-7443.

Scenes From Yesterday

THE SUBMARINE boat Octopus shown in this old postcard was a very successful early design developed at the Fore River Shipyard. This sub won competitive trials off Newport which resulted in a great deal of work for the Quincy yard, including five larger submarines that were built for the Japanese Navy for use in the Russo-Japanese war in 1904-05. When completed they were disassembled, shipped to the west coast on freight cars and loaded on steamers for shipment to Japan. Fore River also produced submarines for the British, Canadian and Spanish navies and, interestingly, delivered some 80 submarines to the Electric Boat Company in the years prior to 1924 when Electric Boat did not have it's own shipyard. In that same year that the Octopus was launched, Fore River built three sister subs with equally predacious names: the Cuttlefish, Viper and Tarantula.

Urges 'Yes' Vote On Shaw's Project

Editor, The Quincy Sun;

I noted in your paper that Councillors Ayers and Phelan have some concerns about Shaw's market coming to No. Quincy and I hope I can help them out. I lived on Cheriton Road for 14 years and now live on Farrington Street near Pneumatic Scale and a walk across the tracks to Billings Road.

There are too many advantages to having Shaw's come to this neighborhood to refuse them. They will create jobs, especially part time jobs for the high school kids and even for the elderly people. They will also create taxes for the city.

More importantly, we need another supermarket. The Stop and Shop where I now shop is increasingly overcrowded. People are parking on Wilson Street to shop. If it weren't for the Blue Laws allowing for more shopping hours on Sunday it would be impossible to get a parking spot. We need another convenient supermarket and the price control it will bring.

I know, because I lived there for so long, about the traffic situation. The biggest problem we had was in the summer with people cutting down Cheriton to the beach. About 10 years ago we tried to make Cheriton one way to stop the beach traffic but it never happened. I would assume now that people shopping are far less an issue than beach traffic. People shopping are more likely to stay on Hancock Street. Albion and Buckingham are short roads hooking up to Oxenbridge which is a one-way toward Quincy Center. For most people, that's not a shortcut. The only ones who will do that will be the neighbors themselves.

I want to see Shaw's come to this area. The good far outweighs any negative possibilities especially because they will be making Hancock wider to support shoppers traffic and keep the flow of traffic moving. They will also landscape the area and help the local trade. I urge the City Council to vote yes on this project.

Iwo Jima 50th Anniversary Service At State House Feb. 18

The Iwo Jima Day Committee invites and encourages all patriotic citizens to attend their annual Commemorative Services at the State House Hall of Flags Sunday, Feb. 19 at 11 a.m., on the 50th anniversary of the invasion of Iwo Jima to h honor and remember those brave 6,821 Americans who made the supreme sacrifice; the 19,031 wounded (a rate of 1,000 Marines a day for the first 24 consecutive days and nights) and those who survived this epic battle.

All are invited to attend the "Iwo Jima Cake Cutting Ceremony" in Doric Hall after the services.

Iwo Jima is very special in the Commonwealth because it is "The First and Only State" with a law mandating the Governor proclaim every Feb. 19th as "Iwo Jima Day" by virtue of the Committee's Permanent Chairman authoring and guiding its passage, and enacted as Chapter 19 of the Acts of 1972: The Committee has conducted more annual Services than all States combined, and has the distinction of having three sons receive the Congressional Medal of Honor in one battle, Iwo Jima, PFC William R. Caddy, USMC of Quincy; Plt. Sgt. Joseph R. Julian, USMC of Sturbridge and G/Sgt. William G. Walsh, USMC of Roxbury.

The Committee's guest of honor is a Somerville native, Gen. John J. Sheehan, USMC - Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic and Commander in Chief, U.S. Atlantic Command.

As every year, the Committee pays tribute to the Gold Star Mothers and Wives of the Commonwealth.

City Hall Offices Reshuffled

Feb. 16-22 1966 29 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Offices on the second floor of City Hall were reshuffled, with Mayor McIntyre's office changing location with the Personnel Department.

Locating the mayor's office in the front left corner office would give the chief executive more privacy and reduce and "grand central station" layout that allowed people to wander into the mayor's office unannounced, and without an appointment.

Under the new layout, entrance to the mayor's office would be through the office of Edward Lewis, the executive secretary and his assistant, Dagmar Peurala or through Personal Secretary Louise Brabazon's office.

Personnel Director Kenneth Gardner would take over the former mayor's office area with the switchboard being relocated to the third floor. John Brown, executive secretary of the city's new development commission, would occupy the office of the switchboard.

BRETT BILL WOULD CURB MBTA

Rep. Joseph Brett's bill to curb the land taking powers of the MBTA was heard at the State House this week.

Brett said his proposals would not delay the South Shore rapid transit expansion, but would give local communities power over non-transportation land takings by the MBTA. Specifically, such takings for storage yards, repair yards, power plants, shopping arcades and parking lots would require a two-thirds vote of the city or town where the property was located.

Noting the number of businesses and residences scheduled for taking at Quincy, Wollaston and Norfolk Downs stations, Brett said, "The local community should have a say before tax paying property is taken for non tax paying purposes."

RED RAIDERS UNDEFEATED WITH 15-0 RECORD

Bob Nolan, coach of North Quincy's undefeated basketball team credited his first and second team players for a 15-0 win streak.

All five starters were scoring in double figures; David Zink led with a 19-point average, followed by Gus Brazio with 14, Pete Varney with 13, Scott Healey with 10 and Rick Stasiak with 10.

"One of the reasons this team is so good, is the second team never lets the first team let up, not even in practice," Nolan said.

Second team members were Paul Bregoli, John Magnarelli, Rick Wanless, Rick Trubiano and Al Mesher.

Nancy's Chicken-Crab Supreme

When my daughter Nancy called me so excited about a new dinner she had concocted, and was going to cook for Valentine's Day, I couldn't wait to try it myself. This recipe serves four people.

NANCY'S CHICKEN-CRAB SUPREME

1 whole boneless chicken breast (cut up in cubes)
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 garlic cloves small onion
1/2 teaspoon dill weed small amount of lemon peel
salt and pepper
a six ounce can of whole potatoes (cut in half) a 4 ounce can of crabmeat
1/4 cup white wine (cooking wine or regular) large peta bread (pocket)

In hot oil, saute the garlic, onion, chicken. Add the dill and a small amount of lemon peel, the salt and pepper. Cook until chicken is done. Add the crabmeat, the wine, cover and cook until heated through.

Toast the peta pocket in the oven and then pour mixture in the center. Pieces from the edge of the bread can be broken off and dipped into the mixture.

Spotlight On Business

Customer Satisfaction, Low-Pressure Atmosphere

Granite Auto Sales Marks 5th Anniversary

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

Customer satisfaction and a low-pressure sales atmosphere is what co-owners Frank and Connie Devine and their staff at Granite Auto Sales, 166 Washington St., have strived for during their five years of business.

"The real satisfaction of this business is giving the customer a sound car for a good price and in the process, being able to make them happy," Frank Devine, 55, said during a recent interview with The Quincy Sun from his car dealership to commemorate his fifth anniversary.

Although he has been at Granite Auto Sales for a short time, Devine, a retired school teacher and resident of Scituate, has worked in auto sales for 20 years. He said he feels the business is his most successful and rewarding.

"It makes me feel good to be able to help a customer find a car they like and see them drive out of our lot with it," he said.

Fairness in his prices as well as fairness in his cars is an important aspect of Devine's work.

"We put a good, fair price on our cars and I stand by my cars," he said.

Devine is not alone in his commitment to customer satisfaction and low-pressure sales.

"We care about our customers and I cannot stress that enough," said Kevin O'Keefe, general manager of the dealership.

As proof of their commitment to customer satisfaction, about 50 percent of the dealerships business is repeat business, according to O'Keefe.

"Around half of our business comes from repeat business or from friends of our repeat customers," he explained.

While many other car dealerships stress sales pitches and high pressure tactics to sell their cars, O'Keefe believes the more laid back and relaxed the atmosphere, the more likely a customer will buy.

"Customers don't want to be attacked when they enter a car dealership and I don't attack them. I try to create a relaxed, low-pressure atmosphere where the customer and I both feel comfortable," he said. "I don't even want to go on the test drive with the customer, because that is when the customer wants to be able to drive the car his or her way and not have to listen to sales pitches."

A lifelong resident of Pembroke, O'Keefe is no stranger to the automobile selling business.

"My dad owned a gas station and I worked there with him," he said. "I've been in the car business in one form or another since I was 12."

After graduating from Silver Lake High School and working at his father's gas station business, O'Keefe worked at other larger, less personalized car dealerships but didn't receive the same pleasure he does from working at Granite Auto Sales.

"The bigger dealerships were more concerned with sales and less concerned with customer satisfaction. That's not the case here," he said.

While they prefer to sell customers their own cars, O'Keefe said he would help customers get automobiles from other dealerships that he is familiar with.

"It doesn't even matter to me if you buy a car from us or not. What I do care about is the customer getting a good buy and if that means going to another dealership to get it then I'll do that," he said.

O'Keefe explained the customer who buys a car at another dealership could still come back to Granite Auto Sales for detailing or repair.

Jim Dempsey, detailing specialist, and Rich Murphy, head mechanic who has been with the company for four years, are the backbone of the detailing and maintenance work at the dealership.

A graduate of Quincy Vocational Technical School, Dempsey's work, which takes from five to six hours per car, is a rigorous process which includes checking the automobile for any inconsistencies as well as giving it an in depth cleaning.

Whether it is through fair, evenhanded sales or detailing and repairing an older car, the workers at Granite Auto Sales all have the same goal which unites them: pleasing the customer.

"We all are like a family around here, including the customers," O'Keefe said.

Granite Auto Sales, 472-5501, is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

What Your Child Should Know If Left 'Home Alone'

- How to call 9-11 or my area's emergency number.
- How to give directions to my home in case of emergency.
- How to reach a neighbor or parent to tell them I am home.
- How to use the door, window locks, and the alarm system.
- How to answer the door or phone when I am home alone. Tell the person at the door or on the phone that mom or cad can't come to the door or answer the phone right now.
- What's a safe place to keep a house key? Keep it inside a shirt pocket or sock, not under a mat or on a ledge.
- How to escape from the house in case of fire.
- Not to go into an empty house if things don't look right - for instance, if the door is open, a window is broken, or a screen is ripped.
- Never to accept gifts or rides from people I don't know.
- To let someone know if something makes me feel unsafe.

Parents should go over this list to make sure their children understand the answers.

Podiatrists Recommend Flexible Shoes That Fit

Shoes are the most expensive piece of apparel that parents will buy for their children because, before a child reaches age 10, their foot size will change more than 30 times. This fact isn't meant to discourage parents, so much as it is to encourage careful and educated shoe buying.

The American Pediatric Medical Association (APMA), which is based in Bethesda, Maryland, also believes that young children do not need shoes until they begin to walk in areas that could potentially affect their feet, such as rough or dirty surfaces. When shoes are worn,they should be flexible and fit properly to ensure normal development of the foot.

Dean Wakefield, director or public affairs for the APMA, says that children's feet attain almost half of their adult size in the first year. Thus, it is extremely important for parents to measure a child's foot every four to six weeks to make sure shoes still fit. Shoes that are too small, for example, are harmful because they restrict growth and development.

The APMA recommends shoes that are wide enough at the ball of the foot and the toe box. The length of the shoe should be a thumb's width longer than the child's longest toe.

Saving used children's shoes for younger siblings and friends may seem practical and cost-effective, but this is not healthy for a child's feet. Shoes conform to the shape of an individual's foot, which means that size and it cannot be guaranteed in a hand-me-down pair of shoes. In addition, fungal and viral organisms can be transferred.

The best way to avoid these problems, Wakefield says, is to discard children's shoes when they've been outgrown, even if they shoes remain in good condition.

COME IN SO WE MAY FIT YOUR CHILD.
Accurate measurements of all areas of the foot will be taken.
Fit is more than just how shoes feel or look. Fit is a whole system of checks and balances which make sure your child's shoes contribute maximum balance. Trust Hanlon's. Because even though your child's feet go back a year or two, Hanlon's perfect fit goes back over fifty years.

Medical Rehab Facilitates Independence After Trauma Or Disease

(NAPS)—Many people who would have died just a few years ago, now live, thanks to medical advances in treating trauma and disabling disease:

• Medical rehabilitation emerged in the years just before World War II. Continued improvements in trauma care saved the lives of veterans and countless civilians injured in accidents.

• At the same time, medicine's success against common life-threatening diseases resulted in a burgeoning population of individuals living with one or more disabilities.

• Medical rehabilitation provides effective tools to combat disability and is administered in a variety of settings. Rehab involves physicians, nurses, physical therapists, psychologists, social workers, counselors and others.

• Disability is now the nation's number one public health care problem, so it is not surprising that the field of medical rehabilitation has grown so quickly.

Making The Most Of Your Workout

(NAPS)—Time management is the buzz phrase of the '90s. With work, family and social commitments, it's not always easy to find time for ourselves. Yet that's what working out is: time for us. There are ways to squeeze time from our busy days to stay fit.

Find the time

Set realistic goals. Few of us have an hour or two free each day for working out. Yet to maintain a healthy lifestyle, you should have a long-term goal of spending 30 minutes to an hour three to five days per week.

Start by committing your goals to paper with even just ten minutes a day to start. Create a weekly schedule that includes a workout regime. Put it someplace where you'll see it everyday.

Find an activity or activities that you like. It's much easier to exercise regularly if you enjoy what you're doing. If tennis was your game, check with your health club for partners. If you loved skipping rope as a child, set aside half an hour to skip rope. It's a great way to burn calories and tone your whole body. Go for a daily walk with a friend. You can do it anytime, anywhere, and you don't need special equipment, except a good pair of walking shoes.

Convenience

We're constantly looking for convenience in our lives, from fast-food to 24-hour dry-cleaning. Just as important as finding time to exercise is finding a place and activities that fit your personal needs. The best location—whether it's a health club, on a running trail or in your own living room, it should be relaxing and suited to your fitness level. Look for a club that offers a variety of activities (like aerobics, boxing or Tai Chi classes) and equipment.

Beating the boredom while achieving results

While some redundancy in your workout routine is important, working out doesn't need to be boring. Develop a fun circuit conditioning routine that offers variety while burning fat and toning your body. A complete body workout, circuit conditioning involves an array of regular health club activities, including aerobics, stair climbing, stationary bicycling, treadmills and weight training. Recent research finds that women who combine weights and strength training with cardiovascular workouts burn more fat than women who participate solely in aerobic activities.

Comfort

Working out should be just that—work. But not uncomfortable. Pain or discomfort can be a sign that something is wrong. Usually, that "something" is the wrong equipment. Finding the right equipment, like shoes, is the first step to a safe, pain-free workout. AVIA recognizes that everyone has different exercise interests and needs. From its new 5300 Circuit Conditioner shoe to its top-rated walking shoe, AVIA designs its footwear and apparel to be comfortable, supportive and specific to the type of exercise you do.

Don't forget to reward yourself

While working out is a rewarding experience in itself, occasionally we all need extra incentives to stay on track. Make a point of rewarding yourself regularly when you stick to your workout schedule. Buy yourself a new audio tape for walking or running; shop for a new workout outfit that makes you feel good about your new body; plan a workout vacation to the beach or a spa.

Make fitness a priority in your life. As your self-esteem and energy levels rise, it will become as much a part of your life as sleeping and eating.

CALCIUM: IT'S NOT JUST FOR BONES

By now, most people are aware that calcium is critical not only for growing bones, but for staving off the debilitating effects of osteoporosis (particularly in women) as well. However, research is turning up even more important roles for calcium. The Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center has found that calcium may have a part in preventing the onset of breast cancer. Evidence is even indicating that calcium may help in the fight against the country's number one killer - heart disease - by combating hypertension and keeping cholesterol levels down. Other research is pointing to calcium as a weapon against colon cancer. These benefits have been noted from adequate normal calcium intake, not from large dietary supplements.

P.S. Women should get at least 1,000 milligrams of calcium daily. After menopause, intake should climb to 1,500 milligrams.

Before you take supplements of any kind, be sure to consult your physician. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy or call myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. FR. WILLIAM MCCARTHY celebrates Liturgy of Thanksgiving with 15 priests and two deacons Sunday at St. John's Church.

Fr. William McCarthy Honored For 18 Years As St. John's Pastor

A Special Tribute To 'Father Bill:' 'H

By HENRY BOSWORTH

"Father Bill" said, humbly, he was not deserving of all the attention.

But those who were there Sunday at St. John's--the 15 priests, the two deacons, family members, friends and several hundred parishioners--would never agree to that.

They came to the honor Fr. William McCarthy at a Liturgy of Thanksgiving not only for his 18 years as pastor but for his work in the community with the homeless and needy.

Fr. McCarthy, who is 68 and has been battling illness, retired as pastor earlier this month but will remain at St. John's as senior priest in residence. He was succeeded by Fr. Peter Quinn who served under him as parochial vicar and then as administrator.

A strong bond of mutual admiration and friendship has been forged between the two.

"I am not deserving," Fr. McCarthy said to those who attended the special Mass.

He had thanks for Regional Bishop Daniel Hart, Fr. Cornelius Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy and Vicar of the Quincy Vicariate; Fr. Quinn, and other priests and deacons who have served with him and "the good people" of St. John's for helping him during his tenure at pastor and especially this past year.

He thanked Fr. Quinn "for being supportive and kind to me" and told the parishioners present: "You are very fortunate to have him as your pastor."

Alluding to his illness, he said: "During the past year I haven't been the life of the party."

For years those in need have found their way to St. John's rectory door and to Fr. McCarthy who would ask them: "What do you need?" They would tell him. And he would get it or do it.

In 1988 the Quincy-South Shore Interfaith Sheltering Coalition named its shelter for the homeless "Father Bill's Place" in his honor.

But the doorbell at the rectory continued to ring with the fingers pressed on the bell belonging to those trying to get into Father Bill's Place when it was completely filled.

"Never have a place named after you while you are still alive," he mused Sunday.

He also had a "confession" or two to make:

Like the time the housekeeper reported the blankets at the rectory were missing. He had given them away.

And the time when one of the beds in the rectory disappeared. It had gone to a home in Germantown.

Fr. Quinn gave a moving tribute to Fr. McCarthy at the conclusion of the Mass. He said in part:

"Our gathering together is a celebration of gratefulness and praise to God for the gift of Fr. Bill in our lives and the lives of so many others.

"We thank you, Lord, for the way Fr. Bill is, and was, the warm, caring, compassionate presence of God that eased the anguish and suffering of countless people who were in physical, financial, spiritual or emotional need.

"He has touched many, many people.

"We thank the Lord for the times we felt all alone with no one caring and found we were not alone, because of Fr. Bill.

"As one person stated to me, 'Fr. Bill taught me compassion. Before I met Fr. Bill I never was aware that there were poor people in our community. He taught me how to be compassionate to them.'

"Thank you, Fr. Bill, for being with us, sharing your heart with us and for staying with us."

Then, turning to Fr. McCarthy, he said: "Bill, may you come to know more and more how you are the desired one of God."

He then walked over to Fr. McCarthy and the two warmly embraced.

Family members in attendance included Mary Perrone, a sister; William, John and Gregory Perrone, nephews; Lucy Perrone, niece; John and Christopher Perrone, grandnephews; and Danielle Perrone, grandniece.

In addition to Fr. Heery and Fr. Quinn, the other priests participating in the tribute included:

Fr. Richard Moran, parochial vicar; Fr. Theodore Fortier, Quincy Hospital chaplain and Fr. Gerard Petringa, both in residence at St. John's.

Fr. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church; Fr. William Walsh, pastor St. Peter's Church, Cambridge; Fr. Joseph Byrne, Our Lady Church, Waltham; Fr. David Delaney, Incarnation Church, Melrose and Fr. Francis Conroy, St. Bernard's Church, Waltham, all of whom served with Fr. McCarthy at St. John's.

Fr. Joseph Downey, former pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Quincy, now in residence and chaplain at Jeanne Jugan, Somerville; Fr. Thomas Oates, St. William's Church, Dorchester; Fr. Joseph O'Brien, Sacred Heart Church, West Lynn and assistant to the editor of The Pilot; Fr. William Francis, Holy Name Church, Dorchester; Fr. Robert Deehan, St. Clement's Church,

THE FRIENDSHIP that has been forged between Fr. Peter Quinn, new pastor, and Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor, is much in evidence here following the Mass celebrating the latter's 18 years as pastor at St. John's Church Sunday.

How to select a hearing aid.

If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.

- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.

"We know a great deal about hearing aids."

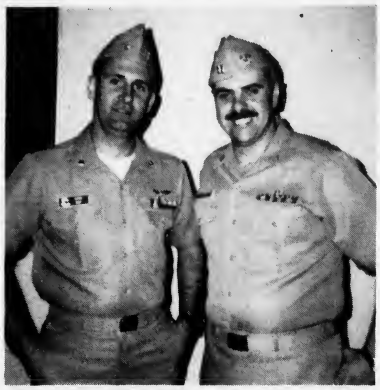
Rev. John Swanson Reunited With Childhood Friend From W.Q.

Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church in Wollaston, was recently reunited with an old friend from West Quincy.

Rev. Swanson and David Ray, a San Diego photographer, grew up together and attended the same schools. As adults, the two went their separate ways, Rev. Swanson to the seminary and Ray to Annapolis and later, his California photography business.

The two were reunited at the recent Naval Professional Training and Development Course in San Diego. Rev. Swanson is a chaplain in the Naval Reserve.



REV. JOHN SWANSON (right), pastor of Union Congregational Church in Wollaston, was reunited with old friend David Ray, a photographer from San Diego, at a recent Naval training course. Although the two grew up together in West Quincy, they had not seen one another in years.

The four-day academic course focused on the issues of morality and ethics and how they affect both the Navy and society as a whole. Rev. Swanson said that although the course was an intensive one, he managed to find the time to spend an evening with Ray and his wife, Mary Joe.

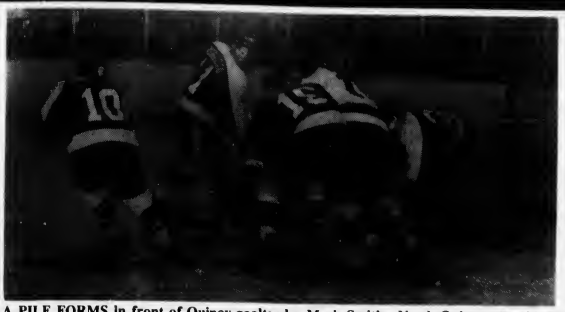
SUN SPORTS



A PILE FORMS in front of Quincy goaltender Mark Smith. North Quincy was able to unload 30 shots against Smith in their 5-4 win.

QUINCY HIGH'S CHRIS McArdle skids across the ice on the way to scoring his impressive second-period goal. The senior, who has netted three hat tricks this season, split two defenders and slid on his stomach from near the top of the circles. Quincy's Matt McSweeney and NQ's Paul King watch.

'Typical' Quincy-North Quincy Game

Red Raiders Edge Presidents, 5-4

By KERRY BYRNE

Put together a big crowd, add a dose of last-minute drama and some spectacular individual performances and you have a typical Quincy-North Quincy sporting event.

But, North Quincy's 5-4 hockey win Saturday night was much more than that. It was a healing, a catharsis, the continuation of a cycle that seemed in jeopardy when Quincy High's Matt Messing died following an on-ice collision when the two teams met in January.

"I'd say it turned out to be a good game for all those involved," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "To be honest, I'm proud of the way [North Quincy coach] Tom Benson handled this game. It was in the spirit of the game. North Quincy-Quincy means so much to the kids and Tom saw to it that it was a good game...for all those involved."

Although the shadow of Messing lingered over both teams, Benson felt it was something his team had put behind them. "The kids have dealt with it. They're over it. They were really pumped up before this one. It's their last game against Quincy and they were looking forward to playing."

Benson's Red Raiders (10-5-1) had an added incentive. The win put them in the Division 1 tournament for the third consecutive year. In each of the last two seasons North has advanced to the semifinal round before bowing out.

For the Presidents (2-12-2), a team loaded with freshmen and sophomores, it was a chance to put a silver lining around what has been a dark cloud of a season both on and off the ice.

It looked like the highly-favored North squad would run away with it after they took a 3-1 lead in the first period on goals by Eric Wood, A.J. Carthas and Brendan O'Brien. Sophomore Mark Glynn netted the lone Quincy goal on a power play.

The first period was scene to one very scary moment when NQ's Josh Wingate was hammered by Quincy defenseman Steve Verlicco as he tried to cross center ice with the puck. Wingate's head snapped back and he crumpled to the ice as his helmet fell off. A collective scare went through the crowd as EMTs came out the help the senior. The loud applause which rose from the crowd as he skated to the bench under his own power was accompanied by a sigh of relief.

"I was seeing stars for a while," said Wingate, who came back without missing a shift. Verlicco pointed to his dented face mask as proof of the intensity of the hit.

"I was shaking afterwards," said the freshman blueliner.

Quincy co-captain Chris McArdle scored one of the season's most impressive goals in second period to bring his team to within one. McArdle raced into the North zone and forced his way between two defenders who tried to hold the fort at the blue line. He fell but managed to stick-handle the puck as he slid on his stomach towards the North Quincy net. He slipped the puck past netminder Mike Manganaro for a goal reminiscent of Mike Eruzione's in the 1980 Olympics.

Red Raider Dan Stone put his team back up by two with 29 seconds left in the middle round, setting up the third-period fireworks.

Glynn scored his second power-play goal 59 second into the final period and Quincy freshman Chris Haidul netted the equalizer at the 4:11 mark following a mad scramble in front of Manganaro.

Twenty-two seconds later, NQ's Rob Callow scored the game-winner after President goaltender Mark Smith had made a beautiful poke check to thwart a Billy Barron scoring bid. Smith played a superb game for Quincy, stopping 25 shots. On several occasions he sprawled to stifle breakaway efforts, including twice when he came out almost to the blue line.

The Raiders showed their offensive depth with five different goal scorers. Assists were made by Wingate (two), Paul King, Rich Perona and O'Brien. On defense, Stone, King Matt Jarnis and Ralph DiMattia helped limit the Quincy scoring chances. Manganaro answered the call several times in the last minute after Quincy pulled Smith an applied heavy pressure with the extra skater on the ice.

Quincy senior co-captain Steve Barrett assisted on two goals. Scott Shepherd made one assist. Sophomore defenseman Matt Langille made a number of great plays, including a sprawling sweep check that foiled a North Quincy breakaway.

Afterwards, Sylvia spoke of the game's meaning: "The most important thing is that the rivalry goes on," he said. "There were professionals behind the North Quincy bench, that's what made this a good game. He's [Benson] a good coach and we wish him well in the tournament."

Quincy Wrestlers Capture South Sectional Title

Eleven different Presidents qualified for the states as the Quincy High School wrestling team captured the South Sectional title Saturday for the first time in 12 years.

"This was the ultimate team effort," said Venturelli. "Every wrestler on our team contributed to the victory."

The Presidents last won the South Sectionals in 1983, under legendary coach Carmen Mariano. It was the last of five consecutive South Sectional titles by the Men At Work wrestlers, a streak which solidified the Quincy High wrestling program's standing as one of the best in the state.

Venturelli bursted with pride when speaking of his team's accomplishment. "This is the ultimate for me to win the sectional championship. Actually the ultimate would be to win the states. But it was the kids who really did the job for us. I thought we had ability to do this and all our wrestlers, everyone of them, came through."

Venturelli said the 11 state qualifiers are "probably the most we've ever had." The top four finishers in each weight class qualify for the Division 1 state championships, to be held Friday and Saturday at Westfield High School in western Mass.

Matt Miller, a 130-pounder, was Quincy's lone Sectional champion.

Placing second were John Richards (103 pounds), John Cheverie (140), Bryan Gallahue (145) and Gregg Santoro (160).

Third-place finishers included Rich Testa (119) and Mike Feeley (HVY).

In fourth place were Mark Froehlich (135), Brian Woodberry (152) and Matt Strauchon (189). Strauchon may not be able to wrestle in the states because of bad knees. "Matt showed me a lot in the Sectionals," said Venturelli. "He's hurting. The same thing happened to him last year. He qualified but couldn't go on because of his knees."

Rich Bergeron (171) will be an alternate for the states by virtue of placing fifth Saturday.

"I said at the beginning of the year that the sectionals were something we were shooting for and could reach if we'd only stay healthy," said Venturelli.

Venturelli was disappointed that his team placed third on the Old Colony League, behind Weymouth and Bridgewater-Raynham, but felt Saturday's performance more than made up for that. The Presidents finished the regular season with a dual meet record of 13-2 overall, and 3-2 in the OCL. B-R and Weymouth placed third and fourth, respectively, in the South Sectionals.

Durfee, the Fall River power, finished second.

Venturelli said that he feels several of his wrestlers, including Miller, Gallahue and Feeley, have the potential to win Division 1 championships this weekend. The top four in each weight class will advance to the all-states, which includes wrestlers from all Divisions.

REASON TO BREATHE EASIER

As of the first of this year, everyone can begin to breath a little easier - especially those who live in areas of the country that have failed to meet certain air-quality standards set by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). As of January 1, 1995, those areas are to be supplied with "reformulated gasoline" (RFG). This cleaner gasoline has been designed to reduce smog-forming and toxic emissions by 15% up through 1999. After that, it will be replaced by a newer formulation that will reduce harmful emissions by 20 to 25%. Starting March 1, 1996, California will get its own supply of this latter, slightly cleaner formulation, four years ahead of the rest of the country.

HINT: Up to one-third of the gas sold in the U.S. is planned to be reformulated gasoline.

North Pulls Out Win Over Weymouth

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

Another huge crowd gathered Friday night at North Quincy's gymnasium to watch a key Old Colony League boys' basketball match-up in which the hometown Raiders pulled out a nail-biting 60-58 victory over Weymouth.

With the win North (11-6 overall, 10-4 OCL) takes sole possession of second place in the the league. They will now play for the opportunity to host a first round game in the MIAA tournament which begins in two weeks.

The Raiders were scheduled to play Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday (Feb. 14). They host cross-town rival Quincy Friday. They complete the regular season with a trip to Milton next Tuesday (Feb. 21).

North trailed, 29-27, at halftime and the two teams put on an exhibition of quality basketball in the second half that would give the crowd a reason to say they would not forget this game for a long time. There were no less than 11 ties and lead changes that kept people on the edge of their seats throughout. No team took a lead of more than two points until the last minute of the game. Nobody knew who would come out on top.

"This is a very big win for us," said breathless North Quincy coach Ted Stevenson after the game. "We lost two real close games in a row to two good teams (Boston English and Taunton) and this is a third good team, so to come out on top is a real joyous feeling for the kids. This is something we needed to get the kids in a good frame of mind to play for a good tournament seed."

Even though there were several ties in the second half, North, after tying the game at 35-35 with 12 minutes left, would not give the lead back to Weymouth for the remainder of the contest.

North's second-half charge was led by Jerry Fernandez and Jevon Glenn. Fernandez (11 points) was on top of many key steals and rebounds.

"Fernandez gets more out of his ability than anyone I've ever coached," said Stevenson. "He works his tail off and I'll take a hundred players like him on my team anytime."

Glenn, who ended the game with 12 points, helped keep Weymouth off the board with two massive blocked shots and four rebounds on the defensive end. Glenn scored six straight points which gave his team a 57-53 advantage - the first four-point lead by either team in the second half - with under a minute to play.

Weymouth sunk two free throws to again pull within two, 57-55, but Glenn's final points gave the Red Raiders another four-point cushion, 59-55.

Free throws brought the Wildcats to within one, before NQ's Matt Beston sunk one from the charity stripe with five seconds left on the clock.

Weymouth had one last shot and took their final time out after clearing the half-court line. The desperation play was unsuccessful as the clock ran out and North let out their breaths and begin to savor the victory that either team deserved.

Also scoring for North Quincy were Beston (12 points), Brad Gray (11), Mac Ngutter (five), Dave Scott (three) and Tom Coughlin and Eric Zimmerman with two each.

Eight North Girls In Class B Track Meet

Eight North Quincy girls will take part in the Mass. Class B track & field championships Saturday at Harvard University.

Head coach Geoff Hennessy feels his youthful squad could finish as high as fifth, behind such powerhouses as Wakefield, Woburn and Dartmouth.

The Red Raiders are led by what is perhaps the best shotput trio in the state. Jen Pineo is an Old Colony League all-star and the league champion with a best throw of 35 feet, one inch. The junior, who is coached by Maureen Roche in the put, "has a legit shot at winning the division" Saturday, said head Hennessy. She is in top form after finishing a disappointing ninth at the State Coaches Meet.

Freshman Kristy Deptula and sophomore Wingsze Yuen round out NQ's shotput contingent.

Representing North in the 55-meter hurdles are juniors Phyllis Poon and Suk Ng. Poon has lost just two meets all season long; once to Falmouth's Stacy Williams, who is ranked the No. 1 hurdler in the state; and once to Scituate's Stephanie Souke.

Poon is an OCL all-star and this is her second appearance in the Indoor States. She reached the semifinals at the State Coaches Invitational last fall and owns a share of the school record in the 50-yard hurdles.

Ng qualified for the State Meet in the OCL championships. This is her first appearance. She has run in the Outdoor States in the 4x100 relay.

Sophomore Casey Ngo will run in the 55-meter dash. She placed fourth at the Auerbach freshmen-sophomore meet in January and sixth at the OCL championships. Her only loss this year was to Quincy High's Kasey McNaught. The versatile Ngo runs lead-off in the sprint relays and long jumps outdoors.

Freshman Jasmine Gonzalez, the youngest Red Raider to qualify, will race in the 600-yard run. She is best known for chiming in at 1:37.2 at the Commonwealth Armory this month in a boys' race. Gonzalez placed seventh at the OCLs.

Junior Kelly Duggan, who has shown major improvements after overcoming a bout with asthma, will represent North Quincy in the two mile. She is an OCL all-star and boasts a best time of 12:33.1. She has run in the State Cross-Country Meet as a freshman and sophomore.

With each of his State Meet representatives returning, Hennessy feels he has the nucleus to make an big impact on several levels next year.

Devils Drop Heartbreaker

The St. Moritz Devils squirt major hockey team dropped a 4-3 heartbreaker to arch-rival North Shore Raiders.

The Devils and Raiders tied in their first encounter. St. Moritz won the second meeting, 2-1, in December.

St. Moritz drew first blood with a top-corner blast in the first period by James McDonald of Everett. He was set up by a perfect pass from Milton's Kevin Lynch.

The Raider tied the score two minutes later, then took a 3-1 lead with two quick goals in the second period.

Steve Cavanaugh of Milton closed the margin with a slap shot from the blue line that was assisted by Quincy's Tom Hughes and Kevin Patten.

One more Raider tally left the score at 4-2 at the end of two.

Miah Hasson of Quincy saw to it that the game would go down to the wire with a score from in front of the net, a la Cam Neely. He was set up by McDonald.

Junior Red Raiders Upset MBA Lakers

The North Quincy Jr. Red Raiders shocked the previously-undefeated MBA Lakers, 38-36, in a come-from-behind effort at Hunt Palace.

The Jr. Raiders trailed throughout the game, but suffocating second-half defense and clutch free-throw shooting by Dan Duggan and Sean Paylor helped turn the tide.

Duggan's free throws tied the game late in the fourth quarter, then Joe Sudak came up with the defensive play of the game, stealing a pass at half court and feeding Paylor, who was fouled with seven seconds left. Paylor then stepped to the line and cooly swished both free throws to provide the winning margin.

Paylor led all scorers with 20 points. Sudak added six.

Phil McGillicuddy played an outstanding defensive game, shutting down the Lakers' top scorer. He also added six points.

Sudak, Peter Turowski and Eric Stanton did a great job on the boards against their taller opponents. Also playing well were Pat Bregoli, who had a solid floor game, and Mike Haines, who shot well and played aggressive defense.

Pee Wee B's Handle Tri-County, 9-2

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

"I was summoned by my country, whose voice I can never hear but with veneration and love." These words were spoken on April 30, 1789, by a tall, tired man. After losing many battles, but winning a war, he has hoped to retire from public life to his beautiful and beloved home on the banks of the Potomac.

His countrymen, though, needed George Washington in peace even more than in war. They called upon him to lead their infant republic forward.

How Washington responded to the summons is described in his Inaugural Address. In an eloquent passage, the first President of the United States gave his countrymen of that day and of our own day a responsibility which should always guide Americans: "The preservation of the sacred fire of liberty and the destiny of the republican model of government are justly considered as deeply and finally staked on the experiment entrusted to the hands of the American people."

We Americans have preserved this heritage; its future rests in our hands today, as surely as when the Father of His Country gave his trust to those who heard him on April 30, 1789. We, lie Washington, are summoned by our country to preserve "the sacred fire of liberty."

Three Way Program Aimed At Cutting Pedestrian Accidents

the educational process.

Mullen said the Quincy Police Department will also soon be instituting the "Walk Alert" program, a program developed by the Department of Transportation National Highway Safety Administration, which will be made available to senior groups and implemented in elementary schools' safety programs. In addition, the department will present special "Drive Safe, Walk Safe" public service announcements through Continental Cablevision and other media sources.

Enforcement of traffic/pedestrian laws will also be discussed at today's meeting but has already begun, Sheets said. Traffic patrols were stepped up recently in response to the numerous accidents, and police handed out 800 more citations last month than they did in January 1994, according to the mayor.

Mullen said during the first 12 days of February, police issued an average of 50 motor vehicle citations each day for infractions such as speeding, failing to stop for a red light, and failing to stop before making a right turn on red.

"It is going to take a team effort to reduce these tragic accidents," said Mullen. "Drivers, pedestrians, the police, and the community at large working together in our 'Drive Safe, Walk Safe' program is a great start."

Mark Gronberg To Join Staff In March

Quincy Hospital Selects New Chief Financial Officer

Mark Gronberg, vice president/treasurer and chief financial officer of Brockton Hospital, has accepted the position of chief financial officer at Quincy Hospital.

Gronberg, 39, will replace Asher Kramer, who is joining former Quincy Hospital Director Ellen Zane to work for Partners Community HealthCare Inc., a new Boston health care network. Zane left the hospital for Boston last year.

Gronberg will be responsible for overseeing and managing the hospital's budget, all of its financial affairs and accounting procedures. He is expected to begin working in Quincy early next month.

In the interim, the chief financial officer duties are being handled by Bob Hersey, Boston group assistant vice president of Quorum Health Resources Inc., the hospital's management company which is located in Wellesley Hills.

According to Quincy Hospital Director of Public Relations Renee Buisson, Gronberg was selected for the position by the hospital's management team and Director/CEO Ralph DiPisa from an original field of 12 candidates. The field was then narrowed to six before two finalists were interviewed.

Buisson said at press time she could not say what the salary is for the position. She also declined to identify the other finalist.

During his 17 years at Brockton Hospital, Gronberg's responsibilities have included overseeing financial affairs, accounting procedures, financial planning and capital and operating budgets. He has been a participant in the development of many of the hospital's strategic ventures such as its Position Hospital Organization and recent alliance with the Lahey Clinic in Burlington.

Gronberg has also worked closely with DiPisa, former chief operating officer at Brockton Hospital.

Prior to being named chief financial officer in Brockton, he held various accounting positions at the hospital. He also has experience teaching health care finance and accounting at several area colleges.

Gronberg holds a bachelor of science degree, and is a candidate for a master of science degree, in business administration from Northeastern University. He lives in Bridgewater with his wife and three children.

GOV. WILLIAM WELD (second from right) was recently presented a Derry Crystal Bowl commemorating his visit to Derry, Northern Ireland and the Foyleside Partnership there represented by Peter O'Connell (second from left), partner of O'Connell Development Co. Inc. of Quincy. Also in photo from left are Arthur Casey, president of O'Connell Development; James Guy, Lord Mayor of Derry; and John Hume, Member of Parliament and Member of the European Parliament (M.P. and M.E.P.).

O'Connell Officials Commemorate Weld's Trip To Northern Ireland

Gov. William Weld recently received a Derry Crystal Bowl commemorating his visit to Derry, Northern Ireland and the Foyleside Centre there represented O'Connell Development Co. Inc. of Quincy.

Weld visited the centre during his recent trade mission to the United Kingdom and Ireland. Among those at the presentation were Arthur Casey, president and Peter O'Connell, partner of O'Connell Development.

The Foyleside Centre is a mixed-use project including retail, office, parking and open space parkland. The estimated cost to construct the project is $100 million, with the office building phase now open and completely occupied.

The remainder of the development, including the mall and parking, is still under construction and scheduled to open to the public in mid-1995. The mall itself is 100 percent pre-leased, with the leader retailer in the U.K., Marks & Spencer, and the leading retailer from the Republic of Ireland, Dunnes Stores, anchoring the facility.

O'Connell Development was introduced to Derry's opportunities by John Hume, M.P., M.E.P. and then-Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn in 1988 and began work on the Foyleside concept that same year. Construction of Orchard House, the office phase, commenced in the fall of 1992 and construction of the Foyleside Mall, parking facilities and amenities in the spring of 1993.

The Foyleside Centre will employ 1,200 people between retail, office and service jobs when opened and is the largest single real estate development in Derry's history. It is hoped the centre will re-establish Derry as the center of retail and commerce for all of Northwest Ireland, which includes County Donegal in the Irish Republic.

The Massachusetts-Derry connection dates back to 1789 when two Massachusetts engineers designed and built the first bridge across the River Foyle, first establishing Derry as Northwest Ireland's commercial hub.

For more information, call Arthur Casey at 847-6300.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
(Never Known to Fail)
Oh most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, Assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x) Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x) Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You who gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. E.A.S. 2/16

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, you who gives meaning to and shines light on my path so that I may reach my goals, you who gives me the divine grace to forgive and forget the evil done unto me and which is with me at every moment of my life. I want in this short dialogue to reassure you one more time that I do not ever want to be separated from you, no matter how grand the worldly possessions may be, my desire to be with you and my brothers in perpetual glory will not be lessened. (One should say this prayer 3 days in a row without mentioning the request, within 3 days the divine favor shall be granted, no matter how unobtainable it seemed) Publish this prayer as soon as your request is granted.

Barges To Be Used Instead

MWRA Won't Truck Sludge Through City

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has abandoned its plan to truck sludge from Nut Island through the city to a landfill site in New Hampshire.

MWRA officials, who met with Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Michael Cheney and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson two weeks ago, made the announcement Tuesday. The authority now plans to barge the sludge off the island rather than use trucks.

Officials have said it will be necessary to have 16 to 20 truck trips per day starting at 7 a.m. and ending six days per week to remove the sludge from Digester 1 at Nut Island. The MWRA announced plans to clean the digester after determining that the plant will not be decommissioned in 1995 as planned. Instead, it will be necessary to extend the life of the plant an additional two years as the result of construction delays at Deer Island.

Atty. Joseph "Jay" MacRitchie of Quincy, legal counsel for the city and a member of the MWRA Board of Directors, said the board unanimously opposed transporting the 145,000 cubic feet of sludge by truck.

"We put forth the argument that the material shouldn't go out by truck," he said. "The MWRA wanted to do it in convoys and so forth, but that wasn't acceptable either. So they eventually agreed with us."

The 11-member board must approve all MWRA contracts.

Sheets said he is happy about the MWRA's announcement.

"We're pleased," said Sheets. "The MWRA was very cooperative. We don't want those big trucks going through the neighborhood."

"This is a major victory for the people of Houghs Neck," agreed Kolson. "We stood our ground firm when it came to public safety."

"To place 18 to 20 trucks per day of that magnitude through residential streets in the City of Quincy, in particular Houghs Neck, would create a public safety problem," said Cheney, adding that six years ago, he pushed for construction of a pier at Nut Island in order for the MWRA to barge materials on and off the island rather than use trucks.

Cheney also noted that the MWRA currently has 16 truck trips per day at the island. The increase would bring it to 32 to 36 per day, an increase that raised public safety concerns.

The MWRA is planning to start construction sometime within the next 30 to 60 days.

Top Winner In Beechwood Drawing Competition

A Portrait Of The Mayor--By Michael Quilty, Age 10

Michael Quilty, 10, of the Atherton Hough School took first place in Beechwood Community Life Center's recent "Portrait of the Mayor" Art Contest.

Michael's portrayal of Mayor James Sheets was chosen from a group of 18 overall "winners" selected by the judges. Students in the city's public and parochial schools drew pictures of the mayor in recognition of his leadership and guidance in helping Beechwood relocate to its current site at 440 West Squantum St. last fall.

"Participants at Beechwood voted on the caricature that seemed most like our mayor," said Sharron Beals, Beechwood executive director.

Other students who submitted "winning" drawings and the schools they represent are: Joanne Collin, Lincoln-

Quincy 2000 Used As Model For New Statewide Group

Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, has been used as a model for a new statewide organization.

The Commission for the 21st Century was formed recently by Sen. Edward Kennedy and the New England Council, a regional lobbying group. Quincy 2000 President and CEO Charles D'Aprix, a member of the new commission's board of directors, said Quincy 2000 helped inspire its formation.

"Basically, Quincy 2000 is really the model for this partnership," said D'Aprix, who added that Kennedy also made note of that fact during a recent meeting of the board.

D'Aprix said the board includes a number of representatives from the planning and banking industries as well as officials from local communities.

Mullen: Investigation Proper In Missing Woman Case

Police Chief Francis Mullen said this week the Quincy Police Department has done nothing wrong by following a lead regarding the Unification Church during its investigation of a missing Quincy woman.

Church officials have demanded a public apology from the department for "erroneously" implicating the church in its investigation.

Police told The Quincy Sun and other media sources last week they were looking into the possibility that Donna Parry, 26, of Merrymount, might have joined the church, which is led by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon and has been criticized for its recruitment methods. She has been not seen or heard from since Jan. 20.

A spokesman for the church's national headquarters in New York City said the church has no record of Parry becoming a member.

Mullen, however, said his department has acted properly by investigating the church, which was done at the suggestion of the Parry family.

DONNA PARRY

"I don't think we did anything wrong," said Mullen. "They (the family) brought it up, and so naturally we had to make an inquiry. We're not throwing rocks at anyone."

Still, Mullen did not rule out the possibility of an eventual apology, saying he wants to ask City Solicitor Stephen McGrath for a legal opinion on the issue.

McGrath declined comment at press time, saying that he needs more time to research the matter.

Mayor James Sheets, however, agreed with Mullen.

"We're not trying to offend anyone (in the church)," said Sheets, who also did not rule out a future apology. "But the disappearance of this young woman is very important to us here in Quincy. I expect the police to follow up every lead."

The request for an apology was contained in a letter faxed to Mullen and copied to Sheets last Thursday from Peter Ross, director of legal and public affairs for the Unification Church of America.

Earlier in the week, police said they had turned up no clues in their nationwide search for Parry and had no solid evidence to say she left her home to join the church.

The letter accuses police of making an "egregious presupposition" that the church would detain Parry, encourage or advise her to not contact her family for over a month. It also requests a "public and unequivocal" apology.

Police originally began considering the church during its investigation because Parry was studying for a master's degree in nutrition at the University of Bridgeport in Connecticut, which is now run by the Professors World Peace Academy, an arm of the church.

Formed by Moon in the early 1950s, the church has long been a target of criticism in this country. Critics say church followers befriend lonely or naive young people and eventually recruit them through long lectures and isolation. The church has been called a cult by some critics.

Church officials, however, deny any wrongdoing and say the issue is religious freedom.

Alternative Tenants Being Sought For Planned Decelle Site

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Quincy 2000, in the wake of a number of events that have delayed the arrival of Decelle in Quincy Center, has enacted its contingency plan to bring another retailer to the proposed site of the project.

Charles D'Aprix, president and chief executive officer of Quincy 2000, said while he is still hopeful the Braintree-based retailer will open a store at the Adams Arcade Building--the site of the former Child World and Cummings stores in the downtown--Quincy 2000 must seek other tenants now in case the deal does fall through.

"We are going to actively and aggressively market that site," he said, adding that the contingency plan has been in place since the beginning of Quincy 2000's talks with Decelle. "I don't want anyone to think that we are tied down to just Decelle."

D'Aprix noted that Quincy 2000 and Walcott Corp. of Boston, the landlord of the Adams Arcade site, hired Miller-Shapiro, a Lynnfield-based retail leasing firm, to market the Quincy Center site to interested firms at a recent "International Shopping Center" in New York City. He said Miller-Shapiro "came up with about 100 leads" that Quincy 2000 is currently pursuing.

D'Aprix said that if Decelle does not turn out to be the new tenant at Adams Arcade, Quincy 2000 will not rest until a retailer of equal significance is brought to the site.

"We're not going to settle for just any retailer," he said. "We expect to get a retailer that is good, or better, than Decelle."

D'Aprix added that planned renovations to the Adams Arcade Building will begin within a couple of weeks, regardless of what happens with Quincy 2000's negotiations with Decelle. The renovations will cost about $1 million and will be paid for by Quincy 2000, Walcott Corp. and Wal-Mart, which agreed to chip in for structural repairs at the site when it was granted a special permit by the City Council late last year to build a new store in Quincy Point.

Decelle, a division of New Jersey-based Burlington Coat Factory, signed a letter of intent with the city in September to open a new store at the Adams Arcade site. Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning organization, has been negotiating with Decelle since January of last year to bring the retailer to the 40,000-square-foot, three-story building.

City officials have voiced optimism that Decelle, which sells mainly women's and children's clothes, would help revitalize Quincy's struggling downtown shopping district. At the time the letter of intent was signed, Mayor James Sheets called the arrival of Decelle "a done deal," and officials said a formal lease signing was expected in October.

A lease, however, has yet to be signed, which has caused some officials--most notably City Council President Michael Cheney--to question whether the retailer will ever open a store in the city.

Cheney, in fact, recently went as far to say that he believes there is a less than 50 percent chance Decelle will come to Quincy, basing his statement on conversations he has had with unnamed retail industry insiders.

D'Aprix, however, has continued to downplay such talk, saying there are a number of factors that have held up the lease signing. At press time, he listed several reasons why the signing has been delayed:

•The aforementioned structural problems. Initially, it was unclear who would pay for the repairs to the nearly 100-year-old building.

•Weather. Burlington Coat Factory's stock has dropped "precipitously," D'Aprix said, because the unusually warm winter has hurt sales of the company's clothing, which is 35 percent outerwear.

Because of the drop in stock, the company decided to slow down its expansion and cancel the planned openings of stores in other local communi-

TOM KOCH (second from left) was sworn into his new position as executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department recently by City Clerk Joseph Shea. Koch previously served as executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets. Appeal Of Proposed Stop & Shop Dropped

An appeal of Stop & Shop's permit to build a new superstore at the Pneumatic Scale site on Newport Avenue has been dropped.

Hank Cheney, president of Work Inc., the vocational program for disabled adults on nearby Arlington Street that had filed the appeal, said his organization decided to drop the matter because the two sides have come to an agreement on all of Work Inc.'s safety concerns. A spokeswoman for Stop & Shop confirmed the agreement.

Stop & Shop plans to raze the Pneumatic Scale is planning to demolish the Pneumatic Scale building and build a 75,000-square-foot supermarket and an 18,000-square-foot retail building so it can relocate and expand its nearby Newport Avenue store.

Stop & Shop also plans to extend Arlington Street, a dead end, to Newport Avenue southbound, to handle supermarket traffic from Squantum Street. The City Council issued a special permit for the project in December.

Work Inc. officials originally had said they feared the changes would threaten their clients' safety. The organization appealed the issuance of the permit in Norfolk Superior Court last month.

The Stop & Shop spokeswoman would not reveal any specifics about the out-of-court agreement. Cheney, however, said Stop & Shop will eliminate several on-street parking spaces to make Arlington Street wide enough for safe traffic.

Work Inc.'s decision to drop the appeal eliminates one permitting hurdle for Stop & Shop, but there is still no construction timetable. Pneumatic Scale, which is owned by Barry-Wehmiller Co. of St. Louis, has up to two years to find a new home for its plant from the time Stop & Shop receives its permits.

The Zoning Board issued Stop & Shop a special permit to build in a flood plain last month, on the condition the company survey flooding in nearby homes and correct any flooding problems caused by the project.

In addition, the project is being reviewed by the Conservation Commission.

Quincy Legion Post Creates Messing Boys State Award

The Quincy Legion Post has created the 1995 Matt Messing Memorial Boys State Award in honor of the Quincy High hockey player who died Jan. 18 during a game against North Quincy High.

Messing's brother, Tim, played Legion baseball for the Quincy Post.

The Quincy High faculty will nominate a candidate for the Boys State program to be held June 17-23 at Bentley College in Waltham.

Boys State is a program sponsored by the American Legion in which 500 junior-class high school students from around the commonwealth spend a week studying law, civics and government.

The program is highlighted by the election of constitutional officers. The two young men chosen as senators attend Boys Nation in Washington, D.C. in July.

Locally, the Quincy Post sponsors eight candidates, Morrisette Post two, and Wollaston Post, Houghs Neck Post and the Robert I. Nickerson Post one each.

Boys are chosen from both Quincy and North Quincy High Schools.

The annual Norfolk County Boys State seminar will take place at Quincy Post Sunday, May 21 at 2 p.m. for all Boys State candidates.

A Wake-'Em-Up Election?

What started out looking like a ho-hum election year appears to be shaping up as a possible wake-'em-up one.

Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien's decision to roll the dice and run at-large guaranteed a contest for the seats held by the three incumbents.

CHRETIEN

And there may be at least a couple more challengers in the picture before election day: Mary Collins and Tom Galvin.

Both acknowledge they are thinking of running.

COLLINS

Collins, former School Committee member and Norfolk County Commissioner, says: "I'm considering it. Seriously considering it."

GALVIN

Galvin, a life-long Quincy resident and community activist, would be making his debut as a candidate although he is no stranger to political circles.

Vice president of Boston Gear, he is past president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and past president of Quincy 2000 and still active in both.

"I'm giving some serious thought to running," he says. "I really don't think the City Council is doing all it should be doing to bring new business to Quincy."

If the two should run, it would leave the field only one shy of enough candidates (7) for a preliminary election run-off.

And that needed seventh could still be Charles McIntyre, who made a strong run for an at-large seat two years ago in his political debut.

Although he is being mentioned as a potential candidate for the Ward 3 seat that Chretien is vacating, a source close to him says he will not run for that seat.

McIntyre, who is now an assistant district attorney in the office of Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt, has said he might run at-large.

"I haven't ruled it out," he says.

City Takes First Step Toward Hancock Lot Redevelopment

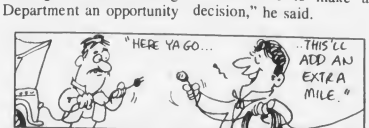
The city has taken its first step toward the redevelopment of the Hancock Parking Lot in Quincy Center.

Mayor James Sheets this week asked the City Council to declare the lot available for disposition. The council was to consider the matter at its meeting Tuesday night.

Sheets said at press time that declaring the lot available for disposition will give the Planning Department an opportunity to send out a request for proposals (R.F.P.) to allow developers to say what they would like to do with the lot.

The mayor has suggested developing the lot for commercial use such as a five to six-floor office building. However, Councillor-at-Large Joseph LaRaia has proposed using the lot for retail purposes, and Sheets said he is willing to consider that option as well.

"We have to make a decision," he said.



The first motor-driven taxicab in the United States appeared about 1898. It had an electric motor.

COUNCILLOR Ted DeCristofaro is back on the job after a two-day hospital stay last week for an inner ear infection that brought on a dizzy spell.

TED

"I'm okay now," DeCristofaro said Monday. "It was a little scary but an MRI and catscan showed it to be nothing more than an inner ear problem."

DeCristofaro miraculously recovered from a stroke and heart attack last March.

He's getting some walking in with his wife, Betty.

WELL, YOU CAN'T say Mayor James Sheets doesn't keep his eye on the road when he's driving.

On a recent cold morning, City Council President Michael Cheney's car ran out of gas on Furnace Brook Parkway. He got out and started walking toward Quincy Sq. to get help.

Sheets drove by without noticing him.

Tom Galvin came along right behind him and caught a glimpse of Cheney and stopped and picked him up.

RON MCCARTHY, who ran for the School Committee two years ago, is uncertain whether to make another bid this year.

McCARTHY

He and his wife, Diane, are expecting their second daughter in April which, he says, "will obviously add to my responsibilities as a father, husband and educator."

In a letter to city officials he also says he feels that under School Supt. Eugene Creedon and state and local leadership the Quincy public schools "are moving in the right direction."

He says he would run again only if he felt a drastic change in leadership would prevent the schools from moving in the right direction.

He hopes to meet with officials to talk things out.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920 QUINCY is a view of the tidal dam located at the mouth of Town Brook that once powered what is known today as the Souther Tide Mill. After the Civil War the Souther family used the old grist mill as the center of their brokerage business which sold among other things XXX, stock and porter ale by the Bbls. Halves and Quarters. The old mill was located at the corner of Mill Street and Souther Place which is now part of the Southern Artery. Later the mill was used to saw wood by the Johnson Lumber Company and then by the Quincy Lumber Company which was the last occupant of the site. The remnants of this dam are long gone with the recent Town Brook flood control project pretty much removing all traces of it.

The Shaw's Debate

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The debate about the Shaw's Marketplace project in Wollaston seems to revolve around several main issues. One has to do with traffic problems and whether or not the solution proposed by Shaw's traffic engineers (and endorsed by Quincy's traffic engineering department) will do the job.

I agree that driving Hancock St. on a daily basis as I do can leave a person skeptical about making things better. Actually, no one knows what will happen until the changes are made. If Shaw's is willing to put itself on the line and stand behind its solution, that's good enough for me.

The other major issue seems to be Frank Miller's Wollaston Market and what will happen to it when Shaw's comes to the neighborhood with a supermarket. Everyone likes Wollaston Market, but I understand that Mr. Miller does not own the building or the parking lot and that he has less than two years to go on his lease. Leases can be renewed, of course. But suppose he decides not to renew the lease or the landlord wants to dispose of the building and land, what then? I am sure Mr. Miller has thought about these things in relationship to Shaw's. The City Council should think about them, too.

Five years from now, will we still have an abandoned Boston Gear Factory on Hancock St. or will we have an attractive neighborhood supermarket that adds to the community?

Quincy High Hockey Boosters Give Thanks For Help During Difficult Time

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Quincy High School Hockey Booster Club would like to offer a sincere thank you to the many people who helped our hockey team through an especially difficult time.

We thank the Messing family for their extraordinary patience and understanding. Their incredible strength and assistance to everyone has been an example that Matt's teammates and their family members have benefited from during this tragedy.

The Quincy School Department, the Quincy High School administration, staff, counselors, and the Quincy Police Department also deserve special mention for the unselfish manner in which they assisted our families coping with our loss.

We also want to thank The Quincy Sun for handling our loss in such a delicate manner.

We want to thank everyone for their thoughtfulness and kindness. Thank you most especially for your sincere sympathy and compassion.

Matt's memory is very much alive. The rewards of having known Matt will continue to effect his teammates, as well as the entire Quincy community.

So often, people are not properly acknowledged for their efforts, we want to be sure that everyone who helped us through this tragic experience is aware of our heartfelt appreciation.

Hockey Booster Club

Thanks To Quincy Police Dept.

Editor, The Quincy Sun

I am writing to let you know how much we appreciate the great work the Quincy Police force provides. I am referring especially to Officers Richard Churchill, Stephen Kring and Jack Smith who were so helpful on the evening of our recent tragedy involving the death of young Matt Messing.

I can't say enough about Officer Churchill's handling of the emergency. He took complete control of the situation, calling for an ambulance, notifying the QPD to send a Lt. to meet the ambulance at QCH, instructing me to get a priest here immediately, and ordering backup. He remained calm and professional and acted as though he had handled this type of emergency 100 times before. Officer Kring stayed with the injured boy, and (off duty) officer Jack Smith assisted in communicating with, and calming down, the mother of Josh Wingate, who was at home convalescing from surgery.

When the reinforcements arrived, they casually mingled among the spectators, making sure not to create an atmosphere of panic. They all did a wonderful job in an extremely delicate situation.

Many, many thanks from everyone involved here at Quincy Youth Arena.

McIntyre Seeks Final No On Shawmut Trail

Feb. 23-March 1
1969

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor James McIntyre charged the state Department of Public Works with a "credibility gap" regarding its public statements on the proposed Shawmut Trail. He called upon DPW Commissioner Edward Ribbs to settle the status once and for all and asked for a recommitment on whether or not the plan was dead.

McIntyre opposed the plan that called for the construction of a highway connecting Route 3 with the South Shore via a right of way across Penn's Hill to link with a new bridge across the Fore River. (It would join with Route 3 near Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.)

While it was believed that the 30-year-old plan was "irrevocably buried" it resurfaced this week with the DEP's $1 billion highway construction plan.

The plan read in part, "Although the DPW puts a low priority on the trail between 1976 and 1990, the Shawmut Trail appears to be the most practical solution for facilitating vehicular traffic along the South Shore."

COUNCIL FAULTS PRIVATE PLOW OPERATORS

Controversy surrounding snow removal during the recent two-day Northeaster was the subject of debate at the City Council meeting.

Councillor Arthur Tobin charged that six private contractors who agreed to plow for the city failed to show up. Instead they plowed for Boston or the state and didn't notify the city. Tobin suggested that the no-shows be prohibited from performing future work for the city.

One private operator, Vincent LoCicero of Jud-Way Equipment, said he was told by a DPW foreman that he wasn't needed and the city would handle plowing without any private contractors.

LoCicero said the contractors are always blamed. He said a number of contractors were leaving Quincy because they can make more money elsewhere and don't have to take the baloney and guff they have to take from Quincy.

KASANOF'S DENIED OFFICE PLAN FOR MARSHES

A spokesperson for Kasanof's Bakery denied Mayor McIntyre's claim that a $50 million office complex was planned for a portion of the Montclair marshes. As owners of the property, they insisted that the only plans under construction were for a bakery.

McIntyre's remarks were part of a speech he gave showing how the $1 million lost in tax revenue by land taken by the MBTA for the rapid transit extension, would be off-set by new businesses.

Easy Manicotti Recipe

Here is an easy recipe for manicotti using just three ingredients and can be made the day before.

I made a batch of them over the weekend and had forgotten how easy and how deliciously light they are.

RICOTTA FILLED MANICOTTI

Manicotti
1 cup water
1 cup flour
2 eggs

Mix all three ingredients until smooth. Brush a small 4 inch or 6 inch frying pan, with a little oil Make sure it is hot.

Pour a small amount, about a quarter of cup and roll the pan around until the mxiture fits the whole bottom of the pan. It only takes a few seconds, They are very thin and don't have to be turned. Just slide them out with a spatula and place them on a strip of waxed paper.

This mixture makes about 10-12 depending on the size of the small frying pan.

RICOTTA MIXTURE
2 pound can of ricotta cheese
1/4 cup grated romano cheese
1 tablespoon fresh parsley (or dried)
1 egg
salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon seasoned bread crumbs

Mix all ingredients together until blended. Fill each manicotti in the center and then close up the sides. Layer bottom up on a greased baking panb with a smidgen of sauce on the bottom.

Place sauce on top of each and sprinkle grated cheese on top. Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 35 minutes or until bubbly. Serv e hot with extra sauce and grated cheese.

Anti-Smoking Program At Sterling Middle School

JOE CAMEL is ostracized during performance by Sterling Middle School Drama Club as part of recent anti-smoking program at the school. The character is a promotional symbol of the cigarette industry which has recently been accused of targeting teenagers and encouraging them to smoke.

ANTI-SMOKING ACTIVIST Patrick Reynolds, grandson of the founder of the R.J. Reynolds tobacco company, addresses Sterling Middle School students on the dangers of smoking. Reynolds' father and older brother both died of smoking-related lung diseases.

Overcrowding Topic For Sterling PTO

The Sterling Middle School PTO meeting will be held Tuesday, March 7 at 7 p.m. in the faculty lounge. Discussion will be on overcrowding: What are the options? Parents are encouraged to attend. There will be a door prize.

How to select a hearing aid.

If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.

- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.

"We know a great deal about hearing aids."

Spotlight On Business

For Jerry And Karen Noris

Family Tire And Auto A Dream Come True

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

After working in the automotive industry for 22 years, Jerry Noris and his wife Karen have finally seen their lifelong dream of owning their own business come true earlier this year with the opening of Family Tire and Auto, 234 Quincy Ave.

"It's something we've always wanted to do and its nice to see all the pieces finally falling into place," Karen Noris, co-owner and secretary of the auto shop, said during a recent interview with The Quincy Sun.

But don't be fooled by their name, because Family Tire and Auto does not just sell tires.

By offering a wide array of services from oil changes and tuneups to tire changes and alignments, Jerry Noris, 39, feels he and his staff at Family Tire and Auto can better suit his customers' needs than most automobile repair shops.

"Most auto shops are always specializing in brake jobs, oil changes and so forth. We specialize in customers. We're going to be a full-stop bumper to bumper auto shop," he said.

The only facets of automotive repair which the shop does not work in are paint jobs and auto detailing.

According to Noris, the three main principles involved in running a profitable business with a positive salesperson/customer relationship are promptness, accuracy and affordability.

"You have to do the work when you say you will do it, do it right the first time and do it for a reasonable price," he said.

Trust is another important component of the salesperson/customer relationship, according to the veteran mechanic.

"You won't be in business long if you don't have trust, that's for sure," he said.

Noris recounted an instance which expresses his commitment and desire to please his customers.

"A customer came in and said he needed a certain type of tire, Perelli's, which we didn't have due to the odd shape of his tire so I had to go around looking for them," said Noris. "Anyway, it took us two or three days, but eventually we found them."

It is this perseverance and dedication which Noris feels is necessary to fully satisfy the customer's needs.

"You have to please the customer or they won't come back. It's just that simple," he said.

Originally from Randolph, Noris now resides in Marshfield with his wife and four daughters.

A post-graduate of Blue Hills Regional School with a degree in automotive repair, Noris has been driving cars since his preteen and teenage years during the 1960's when he raced them at the New England Dragway.

"I used to drive on the dragway when you didn't need a license to race. It was a lot of fun," he said

Noris has worked previously as an automotive mechanic for such companies as Chevrolet, Pontiac and Chrysler from 1973 to 1981. He also worked as a manager at Goodyear Tire and Firestone Tire for 14 years before opening his automotive shop in late January of this year.

Noris is also a certified master auto technician, which means he is certified in all aspects of auto repair.

Located across the street from President's Plaza, and next to Fretter on Quincy Ave., Family Tire and Auto, 471-4044, is open Monday thru Friday 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

KAREN AND JERRY Noris, owners of Family Tire and Auto, say that having their own business is a dream come true. The shop opened at 234 Quincy Ave. earlier this year.

Marina Bay Bought By Coastal Partners

Coastal Partners, Corp., has purchased the marina and various support facilities of Marina Bay in North Quincy.

Coastal Partners, headquartered in Annapolis, MD, and Boston, --with interests in facilities throughout the North and Mid-Atlantic -- acquired the parcel from the Monarch Life Insurance Company of Springfield.

Situated on Boston Harbor, the property includes; the biggest marina in New England, dining/entertainment complex known as The Tent, various large boat service buildings, along with substantial parcels of vacant land. The community of Marina Bay, which also features a retail village and neighboring residential units, has long attracted boaters, shoppers, dining enthusiasts and others. Even still, Coastal Partners has developed an ambitious Capital Improvement Program, aimed at enhancing nearly every aspect of the property.

"Our goal is to make this a premier waterfront complex by building upon the many positive traits that already exist." said Coastal Partner's John Wilson. "From a wide variety of boating activities to numerous food and retail operations, this place has something for everyone. And we're committed to making changes and exploring ideas that will enable Marina Bay to realize its full potential."

As part of the capital improvement program, Coastal Partners has filed permit requests for a breakwater extension. The structure a spokesman said would offer greater protection to existing property at the site -- without any negative environmental or safety related impact -- as well as the possibility of some additional boating slips. A dockmaster;s building is also being planned for the end of the marina's boardwalk. The small, two level structure would allow better control, management and supervision of boating activities in the basin.

A new customer service department has been designed too, providing boaters with a single, centralized location for repairs, expediting the delivery of services. Coastal Partners is also making space available for outside vendors. New and used boat sales, harbor cruises, retail boutiques...the organization is hoping to create an even more diverse and flattering base of business at Marina Bay.

Other proposed improvements include a "Yacht Club" and "Pool Club." The objective of these programs is to offer increased water front recreation activities, as well as an assortment of related services, to both boaters and non boaters. The focal point is the proposed construction of a pool and expansive "Harbor Vista Deck." A food and beverage operation, supplied by Marina Bay's Terrace Tent, would compliment the sport and social facility to serve boaters, their families and area residents.

While Coastal Partners has far-reaching plans for improvements, business people and residents are encouraged to contact the company with ideas. According to Coastal Partner's, George O'Malley; "People from this area obviously know the market, therefore, we are particularly interested in their input. Some very good concepts have arisen from such dialogue..so we urge anyone with thoughts concerning changes or additions to Marina Bay to contact us."

Coastal Partners recently, received the honor of "Best Marina On Cape Cod 1994" for its management of Fiddler's Cove. Currently, the company is a finalist for the National Marine Manufacturer's "Environmental Good guy Award." The consideration is being given for a program aimed at discouraging waster disposal in Boston Harbor. Through the program, boat owners were actually paid to utilize a sanitary pump facility at Marina Bay.

Over the past 15 years, Coastal Partners holdings have included: marinas, hotels, resort/clubs, restaurants, retail, food and beverage operations, office buildings, boatyards and waterfront housing. The firm owns and/or manages properties in Florida, North and South Carolina, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and Massachusetts. A local Massachusetts interest is Fiddler's Cove, a marina located in North Falmouth.

MARINA BAY and support facilities have been purchased by Coastal Partners, Corp. headquartered in Annapolis, MD., and Boston.

Let Your Golden Years Shine

By GREG LYNN

There is no age limit for staying healthy. Whether you are 50, 60 or 70-plus years old, exercise can be an incredible addition to your life.

For instance, walking, golf and swimming are great ways to get in shape, feel good about yourself and have fun. Following are some helpful hints on getting or staying in shape while protecting your body from injury:

Walking is an excellent way to stay in shape. Be sure to wear comfortable sneakers, drink plenty of water, and to maximize benefits, use your arms. Since your ankles support the weight of the body, they need extra support and require strengthening to prevent re-injury after a sprain. Helpful preventative and protective products include supports that are smooth, snug fitting and offer maximum arch support such as the Futuro Ankle Support and Neoprene Ankle Support.

It's easy and worthwhile to take precautions and protect your joints from minor sprains and strains with the use of elastic and cushiony neoprene from health supports. Futuro Health Supports minimize the tension and stress placed on your body during exercise with various products designed for specific body parts.

For a free brochure on health supports to suit your needs, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Greg Lynn, c/o G.S. Schwartz, 470 Park Avenue South, 10th Floor, New York, NY 10016.

Back And Neck Pain

By DANIEL KARP
Licensed Acupuncturist

Acupuncture is rapidly gaining a reputation as medicine's most effective solution for neck and back pain.

Hundreds of cases are successfully treated each year. Even people who have not responded to medication and bed rest will respond well to acupuncture treatment.

How does acupuncture relieve these kinds of pain? Back and neck pain rise from three basic causes: injury, chronic tension and poor circulation. In the case of injury, electronic stimulation of the "acupuncture points" reduces inflammation and stops blood congestion. This allows the body's natural pain killers, the endorphins, to soothe the nerves and trigger the healing process. Acupuncture is very effective in these cases.

Where there is back pain from chronic tension, acupuncture triggers the body's "relaxation reflex," causing the painful area to relax deeply and thoroughly. This is especially important in cases where the vertebrae of the neck or back are out of alignment. This is almost always due to uneven muscular tension around the vertebrae.

Acupuncture therapy is usually superior to muscle relaxants in these cases because it can treat the exact muscles and nerves that are causing the problem. For this reason, acupuncture has become widely recognized as the treatment of choice for chronic back pain.

Poor circulation is usually the cause of back pain in the upper back and shoulder area. When blood and lymph fluids cannot penetrate the muscle tissue, metabolic waste products accumulate, causing inflammation, tension, and pain. Acupuncture and heat therapy (moxibustion) restore proper circulation quickly, naturally and effectively.

One of my specialties is the treatment of back and neck pain. My years of success in these cases offers hope to thousands of people with chronic pain. Why suffer any longer? Call me at 471-5577 for an initial consultation with no charge!

CYSTITIS: A BURNING PROBLEM

Anyone who has had cystitis once will likely recognize the signs if they recur: a burning sensation during urinating, more frequent urination, and the urge to urinate even when the bladder is empty. Occasionally, this inflammation of the urinary bladder will also be accompanied by discharge of pus or pain the pubic area. A diagnosis of cystitis is made using the patient's description of symptoms as confirmed by a urine culture. The condition can usually be brought quickly under control with antibiotics or sulfa drugs; without treatment, the infection may go on to cause general chills and fever, blood in the urine and kidney involvement. Drinking plenty of fluids can help both clear up and prevent cystitis.

P.S. Cystitis is fairly common among women, but rare in men.

Improvements in drug therapy have brought relief to many with this condition. At our office we keep up with the latest advances in medical treatment. Pump Bump

By THOMAS E. LYONS, D.P.M.

Heel pain is a common complaint of patients in our practice. One form of heel pain that we sometimes see is a condition known as retrocalcaneal bursitis.

This occurs when the back of the heel becomes painful. Normally, the back of the heel bone has a rounded appearance. However, some people have a heel bone where the top and back portion is squared off and sticks out, resulting in a prominence on the back of the heel.

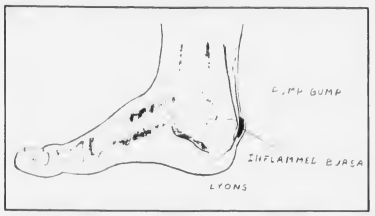
Inflammation or a bursitis results when the back of the shoe rubs against this area with pain and swelling resulting. Hence the term retrocalcaneal bursitis (retro means "in back of," calcaneal refers to the heel bone and bursitis is an inflammation of a bursal or or lubricating sac which allows skin to slide over bone).

This condition is common in runners and skaters as well as in those wearing high heels or pumps, and for this reason it is commonly referred to as a "pump bump."

Treatment of a painful pump bump consists of a short course of anti-inflammatory medication such as ibuprofen (provided there are no contraindications). Icing the area for 15 to 20 minutes when very painful also helps.

Modification of shoegear is a must and consists of avoiding shoes that press against the prominence. Having a cobbler stretch the back of the show is often beneficial, as is wearing open back shoes whenever possible. The bump, also, can be padded to provide additional relief.

For difficult cases, an injection of cortisone may be necessary. When all else fails, surgery is indicated to remove the prominent bone. Most cases, however, can be treated without surgery.



(Dr. Lyons is affiliated with Boston Podiatry located within Quincy Hospital. He is a clinical instructor in surgery at Harvard Medical School.)

You can help protect children who may not have the choice to leave a smoky room or be able to tell you they are not feeling well. They are at risk for the following:

- Children of mothers who smoke are twice as likely to develop asthma.
- Exposure to tobacco smoke worsens symptoms of asthma in 200,000 to 1,000,000 children.
- Secondhand smoke increases the risk for ear infections and reduced lung function.

Junior Reaches Milestone In 64-43 Win Over Quincy

Stanton Sets North Quincy Scoring Record

By KERRY BYRNE

The biggest question during the Quincy-North Quincy girls' basketball game Thursday night was...when? When would Sara Stanton score her 10th point of the game, making her the all-time girls scoring leader in North Quincy High history?

The all-star junior answered that question in less than 11 minutes with a shot that kissed the glass then sat on the front of the rim for what seemed an eternity as it decided, at least for the time being, Stanton's place in the record books. When the ball finally dropped the referee blew the whistle and those at the Quincy High gym gave the new record holder a standing ovation as Red Raider coach Ken Panaro announced, over the din, the reason for the pause: "Sara has just become the all-time girls' scoring leader at North Quincy High."

"We knew that shot would drop, it had to drop," said Panaro after the game. "It was destiny, it was kismet."

Stanton's fate-fulfilling bucket gave her 1,030 points in her career, putting her ahead of Nancy Flukes who set the previous record of 1,029 in 1988. She also holds the all-time single game record for North Quincy, boys or girls, scoring 41 points this year against Taunton.

The sky's the limit for Stanton who has another full season to pad her totals. She finished the game against Quincy with 27 points, helping her club to a 64-43 win.

Afterwards Stanton looked uneasy speaking of her impressive accomplishment - scoring nearly 1,100 points in 59 varsity games - despite the urging of her coach and the crowd that gathered around her. Even a freshman who let out a yell, "Sara, I wish I was you," was not enough to get the reluctant star to boast.

A few days later, after it set in, Stanton was more relaxed. "This was a goal of mine since the beginning of high school," she said. "It wasn't as if I knew I could break the record, it was just that I wanted to so bad."

When asked about her shyness she said: "After the game I was excited, but kind of embarrassed. I didn't know how to react. I never had anything happen to me like that."

The following night, during halftime of the Quincy-North Quincy boys game, she was introduced to the crowd and was "just as embarrassed, if not more so."

Panaro, however, had no such problem. "I look up to her. She is an exceptional student and a quality basketball player," he said proudly.

Quality basketball player, no doubt; she is already being sought by a number of Division I college basketball programs. But the key words are exceptional student. Stanton's list of off-court accomplishments would make any college academic advisor stand up and take notice:

SARA STANTON has plenty of reasons to smile. The all-star basketball player holds two all-time North Quincy scoring records and has proven herself a winner in the classroom as well.

SARA STANTON looks to bank a shot in against Weymouth. The 5-foot-11-inch junior forward has spent the last three years making these shots look easy on her way to becoming the all-time scoring leader in North Quincy girls' basketball history.

Pride Committee, Spirit Committee, Peer Educator, SADD Committee, Spanish Club, class Treasurer and member of the Junior National Honor Society. Oh, by the way, she's ranked 25th in a class of 300.

"Sara is on hell of a player," said Arthur Good, who coached Stanton when she was a member of the AAU under-16 team. "She has terrific skills that she's worked on for a long time - she's just a determined athlete.

"But she's also a nice kid," he added. "She comes from a strong family. Just look at all the things she does; most importantly, look at her class rank. She's exceptional."

Stanton already has respect and admiration within the local basketball community, and it is likely she will successfully transfer her skills to the college level. So what else does she have to prove?

She says there is plenty to prove. "I've reached one goal, but it's time to set some new ones. I want our team to make the tourney and I want us to go as far as we possibly can. I expect our team to be a lot better next year. We've improved so much as a team playing together in the Braintree Summer League."

While team success has eluded Stanton on the basketball court - North Quincy's best record in her three years was 9-12 when she was a freshman - she has got a taste of it playing volleyball.

When she was a freshman the Jim Rendle-led Red Raider volleyball juggernaut went 22-0 and won the Division 1 state title. As a sophomore she started on a club that went 22-5 and this year she helped lead a squad that struggled - at least by North Quincy standards - through the regular season with a 19-7 record but battled all the way to the state finals before losing to New Bedford.

"My goals are team goals," she said. "Yeah, definitely."

No wonder why that freshman wants to be Sara Stanton; she has it all - skills, smarts and, most importantly, proper perspective and attitude.

Miller Wins Div. I Wrestling Crown

With a hard-fought 4-3 win over Methuen's Sean Milovanovic, Quincy's High's Matt Miller became the school's second Division I state wrestling champion in as many years.

Miller won the 130-pound division Saturday in the tournament held at Westfield High School. His name will soon join Ashley Davis' as the two most recent state champions in Quincy's illustrious wrestling tradition. Davis, a 1994 graduate, won the 152-pound title last year and helped Miller this season as a volunteer assistant under head coach Lou Venturelli, also a former state champion.

Also helping Miller reach the title was assistant Larry Taglieri, who was instrumental in developing a Quincy squad which last week won the Division I South Sectional championship for the first time in 12 years.

Miller will wrestle in the all-states Saturday at Reading High School against the top three finishers from the state's three wrestling division. The top three from the all-state round will go on to the New Englands.

According to Miller it was wrestling tradition, both his own family's and that of Quincy High, that led him to the state title.

"My brothers (Paul and Mike, both of whom wrestled) helped me out all the time," said Miller. "They fired me up and pushed me when I needed it.

"I also think Coach V has been a big part of it. Him and Ashley have been there before and they knew what it felt like. The biggest motivation was knowing that your name was going to be on the banner at Quincy High for the rest of your life." Banners in the Quincy High gym list all of the school's sectional and state champions.

After finishing fourth in the state last year, Miller knew he had a shot to go the distance this season. "Winning the state title was something I looked to - a goal I had set. I thought I had a shot this year and was one of the top wrestlers in my weight class. I pushed myself every day and think I got better as the year went on."

Miller finished the season with a dual meet record of 10-1. Two losses he had in tournaments this year came against opponents he's likely to face this weekend in the all-states.

Coach Venturelli had high praise for his number one wrestler. "I can't remember too often when Matt wasn't in the varsity line-up. Since his first year he's improved consistently.

"In the final Saturday against the Methuen kid, who's a very good wrestler, Matt got a 2-0 lead and was able to control the kid the whole way. He's a very good leg wrestler and it helped him a lot in that meet."

Venturelli also pointed out that Miller did not do it alone. "It's an individual effort by Matt, but it's also very much a team

NQ Frosh Girls Split Four

The North Quincy girls' freshmen hoop team posted a split of their last four outings.

The young Red Raiders (11-7 overall, 7-3 OCL) beat Medford and Notre Dame but lost to Taunton and Weymouth.

A better-skilled and better-prepared North Quincy team beat Medford to the punch every time down court in posting and impressive win. Mary Travers excelled in the defensive end while Kelly Fernandez had a career-high offensive game. Eight Red Raiders scored.

Eight Red Raiders again scored in a 38-17 win over a quality Notre Dame squad.

Impressive 12 for 16 shooting from the line also played a big role in the NQ win.

North Quincy trailed by 19 at the half against the Tigers of Taunton, but fought back to within three before falling by seven points.

The deficit grew by as much as 24 before the up-to-then lethargic Raiders came alive.

The seven-point loss "was not indicative of the come-from-behind effort displayed by our girls," said coach Arthur Good.

Six Red Raiders scored.

A 41-26 loss to Weymouth was due largely to a balanced Wildcat attack in which 11 players scored.

North Quincy was frustrated by an unusual bout of poor shooting. They missed a number of shots from inside the paint and went just 3 for 18 from the charity stripe, causing some to wonder if their was a lid on the basket.

It was NQ's third Old Colony League loss.

NQ's First-Half Effort Too Much For Quincy

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

Weak first halves have hurt the North Quincy boys' basketball team lately, but that trend came to end Friday night as host North Quincy's best first half of the season carried them to a 65-57 win over the Quincy Presidents.

The Red Raiders (13-6) were scheduled to play Division 2 power Milton Tuesday and will prepare for the MIAA tournament. Tournament seedings and pairings will be announced at the end of this week.

Quincy (5-13) ended the season this week as host of the Quincy Invitational Tournament.

North showed that Friday's first half would be different when they took a 3-0 lead on a three-point play by Brad Gray 30 seconds into the contest. Quincy came back to take their first and only lead with quick baskets by Jim Lencki and Jason Downey, but two Matt Beston buckets sent the Red Raiders on a 10-0 run.

An 8-0 run gave North a 26-8 lead before the halfway mark of the first period. The lead grew to as high as 21, but a 8-1 Quincy burst made the score 32-18 at the break. The half was marked by strong rebounding and ball control by North and weak shooting by Quincy that was caused by NQ's defensive pressure.

"We played great defense in the first half," said North Quincy head coach Ted Stevenson. "We had our best practice of the year and our kids were ready for this game."

Quincy coach John Franceschini said, "We knew we had to come out and shoot the ball very well tonight and we didn't. The kids worked hard in the second half and we just got beat by a better team. I give North credit for having such an excellent season."

The Presidents made things interesting in the second half with a 12-2 run - led by Tom Clark's two consecutive three-pointers - that brought them to within 10. The Red Raiders called a timeout to settle matters. It worked as the clubs traded baskets the rest of the way.

The top performance belonged to North's Gray who continued his best season as a Raider with a game-high 19 points. He also piled up eight rebounds, made two steals and blocked one shot.

"Brad has had a standout season," said Stevenson. "He's one of the hardest working kids on the team and he's developing into a tremendous player."

Gray and teammate Beston were recently named Old Colony League first-team all-stars. Beston

Named New Football Coach

Chella Brings College Experience To Quincy High

After 11 years coaching at Curry College, newly-named Quincy High football coach Peter Chella looks to bring a "college approach" to the Presidents program.

"We'd like to bring as much college technique as we can," said Chella. "You're obviously limited in what you can do because the athletes in high school aren't as mature, but I feel my experience at the college level will help the kids."

Chella has coached for 19 years, the first eight years were spent as an assistant at Quincy High. He graduated from QHS in 1964 where he was a standout football player. Last November he was inducted into the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame.

Quincy Public Schools athletic director Bill Walker cited Chella's experience as a reason for his selection: "His experience was a leading quality. He's been in football a long time, in both high school and college. With a number of kids looking to go on to college, his knowledge and connections at that level can only help the kids."

PETER CHELLA

According to Walker, nine people were interviewed for the position last Wednesday. The School Committee announced their decision that evening.

Chella said he was "never" a defensive coach at Curry although he did coach "a little" defense at Quincy High. His strengths are his knowledge of offensive and line play. The latter will come in handy next season as the Presidents try to overcome the loss to graduation of four starting offensive linemen and their top running back.

"We have to replace people like [Butch] Palaza, [Mike] Feeley, [Sam] Brown and [Jeff] Burrell," said Chella. "We have some big holes to fill. It's going to be difficult for the underclassmen to step in and do the things those kids did for the last two or three years. But we have a quarterback coming back and some good skill people like Terry Bowman and Mike Shelter."

The new coach expects offensive coordinator Bob Noble and defensive coordinator Bob Keuther to return, although in what capacity remains a question. "I've talked at length with Noble. I've yet to sit down with Keuther, although I have talked to him on the phone," said Chella.

He will bring in a new assistant, Tony Green, who spent one year at Boston University and the last two seasons as defensive coordinator at Curry College.

Chella has taught social studies at Quincy High for the past seven years and he hopes this familiarity with the school and the students will help him ease into his new role.

Quincy Mites, Squirts Pee Wees Win Kiwanis Openers

The Quincy representatives in the Kiwanis Club Youth Hockey Tournament are off to a flying start.

On Monday, the tourney's opening day, the Quincy Mites, Squirts and Pee Wees outscored their opponents by a combined 27-1 score. The Quincy Bantams played Tuesday night against the South Coastal Jr. Ducks of California.

The tournament, sponsored by the Quincy Kiwanis Club and in its 22nd year, features teams from throughout Greater Boston and across North America. This year teams have traveled to Quincy from Colorado and California to take part in the week-long event. Past Kiwanis Club Youth Hockey Tournaments have featured teams from as far away as Russia and the former Soviet Union.

Monday afternoon, the action was hot and heavy in the Braintree zone as the Quincy Mites, sponsored by Northland Seafoods, handed them a 10-0 loss.

The hometown boys were untouchable as they put five pucks in the Braintree net in the first period alone. Dan Durocher scored twice in the opening period and closed out the score sheet with a goal in the third.

Quincy's top scorer was Matt Lavery who netted two goals and assisted on two others. He put on a show in the second period, breaking down ice to score his goals just 26 seconds apart. He assisted on two Kevin Richardson tallies.

Brendan Conley also scored twice and Matt Grazioso hit paydirt once. Conley, Richardson and Andy McDonough made assists.

Netminder Andy (Stonewall) Patten lived up to his name in the shutout. He was not tested often, but he did slam the door on the Braintree icemen whenever they came into the Quincy zone.

Quincy battles the South Shore Seahawks Friday afternoon at 5:30. They take the ice Saturday at 4:20 p.m. against New York Apple Core. The Mite semifinals begin Sunday at 8:10 a.m. and the final will take place that afternoon at 3:30.

The Quincy Squirts also posted a shutout, 9-0, over Dorchester.

Brian (The Flying Irishman) O'Hanley and Joseph Fitzpatrick sparked the Quincy offense with crisp passing. They combined to set up Dave Germain for back-to-back goals just 41 seconds apart in the second period. The joined forces on Quincy's next goal, scored by Shawn Richardson, later in the middle period.

Fitzpatrick also assisted Germain when he scored in the first period. O'Hanley chalked up one goal himself.

Other Quincy goal scorers were Joseph Cunningham (2), Jim (Slashin') Cashins and Andrew Ross. Assists were made by Matthew Conso (2), Brian (Blue Chip) Stock, Billy McKeon, Ross, Richardson, Germain and Slashin' Cashins.

The local Squirts take on Milton Friday at 6:40 p.m. and New York Apple Core Saturday at 3:10 p.m. The Squirt semifinals begin Sunday at 10:20 a.m. with the final game being played that afternoon at

Killer Bees Win, Tie

The once-hapless Quincy Mite B team, now known and feared as the Killer Bees, toppled South Boston, 8-1.

The Bees are sponsored by the Quincy Firefighters Association.

The victory was met by the frenzied buzzing of the Mite B faithful, the Wanna Bees.

Shamrock Line captain Liam Powers (three goals, two assists) opened the scoring off a nice pass from Taylor (Lady Byng) Reinhardt. Jonathon O'Connor then sent one home courtesy of Old Reliable Danny Sullivan.

In the second Sullivan connected with O'Connor for another tally. Myles Clancy, Brendan Linnane and Powers also scored in the middle period. Both Clancy and Linnane were assisted by Powers.

Gene (Genooo) Nazzaro took a Mark Lewis pass in the third period, buzzed down the length of the ice, and unleased a sting that found the twine behind the shell-shocked South Boston goalie.

Captain Powers ended the barrage with a goal assisted by Nazzaro and Matt (Flash) Haskins.

Bee goalie Nick Manning stayed cool and kept things under control in his cage. Defender Pat Maloney refused to let anyone gain control of the disc in his corner.

A blur, believed to be bluelimer George Snowling, was seen speeding up the ice on a breakaway. Chris Sheehan and Brianna Nolan also stung the Broadway Boys.

Both Jake O'Donnell and Flash Haskins thought they had lit the the lamp before realizing that they had been robbed by the South Boston goalie.

The Bees flew to Charlestown for a game against Pembroke and battled to a 3-3 tie.

The Quincy club trailed 2-0 midway through the middle period before they Powers put them on the board. He was aided by Mr. Blue Line Chris Sheehan.

Powers netted the second Bees goal, unassisted, later in the period to knot the contest.

At 9:45 of the third period Linnane did the Shamrock Shuffle and stuffed one in the top corner. Setting up the final tally was Powers and Billy Jones.

O'Donnell had a bead on the Pembroke net but was knocked back by bee repellent as he moved in on the netminder.

Mite House

Crispo, Doherty & White Trick Barry's Deli

Steve Crispo's hat trick lifted Doherty & White to a 5-4 win over Barry's Deli in Mite House League action.

Mark DeCoste and Ben Metcalfe also found the twine for Doherty & White. Goals were set up by the nifty passing of Billy Jones and Metcalfe, who had two assists each. Crispo dished out one assist.

Jarrod Swierk and Matt Germain split the four Barry's goals. Assists were made by Jim Dunn, Justin Swierk, Dan Sullivan and Jim Callahan.

Steve Kelley and Matt Lavery totaled five points each as they powered Samoset Pharmacy to a 7-1 win over Paul Harold Club.

Kelley scored three goals and two assists while Lavery recorded two goals and three assists. Bret Martinson and Matt Haskins also hit the lamp. Myles Clancy looked sharp as he pin-pointed three passes to set up scores. Haskins picked up two assists and Paul McLean made one.

Keith Flaherty scored for Harold Club off a pass from Steve McGrath.

Tim Duggan's two goals provided the winning margin as Purdy's Ice Cream scooped Lydon Russell, 4-2.

Matt Grazioso and Joe Sweeney also tallied for the winning club. Dishing out assists were Nick Leger, Alex Shaffer, Dave Oronte, Duggan and Grazioso.

Brendan Linnane and Josh Sawtelle netted the Lydon goals. They were set up by Mike Nord, Brendan Oliverio and Sawtelle.

Six players hit the lamp as M. Sugarman Co. battled to a 3-3 tie with Granite Rail Pizza.

Tallying for Sugarman were Ryan Barter, Jimmy Kennedy and Dan Reggiannini. Marc McGinnis, Brendan Conley and Joey McManus were the playmakers.

Jake O'Donnell, Jon Griffith and Mike McKeon found paydirt for Granite Rail.

accomplishment. Kids like Matt Froehlich and Bryan Gallahue wrestled with him in practice throughout the year and helped him along.

"I actually thought Gallahue was our best hope for a state title. It didn't happen for him, but he's happy for Matt's accomplishment."

Venturelli also boasted of John Richards' impressive fifth-place showing in the state tournament. The 103-pound senior was too small to wrestle in past years. Essentially, in one year he went from a non-varsity wrestler to one of the best in the state. "John showed a lot of determination," said Venturelli. "He's a scrappy kid."

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Ralph Waldo Emerson once said: "A man is relieved and happy when he has put his heart into his work and done his best; what he has said or done otherwise will give him no peace." In speaking of some rivers that he had discovered, David Livingston wrote: "I find I wrote them when the emotions caused by the magnificent prospect of the new country might subject me to a charge of enthusiasm, a charge which I deserved, as nothing good or great had ever been accomplished in the world without it."

Without enthusiasm no battles have been won, no Cathedrals built, no Empires founded, no Religions propagated. The secret of success is enthusiasm. The men of victory have been the men who kept the fires burning on the alters of enthusiasm when other flames have sunk in the cold, gray ashes of despair. The life of David Livingston is one more monument to the power of enthusiasm . . .

It has been said, often truthfully: "A man without judgement is like a car without brakes; but a man without enthusiasm is like a car without a motor."

Fire Department Will Receive 4th Defibrilator

In just 90 days, the Quincy Fire Department will have its fourth defibrilator, a device produced to save lives.

The defibrilator will be placed on Engine 8 on Doane St. in the Germantown section of Quincy. It was donated by a Community Development Grant (CDG).

According to fire Chief Thomas Gorman, the department's goal is to acquire eight more defibrilators for a total of 12. The device has already saved a life of a man in Houghs Neck.

Calling it the "greatest thing that's come along since the inhalater and CPR" ,Gorman said statistics prove that with CPR, the chances of saving a person's life is between 3 to 5 percent, but with the defibrilator, chances increase remarkably from 33 to 52 percent.

Gorman said in addition to saving a persons life in a fire, the defibrilator is also used for any kind of an attack. He said small pads are placed on the heart area, then shots of electicity are used..

The first defibrilator was acquired two months ago and was donated by the Quincy Municipal Credit Union. It is stationed on Engine 6 in Houghs Neck. The credit union also donated the second device which is on Engine 7. in Squantum The third defibrilator was donated by the Colonial Federal Savings Bank in Wollaston. It is assigned to Engine 4 at the Wollaston fire station on Beale St.

Gorman said the rest of the devices will either be donated or acquired through a lease purchase from the Norfolk Bristol Ambulance Co.

ties, according to D'Aprix, who added that the firm has told him it is still interested in opening the Quincy store.

•Burlington Coat Factory is a family-owned business (D'Aprix could only identify the owners as "the Millstein family"), and the family alone owns 62 percent of the stock, which has further complicated matters, D'Aprix said.

•Stabilization of the Decelle division of Burlington Coat Factory has been slow, according to D'Aprix, because Decelle has experienced some minor financial problems in recent days.

D'Aprix also said that the company is, by nature, a "low-key" organization that often is not very forward during negotiations.

"It's very difficult to negotiate with Burlington Coat Factory and Decelle," he said.

Despite the enactment of the contingency plan, D'Aprix said he believes the arrival of Decelle in Quincy Center is still a possibility, pointing to the September letter of intent as an example of the retailer's sincerity.

"They signed a letter of intent with the City of Quincy," he said. "To the best of my knowledge, Decelle doesn't (usually) sign a letter of intent with anybody."

Sheets said he remains confident that Decelle will open a store in the city.

"Obviously, we're not happy that it's taken this long," said the mayor. "But I still think that it's going to happen. Decelle has said they're coming to Quincy."

Sheets said Quincy 2000 has done "an excellent job" negotiating with Decelle, adding that the formal lease signing is something that is out of the control of city officials.

"You just can't force things to happen in the private sector," he said.

While he believes Decelle would not to continue to negotiate with the city if it did not plan to come to the city, Sheets said he thinks Quincy 2000 is wise to act now on its contigency plan.

"I think it's a great site to market, and I think it only makes sense for Quincy 2000 to have a backup plan," he said.

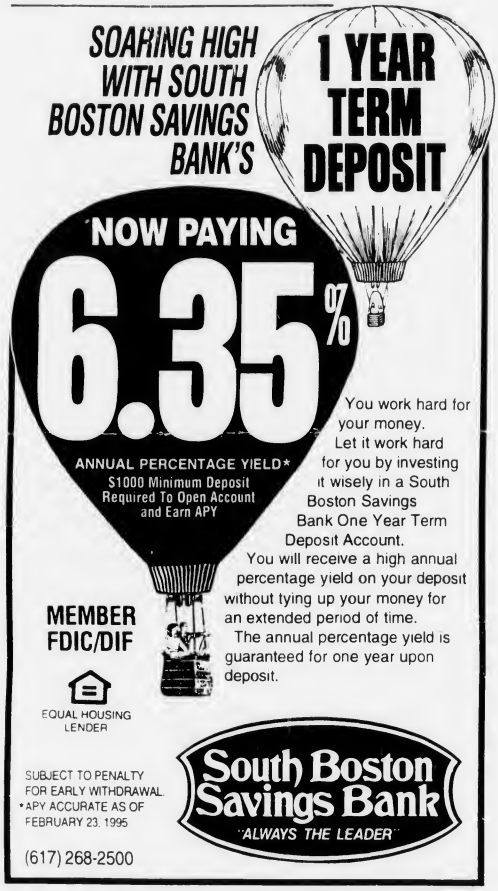
Attempts to reach Burlington Coat Factory spokesman Ric Bramble in New Jersey were unsuccessful.

In addition to the Decelle negotiations, D'Aprix said that Quincy 2000 is currently working on plans for other Quincy Center sites. The public-private planning corporation is in the process of choosing a firm to formulate a redevelopment plan for the Hancock Bank building on Hancock Street, which D'Aprix said could soon become the home of "two or three or four" retailers.

Although he would not identify them, D'Aprix said he has several possibilities in mind for the site, including graduates of the Quincy 2000 Retail Incubation Program.

Officials from Quincy 2000 and The Patriot Ledger also recently met and agreed to begin a marketing study to determine what to do with the newspaper's former home on Temple Street, according to D'Aprix. The Ledger, which still owns the Quincy Center site, left Temple Street in 1989 when it opened its new facility at Crown Colony Office Park in West Quincy.

D'Aprix said at press time he planned to update the City Council on Quincy 2000's plans Tuesday night.



Hearing On Golf Course Land Rezoning March 6

The City Council will hold a public hearing regarding the rezoning of land off Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy Monday, March 6 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The two parcels of land, currently zoned Industrial "B" zoning, will be part of a golf course/recreation area on the Quincy-Milton line that is expected to be open to the public by the end of the century.

City officials have said the rezoning of the two parcels--one to Planned Unit Development (PUD) zoning and the other to open space--will give the city more authority over any future construction done at the site.

THE UNDERLYING COSTS OF A LEASE

When looking to lease an automobile, most people use the monthly payments as points of comparison. As important as these numbers may be, it is equally important to get a firm idea of what a leased car's capitalized cost is. This is the equivalent of the sales price when buying a car, and can include the cost of extended service contracts, credit life insurance, as well as gap insurance (which offers protection in the event that the leased car is lost or stolen and the insurance pays less than the amount owed on the lease). If standard lease documents do not disclose the capitalized cost, consumers should make an effort to obtain this information. All things being equal, the closer the capitalized cost is to the invoice price, the better the leasing deal.

HINT: People who lease should shop as hard as if they were buying.

The safety of our customers is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. Surprise Ice Storm Snarls City

RAY CLIFFORD, an employee of Insituform of New England, uses a power saw to cut into a piece of the "black pipe" along the Squantum Causeway which was used as a temporary sewer pipe for two years while the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority was rebuilding the sewer line in the Squantum marsh. Officials said the MWRA will conclude the final phase of the sewer project this week. Story on Page 2

A surprise ice storm Monday evening and Tuesday knocked down power and telephone lines, sent motor vehicles skidding and fell numerous tree limbs throughout the city.

Officials said the storm would cost the city $20,000 to $30,000, primarily for frequent sand and salt operations on Quincy streets.

At least 51 Mass Electric customers in Quincy lost power Tuesday after tree limbs and branches snapped and fell from the weight of ice, dragging utility lines down with them, according to a company spokesperson.

Approximately 35 customers were left without power near Oakwood St. after a large tree fell in a backyard, said Spokesperson Karen Beradino. The outage occurred at 10:45 a.m. and Beradino said she expected those customers to regain power Tuesday afternoon.

Other powerless customers were scattered throughout the city, Beradino said, adding more outages were possible because of the weather.

"The recovery time for these power outages is approximately one hour," Beradino said. "However, we do expect more outages as it gets colder and the day progresses.

"We will be bringing people on line but we could also lose more customers," Beradino said Tuesday afternoon.

Officials from the Police, Public Works and Park and Forestry Departments said their departments were busy handling storm related calls for service.

Chief Francis Mullen said police received approximately 60 weather-related calls Tuesday beginning at 8 a.m. Most of those calls were from residents reporting fallen limbs and utility lines.

"We had only a few minor fender benders," Mullen said, referring to storm-related auto accidents. "I think people heeded the call to proceed cautiously."

DPW Commissioner David Colton called the storm "frustrating" because steady rain kept freezing over sand and salt spread over streets. "It was a tough night as the rain kept putting a crust on all our efforts," Colton said.

At one point, the commissioner said the temperature dropped 10 degrees in a matter of minutes. The freezing rain was unexpected as a warming trend had been forecasted. Instead, the precipitation combined with a cold front, forming icy conditions on streets and sidewalks.

While the icy road conditions appeared to be warming up, Colton said he expected Tuesday night to be icy again. He said the area had already received a half inch of

In Response To Break-Ins

More Unmarked Police Cars Assigned To North Quincy Area

Responding to a "cluster" of house breaks in the North Quincy area, Police Chief Francis Mullen has ordered increased patrols of detectives in unmarked patrol cars.

The action comes at the request of Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

According to Mullen, there was a "cluster" of approximately five house breaks in the vicinity of Newbury St. and East Squantum St. last week.

"As a result, we're putting extra surveillance in that area. It's a continuing investigation and we hope to apprehend the perpetrator., We don't know but by educating a guess, it would appear to be the same person responsible for the breaks," Mullen told The Sun Tuesday.

Ayers said he encourages residents to participate in the Neighborhood Watch program and report unusual activities in their area to police at 479-1212. The calls can be made anonymously if desired.

"Neighborhood crime will not be tolerated," Ayers said. "Every step will be taken to protect our neighborhoods."

Pedestrian Safety Plans Move Forward

Plans to improve the safety of Quincy's pedestrians are moving forward.

The city's Pedestrian Safety Task Force held the second in a series of meetings in the office of Mayor James Sheets Monday. Among the city officials in attendance were Sheets, Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, Police Chief Francis Mullen, Police Sgt. Hugo Cardarelli, Ward 3 City Councillor Lawrence Chretien, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano and Council on Aging Director Brian Buckley.

Gillon has identified Quincy Center and Hancock Street near North Quincy High School as the areas he considers to be "high frequency" accident areas. He is expected to make recommendations for improvements in those areas when the task forces meets again later this month.

More than 60 people have been struck by cars in the city since July of last year.

Mullen said his department has continued to step up its efforts to enforce traffic laws this year, including the handing out of vehicular violation citations. The chief noted that 1,397 citations were issued Feb. 1-25, and 292 were handed out from Feb. 20-26.

Marshall Confident Of Full Recovery

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall, feeling upbeat after "very successful" surgery for removal of a brain tumor, says he is confident of a full recovery.

"I'm doing fine," he told The Quincy Sun Tuesday. "I have a long way to go to complete recovery but the operation was very successful. I really feel confident and so do the doctors."

Marshall, who is in his

21st year as sheriff and has four years to go on his current six-year term adds, in case anyone might be wondering: "I'm not quitting."

He was scheduled to meet with doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital yesterday (Wednesday) in preparation for a scheduled six weeks of outpatient radiation treatments.

Surgeons at that hospital removed the tumor in a six-hour operation Feb.

'Black Pipe' Is Removed From Squantum Causeway

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has begun removal of the "black pipe," considered by many to be an eyesore, from the Squantum Causeway.

Among those on hand for the start of the work last Friday were Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers, Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton, Joseph "Jay" MacRitchie, legal counsel for the city and a member of the MWRA Advisory Board, and MWRA officials including Douglas MacDonald, executive director of the authority.

Ayers said the MWRA will complete the final phase of the sewer line rehabilitation project this week. The "black pipe," which ran the length of the Causeway, was used as a temporary sewer pipe for two years while the MWRA was rebuilding the sewer line in the Squantum marsh.

Local officials, including Ayers, have criticized the MWRA for the time delays on the project and have put pressure on them to speed up the timeline. The first delay was caused when the contractor the MWRA did not fulfill his obligation and a second contractor had to be hired to complete the project.

The city will now be able to initiate its plans for the Causeway upgrade with the installation of an additional sidewalk on the Hummock side of the marsh--where the pipe was removed--landscaping trees, and repaving the streets affected by the MWRA project. Ayers said when he was first elected to the council that one of his primary goals to was to see the completion of the causeway project, which city officials have been planning since 1943.

Colton noted that the city worked out a mitigation package related to the project with the MWRA, which agreed to foot the $1.3 million for the Causeway project. The commissioner added that the authority had been ferrying employees to Deer Island, which is why it agreed to the mitigation.

A number of improvements were made along the Causeway, which Colton said runs about one mile. Ayers said the road was raised three feet and widened in certain areas, and other improvements were made near East Squantum Street and elsewhere.

Colton said Insituform of New England is the contractor that completed the sewer line rehabilitation project, while Kingston-based P.A. Landers Inc. did the work on the causeway.

Ayers added that he is grateful to the residents of Squantum and Marina Bay for their patience with the inconvenience during the process.

"I am gratified and proud to have been part of this important causeway project," said Ayers. "The Causeway will now be a safer road, improved to withstand flooding, enhanced by new and improved sidewalks and landscaping. It will now be a beautiful entrance to Squantum."

Ayers also praised Colton, MacRitchie, Mayor James Sheets, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Michael Bellotti, and the Quincy Conservation Commission for their assistance during the project.

CITY OFFICIALS stand in front of 200-foot-long pieces of the Squantum Causeway's "black pipe," which had been temporarily used for sewer purposes. Dismantling of the pipe began last Friday and the city's sewer line rehabilitation project is expected to be concluded this week. freezing rain since Monday night.

After spreading 600 tons of salt and 300 tons of sand, Colton said only about a "half shed" of salt remained and ordered more salt for Tuesday night. He expected to have another "full shift" of overtime.

The most recent winter storm added to the snow and ice removal budget shortfall. The $300,000 storm reserve as depleted after the Feb. 4 snowstorm. Another $50,000 to $100,000 has been expended on snow operations since that storm with Monday and Tuesday's storm figured to cost the city another $20,000 to $30,000.

The Public Works Department budget is the only budget allowed to incur a deficit. Colton said he plans to sit down with Mayor James Sheets after the winter and discuss whether there is any "free cash" left for the deficit, or whether the cost will be rolled over until next year.

Regardless of accounting method, the city would continue with snow and ice removal efforts if more become necessary.

The storm also created many service calls for the Park and Forestry Department

Park, Forestry and Cemetery Director Tom Koch reported 75 calls for service by mid-day Tuesday. The first call came at 9:30 a.m.

Employees were called to remove small limbs from streets as well as large trees in order to restore phone service and electricity to residential customers.

"This is nature's way of pruning," Koch said, referring to the fallen limbs and branches. "If a tree is diseased, the weight of the ice will finish it off."

He noted a tree fell on Fayette St. while limbs or "hangers" were reported on Puritan Dr. "Hangers" are slightly attached tree limbs which cause electrical lines to arc. When they fall, they can bring power lines down with them.

Koch said the storm caused widespread problems. "Obviously, the heavy tree neighborhoods were affected more but this was certainly widespread."

16.

Marshall said he hoped to return to work on at least a part-time basis later this week or next week.

He had returned to work a couple of days before the surgery. Following the surgery, he has been keeping in close touch with his office by telephone from his Quincy home.

"It was a very serious operation," Marshall said. "But miracles do happen and I feel one is happening now. I feel healthy. I feel strong."

He said he wants to thank the many friends who have offered prayers for him and those who have sent him "a ton" of get-well cards.

"I know of people who have prayed for me at Lourdes and prayed to Mother Teresa," he said. "I'm most grateful to all who have thought of me and my family during this period. It has made it easier."

Marshall was stricken in his Dedham office Jan. 10 with what then was thought to be a "mild stroke" and was rushed to Norwood Hospital by ambulance. He was later transferred to Massachusetts General Hospital where tests revealed the tumor.

During his tenure as sheriff, Marshall, a former Quincy city councillor and state representative, has initiated modern incarceration alternatives and programs.

One of his most notable achievements is the new Norfolk County Correctional Center built between the north and southbound lanes of Rte. 128 in Dedham which was dedicated in 1991.

It replaced the old Dedham jail built of Quincy granite and dating back to 1817 whose most famous prisoners were Sacco and Vanzetti who were held there during their controversial Braintree murder case trial in which they were convicted and executed.

on WJDA's Cantonese Program last Sunday to stress pedestrian as well as traffic safety, also gave a list of recommendations from patrol officers to Gillon for consideration. The list includes: increased lighting at and around crosswalks, change in signalized light timing, and types of signage.

One improvement Gillon is considering is the implementation of motion lights near North Quincy High. Sheets said state law does not allow the addition of synchronized lighting at the site, and lights triggered by motion are a good alternative.

Gillon is also planning increased lighting and signage in the downtown section of the city.

Sheets said he is pleased with the progress the group made this week.

"The task force is really humming now," he said. Sheets added that Ayers will update officials at North Quincy High about the task force's plans, while Buckley will speak to senior citizens and School Supt. Eugene Creedon, another task force member, will keep students informed.

Other discussion at Monday's meeting revolved around the state and its pedestrian safety procedures. Sheets said statistics from the Quincy Police Department show that Massachusetts lags considerably behind other states in the protection of its pedestrians.

Issue Of Hockey Neck Guards Raised By Durkin

By KERRY BYRNE

Two recent incidents of neck lacerations in high school hockey games have prompted School Committee member Stephen Durkin to propose a rule that would make neck guards mandatory equipment for high school hockey players in Quincy, but Athletic Director Bill Walker feels it is an issue best determined at the state level.

In the past few weeks one boy from Whitman-Hanson and another from Woburn were sliced in the neck by skates during hockey games.

"The two incidents combined led me to call the Athletic Director to see if we had a policy on neck guards," said Durkin. "He said that the MIAA (Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association) is taking up the issue of making neck guards mandatory across the state. My only points is why wait for a higher authority to make the decision?; why wait for another injury? I don't see a down side to it."

Durkin also sent a letter expressing his concerns to Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon. Creedon was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

Walker agreed with Durkin's sentiments but feels that questions about enforcement, liability and ambiguity over the role of neck guards must be answered.

"I don't see any down side to it either," he said. "I'm a proponent of an MIAA rule change that would make neck guards mandatory for all high school kids.

"I think we are far better served if everyone [in the state] wears one and officials police the rule. From my role as an AD it'd be better for me. I can't be standing out on the ice at every hockey game, home and away, for all levels, enforcing this rule for Quincy kids."

Walker, whose son plays hockey for North Quincy High School, appears hopeful that the MIAA passes such a rule. "I'm a hockey parent; from my own personal feeling I would like to see my son wear one, and he does. He made the choice to wear it.

"But not all parents would feel comfortable making their kids wear one," he added.

"Every kid who has played Quincy Youth Hockey has a neck guard in their bag. I shouldn't have to tell them that they have to put it on, their parents can decide if they want their child to wear one."

As to the question of liability Walker said, "If I make a rule I have to back it up," said Walker. "Say a skate hits the neck protector and the guard somehow forces the blade into the neck and makes the cut worse. What then?" He added that he is "concerned" but does not "lose sleep over the liability part of it."

He also said the name 'neck guard' is misleading because it hints that the piece might provide protection from cervical and spinal injuries when, in fact, it does not. "They should probably be called laceration guards," he said. "People might think that they protect other kinds of injuries from happening but they do not."

Durkin said, "I think it would be wonderful if the MIAA mandated a rule, but we can't use that as an excuse if something happens to a Quincy player.

"But," he said, "I'm willing to listen to all sides on this issue. I just wanted to bring it to everyone's attention and maybe make a decision within our own school system. Maybe we shouldn't wait for the state bureaucracy known as the MIAA to make the decision for us."

NO MAGIC PILL FOR CHRONIC PAIN

Pain is a subject no one is totally comfortable with. People who experience pain for more than short periods usually do - and should - seek medical help to relieve it. Physicians look at pain as a sign that something is not working right, something that must be diagnosed and treated. One of the uncomfortable truths, however, is that pain can be a chronic by-product of a long-term condition for which there is no cure. In such cases, narcotics and other painkillers often offer only short-term, unsatisfactory respite. They can even have a negative boomerang effect. Pain management then becomes a challenging task for a doctor and patient to work on, discovering ways to lessen pain's impact and cope with it.

P.S. Certain antidepressants may help in some cases of chronic pain, as may the use of exercises and physical therapy.

Pain management is always challenging, however, new mind-body research has brought many techniques that have brought relief to millions suffering from this condition. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension, and cholesterol. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Office hours by appointment. More Movement On Council Front

More movement on the City Council election front.

Patrick McDermott, president of the Montclair-Wollaston Association and legislative aide to Senator Michael Morrissey, will make it official March 9: he's a candidate for the open Ward 3 seat.

McDERMOTT

McDermott will make his announcement that night at a 7 to 10 p.m. kick-off fundraiser at the Presidents Golf Course Clubhouse. Tickets are $25 per.

Meanwhile, two challengers appear to be warming up for other ward seat bids.

Michael D'Amico, who made an impressive run against Ward 4 incumbent Tom Fabrizio in his political bid two years ago, sounds and looks like he will have another go at it this year.

D'AMICO

"We are putting an organization together," he says. "I will probably have an announcement in April."

Joseph Murphy is giving serious consideration to running for the Ward 5 seat now held by Charles Phelan.

Murphy, who lives on Buckingham Rd. and is a legislative aide to state Rep. Ron Mariano, says:

"I am definitely leaning toward running. I will probably be establishing a campaign committee in a week or two."

Murphy says he almost ran for the Ward 5 seat in 1993.

If both D'Amico and Murphy become official candidates, it would add some extra punch to what seems to be shaping up as a rare City Council battle year.

In addition to an already guaranteed City Council at-large race, there could be contests for at least five of the six ward seats.

At the moment Ward 1's Peter Kolson appears to be the only ward incumbent without a challenger in sight.

The biggest scramble is expected for the Ward 3 seat being vacated by Larry Chretin to run at-large.

But one of the strongest potential candidates—Charles McIntyre—has removed himself from the Ward 3 field. He is, however, still considering a council at-large bid.

McINTYRE

McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, grew up in Ward 3 (Sturtevant Rd.) and recently moved back there on Gothland St. But, he points out:

"I haven't lived in Ward 3 for four or five years and I just don't think it would be fair for me to run for that seat this year. I don't want to be a carpetbagger."

McIntyre, who is now an assistant district attorney, made a strong run for the council at-large two years in his first time out.

"I am still pondering whether to run at-large this year," he says. "I will decide by the end of March or early April."

Although McIntyre is out of the Ward 3 picture there is no shortage of potential candidates. James Boudreau, who like McDermott is an aide to Senator Morrissey; Steve Doherty, Howard McKay, David McGillicuddy and Robert Marshall are all seen as potential candidates.

The Ward 2 seat will be open this year with Ted DeCristofaro stepping into retirement after 14 years service.

School Committee Vice Chairman Dan Raymondi who once held that seat, is expected to run for it again. Paul Donnelly, a member of the Conservation Commission, reportedly is also interested.

Down in Ward 6, incumbent Bruce Ayers may have a challenger in Joseph Newton of Standish Rd.

Chretien's surprise decision to run at-large this sets the stage for a city-wide battle with him takin three incumbents: Michael Cheney, Tim Cahill and Joseph LaRaia.

And the field could get larger.

Former School Committeewoman Mary Collins and community activist Tom Galvin have both said they are "seriously considering" running.

If they and McIntyre, get into it, that would make a field of seven candidates with a preliminary run-off necessary.

Election Year '95 could be one of the more interesting in a long-time—even without a mayoral race main attraction.

Stay tuned.

SMALL WORLD DEPT.: The two got on the elevator in the Capitol Building in Washington Monday, looked at one another and started laughing.

One was Judy Kolson, wife of City Councillor Peter Kolson, who was in Washington as a representative of the Massachusetts League of Community Health Centers lobbying for health centers in Massachusetts.

The other was Hank Bradley, Quincys Veterans Services Director and state commander of The American Legion, who was there lobbying for veterans.

Small world, they agreed.

Sheets Trip To Florida Will Mix Business, Pleasure

Mayor James Sheets left the city yesterday (Wednesday) for a trip to Florida that will mix business with pleasure.

Sheets will attend the Leadership Conference for the Eastern United States held by the U.S. Conference of Mayors which began yesterday in Key West and is running through Sunday. Issues such as crime and housing will be discussed at the conference.

Attendance at the conference, unlike the full meetings of the U.S. Conference of Mayors held in the summer and winter, is not mandatory. Sheets, however, said he finds the annual Leadership Conference to be most informative.

The mayor will remain in Florida for an additional six days of vacation time before he returns to Quincy March 11.

"Maybe I'll get some rest," he said with a smile at press time.

Ward 4 Assn. Women's History Month

The Ward 4 Neighborhood Association will observe Women's History Month Tuesday, March 14 at 7 p.m. in the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The association will host a discussion featuring women who either own their own businesses or run businesses in the City of Quincy. The forum will include speakers from various areas of business, including retail, legal services, real estate, insurance and other areas.

The speakers will also take questions from the audience. For more information, call 786-0696.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1908 POSTCARD view of Hancock St. was taken from in front of what is now Rogers Jewelry store looking south towards School St. On the right, The Quincy Department Store was on the first floor of the Durgin and Merrill building. Further down, the Kincaide Furniture sign is on the building just after today's Adams Arcade which is the site of the planned DeCelle store. Sanborn & Damon's hardware store on the left was open in the Square for over 60 years. In 1915, Hancock St. was widened to its present 80 feet from here to School St. and was paved with cobblestones. That had to be a welcome improvement, as this view shows a set of trolley tracks on a dirt street and, visible in the street in the immediate foreground, are granite blocks which were placed across the street at the corners to allow crossing without stepping in the mud or whatever.

Wollaston Market Has Long Commitment To Area

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Regarding the letter written by David Brew headlined "The Shaw's Debate," he states that Wollaston Market has less than two years left on their lease.

Someone has given incorrect information to Mr. Brew because we in fact have more than 15 years left on our lease. There is an implication that we are not committed to the Wollaston area in his statement, "Suppose he decides not to renew the lease."

Anyone who has shopped in our store, supplied us, have had their sons or daughters work with us, know that the opposite is true. Our intent is to remain in Wollaston, serving the North Quincy-Wollaston area for decades to come.

I also am not convinced that the only two options available to the Gear Works are an abandoned building or an oversized supermarket.

Shaw's Plan Should Not Be Approved

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Shaw's plan for a Hancock Street store should not be given an OK by Quincy officials. The plan does not meet minimum access standards that all other supermarkets in Quincy presently follow. First, each of the four major supermarkets has a legitimate four-lane roadway adjacent. Second, all four have a multiple means on entry/exit. Further, none of the other stores dump traffic into such a major pedestrian travel area.

The introduction of computerized signalization as a cure will not overcome the fact that so many basic aspects above are being ignored by Shaw's planners. Add the many other potential bugs in the program, like almost 30 private and commercial driveway cuts from Beale Street to Billings Road, and you can begin to understand why the 84,000-square-foot plan is not suited for Hancock Street.

Shaw's is touting a $1 million traffic mitigation guarantee if the plan does not work. That is not charity; that is really nothing more than the cost of doing business. It is also good business for Shaw's because it limits the corporation's future liability.

We should not allow our streets and neighborhoods to be overpowered by the demands the complex will make. Giving Shaw's a provisional approval will mean we are giving away our future rights. If Shaw's cannot meet standards now, they certainly will have little to no legal pressure to do so later.

Appreciation Expressed For Circus Animal Ban Ordinance

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We would like to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to all those involved in obtaining our newly-enacted ordinance banning circus animals in Quincy.

Our thanks go to Mayor Sheets, Council President Cheney, and the other six councillors who recognized the humaneness of our proposal and who supported it so strongly.

Also, we want to thank all those individuals and groups, both national and local, who, by their cards, letters, calls, and personal presence at city hall, demonstrated their high level of support for the ordinance.

We, who worked for many months to achieve this victory, hope that the note sounded here in Quincy will resonate with animal activists in other communities to put an eventual end to this cruel exploitation of animals.

Brett Calls For Third High School

March 2-8
1972
23 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

Rep. Joseph Brett, in a letter to School Supt. Lawrence Creedon, called for the construction of a third high school on land off Quarry St.

"A third high school in the southwest area of the city makes sense," said Brett.

The School Committee has earlier turned down a similar proposal from Brett, but was still considering the construction of a new North Quincy High School next to the State Street South complex.

BID FOR NEW PARKING GARAGE DELAYED

DPW Commissioner James Ricciuti delayed the opening of bids for the new parking garage at Ross Parking way because of changes in specifications sent out to late bidders.

Eighty general and sub-contractors requested plans so they could bid on the job; it was expected that 18 would file bids.

The three-story garage, designed by Joseph Donahue would provide 800 parking spaces. It was scheduled to open next October in time for the Christmas shopping season. Bids were expected to come in, in the three million dollar price range.

PAYMENT OF BACK TAXES COULD DROP TAX RATE

City Tax Collector and Treasurer Robert Foy III said payment of back taxes this month would drop the tax rate by $4.

At the end of the year $1 million in back taxes was outstanding. The figure was slightly higher than last year because of the economy.

Mayor Walter Hannon said that a higher rate for 1972 was already a reality, but he was making every effort to keep the increase as small as possible.

Interest of eight percent a year on back taxes was being increased to 10 percent to discourage large property owners from withholding tax payments in order to invest the money at rates higher than the interest paid on uncollected taxes.

The 1971 tax rate was $142.50.

A Tribute To Homer Jenks

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

He had an insatiable quest for knowledge, a steel-trap mind that assimilated that knowledge and was a gentle man, the direct antithesis of the age-old Hollywood stereotype of a newspaperman.

That's how I remember Homer Jenks, the retired veteran newspaperman who died Feb. 23 at age 80....after a remarkable, spotless career that spanned 60 years from the Great Depression to the computer age. "A paragon of virtue" best characterizes the man.

When managing editor of The Quincy Evening News way back in 1931, I recall Homer on a part-time basis when he was attending Quincy High School. To help edit copy, "cover" Quincy High activities and church and fraternal organizations to which his parents belonged in Wollaston. Plus he had carte blanche to write on any other subject his boundless enthusiasm and curiosity dictated.

And from Day One of his joining the news staff, I was bowled over by the ceaseless barrage of questions he bombarded us with in his relentless thirst for knowledge. Upon reflection, I can only hope I played an infinitesimal part in helping launch this wonderful man's meteoric career. For, since The News subscribed to United Press for its national and international news coverage, it was my responsibility as editor to contact UP whenever a big story "broke" in Quincy and its environs. When first I asked Homer to "call in" the stories, he developed a close rapport with Henry Minot, head man at United Press who, years later, gave Homer a job that led to key wartime positions with United Press, later with Collier's, Newsweek and finally, to The Boston Traveler, Herald-American and the tabloid Boston Herald, from which he retired in 1990 as assistant managing editor of The Sunday Herald.

"Decades of chasing news failed to transform Mr. Jenks into the hard-drinking, carousing, tough-talking newsman of the Hollywood stereotype," commented Ralph M. Long, a former Boston newspaper editor. To the contrary, Homer was a mild-mannered, thoughtful soul much like the men in mind when the phrase "gentlemen of the press" was coined ages ago.

Well done, Homer! By virtue of your sterling character, high standards, concern for others and politesse (French for one who is unfailingly polite), you reached a pinnacle precious few attain.

May you rest in peace!

As a final tribute to this peerless newspaperman, may I resort to journalistic privilege and end with -30- which scribes use to denote "end of article."

Expanded Ward School Committee Would Work

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This is in response to former Mayor McCauley's opposition to enlarge the Quincy School Committee as reported in The Quincy Sun Feb. 9, 1995.

Quincy School Committee members Daniel Raymondi and Stephen Durkin made proposals to expand the School Committee by virtue of ward and at-large representation.

Committeeman Raymondi suggested six ward committee persons and four at-large with the mayor as chairman for a total of 11 members, whereas Committeeman Durkin proposed an increase of two members to the board for a total of eight elected members, all at-large, with the mayor as chairman.

Former Mayor, former School Committee Chairman, former City Councillor and now politically-appointed commissioner of the Massachusetts Retirement System Frank McCauley opposes these proposals or any proposal to increase the members of the School Committee.

In 1971, McCauley advocated six ward and two at-large School Committee members, expanding the board to nine, including the mayor as chairman. I would have agreed with the former mayor then as to the number of six ward and two at-large with the mayor as chairman serving on the school board.

My reason for school ward representation is that a School Committee member would have a closer relationship with the schools in their ward and better understanding of the immediate needs in the classroom, after-school activities and the capability to deal with any safety problems in the area.

There are times when we do not put priorities in their proper perspective. With the increasing number of vehicles on the road today, we must be aware of any hazardous conditions, especially since the many pedestrian accidents we have had in Quincy. If we do not get our children to school safely, we will not have to worry about teaching them in the classroom.

I understand that it is the responsibility of the parent and the police department to handle these problems, but I feel that the addition of a ward School Committee member's awareness of these problems could help resolve these situations with a deep concern.

The ward committee person would have the opportunity to make frequent visits to the area schools and have a better all-around view of the progress being made, and also be aware of the physical need of the schools either with books, materials, equipment or the building by working in close relationship with the principals and the staffs.

Why is it that spending is always at the top of the list, putting dollars ahead of our children? Expanding the School Committee does not have to mean that there would be more spending. The ward and at-large system has been successful with the Quincy City Council; why can't it be just as successful with the Quincy School Committee?

Former Mayor McCauley sets as an example the failure of the Boston School Committee with the system. We are not Boston--just because it did not work in Boston does not mean it will not work in Quincy. Let's give our people credit, not discredit them before it is tried.

McCauley asked a question of the proponent of the ward plan, "What hasn't been accomplished by the Quincy School Committee to date that would have been accomplished by an expanded School Committee?" He said, "Nothing that I can think of."

In response: if the system is accomplishing all it has set out to do, then why does former Mayor McCauley want to run for the School Committee as he has been considering, according to all the news items lately?

How to select a hearing aid.
If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.
- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.
"We know a great deal about hearing aids."

Tropicabana: The Remedy For Pale Skin Syndrome

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

If you have been suffering from pale skin syndrome due to the lack of sun bathing weather, Scott Moore, owner of Tropicabana, 392 Hancock St., and his staff have the remedy.

Moore, 27, a lifelong resident of Quincy, opened his tanning salon last month and with it began his career in the tanning business.

But despite the fact that he has only been open just over a month, business has been good, Moore said.

"It started out good and just kept on going," he said. "I have been getting a great response from everybody."

Of course, tanning salons are not just a winter business. They are also important to use in the summer months, according to Moore, who uses the tanning machines himself.

"Tanning machines are better than going to the beach because it gives people who work 9 to 5 a chance to get a tan after work instead of having to lie in the sun for eight hours on the weekend," he said.

Moore finds many aspects of his job to be fulfilling.

"I love everything about this business. But I love meeting people the most," he said.

A 1986 graduate of North Quincy High School, Moore was introduced to the tanning salon business by a friend who also helped him get started.

"My friend Brian Nevell introduced me to the business and Bill McDonald and Brian (Nevell) at Northeast Tanning Suppliers helped me get the beds for my tanning salon," he said.

Moore had been working in the cleaning business for 10 years and is happy to start working days.

"I had been cleaning stores during night hours but I also had to be available for the store managers during the day time in case there were any problems. So I'm happy to get a new working schedule," he said with a laugh.

Each tanning session lasts 22 minutes and preparations are made before each person enters the tanning booth which include filing out questionnaires.

Everyone who goes to the tanning salon must fill out these questionnaires which inquire about such factors as hair, eye and skin color to determine the skin sensitivity of each person and to ensure the best tanning experience.

According to Moore, no one under 14 is allowed to tan at the salon.

The tanning salon consists of four tanning beds, one tanning booth and a standing facial machine.

Moore, not content with this wide variety of services, plans to add seven new tanning rooms to the second floor of the tanning salon within the next three months and a juice bar within a month.

The establishment will also offer services such as facials and a nail salon.

Italian plaster walls and Italian marble floor tile, a 100-gallon fish tank with an array of different bright colored fish and numerous palm trees give the tanning salon a unique environment.

"This is a different kind of tanning salon," Moore said as he pointed to the fish tank in the tanning area. "It's a low-priced salon in an upper class atmosphere."

Adjacent to Sacred Heart Church, Tropicabana, 770-2852, is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

TROPICABANA, a new North Quincy tanning salon located at 392 Hancock St., opened its doors to the public last month. Among those joining owner Scott Moore (center) for the grand opening celebration were, from left, his friend Neil Beagle, owner of nearby Regal Beagle Liquors; Tropicabana manager Lori Timmons, Mayor James Sheets and Fr. Cornelius Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart Church.

College Chooses Chairman For Accreditation Process

Quincy College Interim President Linda Wilson has assigned a top school administrator to oversee the self-evaluation process regularly required by the state.

Steven Kenney, the school's director of development and grant services as well as a finalist for the interim president's job last fall, will head the accreditation efforts at the college for the next 18 months.

Kenney will lead a steering committee of faculty, professional staff and administrators that will begin formulating a 100-page report about the school's mission, and objectives. The self-evaluation must be submitted to the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC) by September 1996, before the accrediting body's scheduled campus visit.

Wilson, however, said she is hopeful all the documents can be complete before that deadline.

Next year's meeting is the school's regularly-scheduled accreditation review. Over the past year, however, accreditation has been a controversial subject at the college, and was called into question by the state board a number of times.

The NEASC's disapproval was aimed at the college's previous governance structure, when control of the school was in the hands of the Quincy School Committee. Last fall, however, those concerns were met when an independent board of governors was appointed to run the two-year school and its campuses in Quincy and Plymouth. The threat of probation or loss of accreditation was then dropped.

Kenney told the board Monday night is ready to move ahead with the accreditation process. Last Friday, he met with an accrediting official to review the requirements and assess where the college is in the process.

The steering committee will now begin recruiting interested faculty, staff and board members to serve on various subcommittees to evaluate areas of the college. The subcommittees will review the college's missions and purposes, faculty, planning and evaluation, student services, organization and governance, library, programs and instruction, and physical and financial resources.

The subcommittees will examine in each area what the college does and does not do well and outline goals for the future. Kenney will merge each subcommittee's report into a comprehensive document, with analysis, to go to NEASC.

The board of governors also Monday night approved funding to hire a part-time assistant at $6,500 who will assist Kenney with accreditation-related duties. The move will allow Kenney to also continue as director of development and grant services.

'Women Against Guns' Open Meeting March 8

Police Chief Francis Mullen will be the guest speaker at the "Women Against Guns" open meeting of the Quincy Citizens and Wollaston Park Association Wednesday, March 8 at 8 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, Hunt St., North Quincy.

Mullen will discuss the 65 percent proliferation of gun ownership since Congress outlawed the manufacture of certain assault weapons, and how Quincy's "Women Against Guns" effort can reduce the number of gun-caused "accidents" and deaths by reducing the number of guns in local homes.

Mullen will explain how the Quincy Police Department will simplify the gun-disposal problem for women timid of handling guns and bringing them to the Police Station.

The QCA is concerned that recent newspaper ads urging "ladies and gentlemen to learn to shoot to protect yourself" only causes greater gun ownership, making guns available in homes for youngsters and youths to toy with experiment with, and within easy reach in domestic arguments that have lately ended in many deaths.

The QCA hopes that Quincy's "Women Against Guns" effort will lead the way for women throughout the state to join in the gun-reduction campaign.

Quincy voters are invited to attend the open meeting.

'Protect Your Credit Cards'

Credit card theft and the fraudulent use of credit cards has become a nation-wide problem. Here are some helpful hints to protect your credit cards.

Always:

• Sign all new cards immediately and cut up expired cards.

• Examine your credit cards as you do your cash. Don't leave them in pockets, sitting our around the house or hotel room, in the car's glove compartment, or in a purse left open in a shopping cart.

• Make a list of all credit cards with their numbers and issuers' names and telephone numbers. Keep the list in a safe place.

• Notify issuers immediately if your card is lost, stolen, or misused.

Use Your Cards Safely

• Try to watch the card during transactions to make sure it is used to print only one slip.

• Make sure the card is returned and that it is your own.

• Tear up carbons the store ordinarily discards. An individual can take a carbon from the trash, copy the number, and use it for a mail order purchase.

Beware of Callers Seeking Your Account Number

Don't give information about your credit cards over the phone, even if the caller says he is from the bank or credit card company or insists the number is needed to verify your prize in a contest.

Money Machine Cards

If you can select your own Personal Identification Number (PIN) to access an automated teller machine, stay away from your birthdate, Social Security number, or address. If you lost your wallet with your card in it, these are the first numbers a criminal would try. Use something personal, like an old address or a friend's birthdate that you can remember easily and doesn't appear on any cards you carry. Don't write your PIN on the bank card or on a slip of paper in your wallet.

If you follow the above suggestions you will improve your chances of NOT becoming the victim of credit card fraud.

Brian Buckley Alternate Delegate At Aging Conference

Quincy Council on Aging Director Brian Buckley has been selected as an alternate delegate to the White House Conference on Aging by Gov. William Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci.

The conference, which will be held in May in Washington, D.C. is the first of its kind to be held since 1981.

The governor has selected 20 delegates to represent Massachusetts as well as each federal senator and representative delegate. Delegates will make recommendations for the aging policies of the future. The conference was designed to serve as a model for action, legislation, private initiatives and government strategies affecting aging Americans into the 21st century.

Buckley said the White House Conference on Aging is very important to his organization's planning process.

"The conference will definitely lay the groundwork for the next century in dealing with the aging process and, in particular, in preparing for the 'baby boomers' as they enter their later years," Buckley.

"As an alternative delegate, I anxiously wait to represent the City of Quincy in Washington should the opportunity arise."

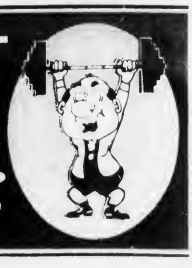
HEALTH & FITNESS



Holistic Therapy, Wellness And General Health

By JUDITH PREBLUDA

Since this issue of The Quincy Sun is focusing on health and I am a holistic therapist, I decided to reflect on the topic of holistic therapy and wellness, and what it has to do with health in general.

I am one of many people today in the health profession who is expanding both my own definition of therapy and getting well, and what I have to offer clients in some non-traditional areas. By non-traditional, I am referring to a range of non-medical approaches, such as massage, acupuncture, energy balancing, movement therapy, hypnotherapy, meditation, positive thinking, and so on. More and more, these approaches, which once were thought of as esoteric and perhaps exotic, are gaining wider acceptance and usage. Why is that? And why are more and more traditional therapists, such as myself, feeling the need to expand what we do and what we offer?

I, myself, come from a background of traditional training in psychotherapy, and have 15 years experience treating adults and children. Because my original training was in dance/movement therapy, I have always noticed and been fascinated by the mind/body connection, and the way in which emotions influence our physical condition, and vice versa. Everyone is familiar with the stress headache or the stomach ache, and how simply taking a deep breath, or stretching, or just stopping to think about something pleasant, can be as effective as aspirin....if not more so.

In the course of working with people who suffered from both emotional and physical traumas, I have become more and more convinced that the problems of life can be addressed from many different angles, and the more integrated the approach, the more effective.

Why are more people interested in this new/old approach to getting well and feeling better? Pain and stress management approaches are attracting many people who have tried traditional medical solutions, and suffer too much to enjoy the quality of life. In my own practice, I have observed that people are willing to try more than just medicine to relieve stress, anxiety, tension and pain. Often someone will initially want relief from physical pain, and discover in the process that they have much more control and access to their sense of well-being than they realized.

There is an empowering aspect to holistic health. The client is an active participant, and through the process, realizes that many answers and solutions lie within. A good holistic therapist is a teacher, also, and imparts the skills, such as relaxation techniques, that will help the client to live a more balanced and rewarding life.

In a world that seems to be getting more complex and demanding, many people are looking outside of the usual ways of coping with pain and stress. In the process, they are sometimes making a wonderful discovery: that there is more to the experience of being human. In the course of healing, people often discover hidden strengths and emotional and spiritual truths and are indeed more "whole" than when they began their journey.

My own philosophy of healing is that all parts of a person are interconnected, and the more flow there is within the parts, the more health and fullness will be reflected in the person's life. How different people achieve this flow is illustrated in the many different and creative non-traditional approaches that are coming into the public eye. If you feel a resonance with the tone and information in this article, then perhaps you are already beginning your search.

(Judith Prebluda is a licensed counseling psychotherapist and an advanced dance/movement therapist. She also is a second degree Reiki practitioner and a long-time student of Native American and Tibetan studies in private practice in Quincy.)

Did you know...
CHILDREN LEARN FROM THE EXAMPLES SET BY THEIR PARENTS

No one is born with a craving to smoke. The first cigarette you smoked probably tasted terrible. So why did you begin?

Young people start smoking for many reasons - because it is the accepted thing to do, because adults or friends smoke, to try to express independence or to try to act mature.

With all these influences at work, the parents' influence would not seem to matter much. Yet statistics show that children of smoking parents are twice as likely to smoke as children of non-smoking parents.

People who start smoking at a young age find it more difficult to quit later, since the habit has had longer to become established. The ill effects of smoking have longer to become established too, so the life expectancy of a smoker who starts at a young age is shorter than of a person who begins later in life, and far shorter than someone who never smokes at all.

Facts You Ought To Know About HIV Testing

(NAPS)—Half a million Americans. That's how many, it's estimated, have AIDS. It's the third leading cause of death of men and women aged 25 to 44 in the U.S. By the year 2000, about 40 million people worldwide are expected to be infected with the HIV virus.

What can you do about it? You can do more to help prevent the spread of HIV than you may realize. Testing is the first step in prevention.

If you have never been tested for AIDS and wonder if you should be, consider these questions:

Have you had more than one sexual partner? Had sex without using a condom. Had sex with anyone without knowing about their past sexual behavior? Had sex with someone with a history of bisexuality, hemophilia, sexually transmitted disease or a blood transfusion between 1978 and 1985? Have you used IV drugs? If you gave any "yes" answers, you might want to talk to your doctor about getting tested.

Testing generally starts with a simple blood test. If it comes up positive, a second, confirming test is done. These two tests are more than 99 percent accurate. New, more simple and less invasive tests have been developed.

Any test may give a false negative during the first six months after exposure to the AIDS virus, so high-risk individuals should be tested every six months.

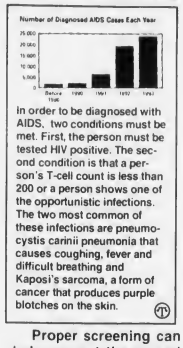
A positive test result indicates infection by the virus. About half those who test positive for HIV develop AIDS-related symptoms within eight to ten years.

One goal of testing is to encourage behavior change in the people tested. People tested need counseling to know how to protect themselves and others from being infected. Another goal is to encourage people who test positive to seek medical care because more early forms of treatment are now available.

Many hospitals, doctors, community health centers and clinics offer HIV tests, some for free. They typically will refer the samples to a laboratory. The tests are returned to the doctor within one week.

The good news, scientists say, is that AIDS is a preventable disease. Information is the best defense against AIDS.

To find out where you can learn more about HIV antibody testing, call the ACLA at 202/347-2844. ACLA is a national organization whose members include the leading providers of independent laboratory services in the United States. Through its "Staying Healthy" campaign, ACLA is helping educate Americans about what they can do to prevent serious disease and illness.



In order to be diagnosed with AIDS, two conditions must be met. First, the person must be tested HIV positive. The second condition is that a person's T-cell count is less than 200 or a person shows one of the opportunistic infections. The two most common of these infections are pneumocystis carinii pneumonia that causes coughing, fever and difficult breathing and Kaposi's sarcoma, a form of cancer that produces purple blotches on the skin.

Proper screening can help prevent the spread of AIDS.

Senior Advice: Tips On How To Prevent Falls

Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged in Boston offers these tips to help prevent falls, the most common accidental injury among the elderly:

•If you are taking medications that lower blood pressure, ask your doctor or pharmacist if you can take them between meals to avoid a large drop in blood pressure. If you become dizzy after large meals, small frequent feedings or walking after meals may help.

•Take prescribed medications as ordered; do not take extra pills to make up for missed doses. Be careful of medications which can make you drowsy.

•Do not take any "over-the-counter medications" before taking to your doctor. Remember that these medications may interact with medicines you are presently taking.

•Wear shoes that fit well, and don't walk around in socks or stockings that could make you slip.

•Have your eyes and ears examined annually.

•Ask your doctor about exercise that will improve your strength and endurance. In addition to walking, consider weight-lifting exercise. Research shows that resistance training builds muscle size and strength, and improves gait and mobility.

•Use a cane or walker if it has been prescribed, and make sure the can or walker is adjusted to your height. Learn to use it properly.

•Take safety precautions: keep your home well-lit, remove scatter rugs, remove or tape down telephone and electrical cords; install grab bars in the shower/tub and next to the toilet and use a non-skid bath mat in the shower.

•Even if you do not hurt yourself after a fall, report it to your doctor.

WHAT IS A SLIPPED DISC?

The term "slipped disc" has been used commonly, by doctors and patients alike, to generally describe an injury to one of the 23 "jelly-like" shock absorbers found between each of the bones or vertebrae of the spine. These intervertebral discs are ligaments which actually consist of a "jelly-like" middle surrounded by rings of cartilage. While these discs do not actually "slip" from between the spinal bones, they can be worn, compressed, bulged, or ruptured causing pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves. It is this bulged or ruptured disc that pressures or "pinches" the nerve which actually causes the severe back and/or leg pain that may result. Often times, muscle spasms will accompany a disc injury as the body attempts to stabilize or splint the damaged lower back or neck.

While the intervertebral discs may lose some of their height and resiliency and dry out slightly over the years, the final straw of a disc injury may be a sudden twist or slip, an improper lift, or a seemingly minor accident.

Chiropractors are well qualified in the prevention and/or treatment of disc injuries and often employ the modern technology of MRI or Catscan to ensure accurate diagnosis. Chiropractors use a drugless, non-surgical approach which may include manipulation, forms of therapy, proper exercise and bed rest.

Kiwanis Hockey Tournament

Quincy Bantams Top Needham For Tourney Title

The Quincy Bantams were the host city's lone champion in the Kiwanis Tournament.

Quincy blanked Needham, 4-0, in the championship game Sunday afternoon.

Scoring goals in the winning effort were Mike Powers, Chris Haidul, Mike Sullivan and Mike Fitzpatrick. Netminder John Masone recorded the shutout, his second of the tournament. He posted a .80 goals against average in five games.

It was an impressive mix of talent that led the Quincy squad to the title. The Catholic Line featured Powers of Matignon and Sullivan and Scott Cooper of Catholic Memorial. Quincy High, which had a promising group of freshmen and sophomores on the team this season, was represented by Haidul, Masone, Bobby Harvey, Kevin Cellucci, Derek McTomney, Steve Verlicco and Matt Langille.

Verlicco was the defensive star for the Bantam squad. He manned the blue line with ferocity, leveling every player who dared come his way.

Also playing for the Quincy Bantams were Dan Stock (North Quincy High), Jon Hasson (BC High), Mike Fitzpatrick and Billy Connolly.

Quincy edged Colorado's Littleton Blades, 2-1, in the semifinal round. Hasson and Cooper were the goal scorers. They were set up by Haidul and Sullivan.

Needham advanced to the final game by virtue of a 5-2 win over the South Coastal Jr. Ducks of California.

The champion Quincy squad outscored their opponents by a margin of 19-4 in five games. Their one blemish in the tournament came in their first game when they skated to a 1-1 tie with the Ducks.

They followed the tie with a 5-0 blanking of the Littleton Blades and a 7-2 win over the New Jersey Devils which put them in the semifinal round.

THE QUINCY BANTAMS were the host city's lone champion in the Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament. Members of the team were Bobby Harvey, Dan Stock, John Masone, Steve Verlicco, Chris Haidul, Kevin Cellucci, Mike Powers, Jim Hasson, Scott Cooper, Derek McTomney, Mike Fitzpatrick, Billy Connolly, Matt Langille and Mike Sullivan.

QUINCY BANTAM GOALIE John Masone was instrumental in leading his team to the title of the Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament last week. Masone, who also plays for Quincy High, posted a .80 goals against average and two shutouts in five games while leading Quincy to a 4-0-1 record.

Quincy Pee Wees Fall, Mohawks Win Title

The Quincy Pee Wees became one of three local teams in the Kiwanis Tournament to get stifled in the semifinal round when they were edged by Winchester, 4-3, Saturday at the Quincy Youth Arena.

It was Quincy's only loss of the week. The hometown club had outscored their opposition 15-5 in three games to that point, winning two and tying one.

Dan Kennedy, John Bertucci and Ryan Doyle scored for Quincy, but they were unable to hold off a late Winchester goal that iced the contest.

Winchester fell to the South Shore Mohawks, 4-1, in the championship game. The Mohawks bested California's South Coastal Jr. Ducks, 2-0, in their semifinal contest.

Quincy opened the tourney with an 8-1 win over Arlington. It was the biggest margin of victory by any Pee Wee team in the tournament.

Didier Alther scored one goal and added four assists to pace the Quincy effort. Frank Curreri and Paul Markarian each scored two goals and set up one other. Dan Kennedy and Mike Welch recorded one goal and one assist apiece.

Ryan Doyle scored one goal while Brian Nolan, Chris Griffin and Joey Ardagna made single assists.

In their second outing the Quincy boys blanked Lancaster, Penn., 3-0, on the strength of two Kennedy goals.

Alther also tallied. Assists were made by Kennedy, Ardagna, Welch and Kiva Tupe.

Quincy's tie came against a surprisingly strong South Coastal Jr. Ducks squad from California, 4-4.

Kennedy again scored two goals for Quincy. Markarian and Curreri each netted one.

Setting up the goals were Griffin, Nolan, Ardagna, Welch and Paul Campbell.

Kennedy was Quincy's top scorer in the contest with six goals and two assists. Alther picked up two goals and five assists while Curreri and Markarian each scored three times and assisted once.

QUINCY PEE WEE Mike Carloni takes control of the puck along the boards in his team's 4-4 tie with the South Coastal Jr. Ducks of California. The local Pee Wees went 2-0-1 in the Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament before falling to Winchester in the semifinals.

Quincy Mites Fall In Semis, Milton Wins Title

After a 10-0 blowout over Braintree in their first outing of the Kiwanis Hockey Tournament, the Quincy Mites were involved in series of heated, one-goal battles.

The Quincy boys were eliminated by a 3-2 loss in double overtime to Pembroke in the semifinal round.

It looked like the game would end 2-1 but lightning-quick Josh Giordani, who was a question mark before the game due to illness, split the Pembroke defense and scored a breakaway goal to tie the contest with just over two minutes remaining in the third period. He was set up by Matt Lavery who hit him with a pass in the slot.

Giordani, Richard Stone and Matt Germain had a number of opportunities to score from in close but were shut down by Pembroke's fortress-like netminder, Kevin Carmichael.

The teams fought hard through one overtime before Nick Cunningham iced the game for Pembroke in the second extra session.

Pembroke lost to Milton, 3-1, in the championship game.

Germain and goalie Andy (Stonewall) Patten were the heroes Saturday in Quincy's 1-0 win over New York Apple Core.

Quincy needed the win in order to advance to the semifinals following a 3-2 loss to the South Shore Seahawks Friday.

The teams battled furiously in an exciting, up-and-down affair but neither was able to light the lamp until Germain beat the New York goalie with a wrist shot that went top shelf with just 4:10 left to play.

Stonewall Patten saved the day when he foiled a 3-on-1 bid midway through the second period. The goalie showed nerves of steel as he held his ground and easily kicked away the New York shot.

Stonewall played well during the tournament, allowing just six goals in four-plus games (a 1.4 goals against average) and recording two shutouts. He was fronted well by defenders Joe Norris and captain Tim Duggan.

The champion Milton squad had an impressive run through the tournament. The opened with a 5-3 win over Medford, pounded Winchester, 8-1, and battled to a 3-3 tie with runner-up Pembroke. In the semifinals they blanked New York Apple Core, 4-0, before topping Pembroke in the championship re-match.

Pee Wee B's Hammer Hyde Park

Mike D. Sullivan lit the lamp four times to lead the Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee B team to a 10-1 win over Hyde Park.

Also getting in the scoring column were Mark Giese with a hat trick and Mike Cunniff, Tom Gaeta and Chris Lumaghini with one goal each.

Assists were made by Mark Gibbons, Domenic Papile, Ryan Murray and Rene Lumaghini.

Outstanding plays were made by Pat O'Donnell, Mike C. Sullivan and Shane Kabilian while Matt Gregory was sharp between the pipes.

QUINCY SQUIRT DAVE Germain (dark shirt) watches as his shot is covered up by Milton's goaltender. Quincy and Milton battled to a 2-2 tie. The hometown Squirts outscored their opposition 16-3 in three games in the Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament before being ousted by South Boston in the semifinal round.

Quincy Squirts Strong But Hawks Take Trophy

After outscoring the opposition by a combined score of 16-3 in three Kiwanis Tournament games (2-0-1), the Quincy Squirts fell to South Boston, 6-3, in the semifinal round.

Goals by Andy Ross, Billy McKeon and Flying Irishman Brian O'Hanley were not enough for Quincy in the semifinal game.

South Boston (2-1-1) lost to the Whitman-Hanson-Kingston Hawks, 2-1, in the championship game.

The Quincy squad opened the tournament in impressive fashion, blasting Dorchester, 9-0.

The hometown team - also known as the all-nickname team - jumped to a 4-0 first-period lead, thanks to goals by Jimmy (Slashin') Cashins, Dave Germain, Joseph Cunningham and O'Hanley, and never looked back.

Germain blew the game open when the added two more goals in the second period. Both goals were set up by O'Hanley and Joseph Fitzpatrick. The two combined to assist Shawn Richardson later in the period. Fitzpatrick made the first of his four assists in the opening period when he set up Germain's first goal.

Cunningham and Ross added third-period goals.

Other assists in the game were made by Matt Conso (2), Brian (Blue Chip) Stock, McKeon, Ross, Richardson and Cashins.

Cunningham scored both goals during Quincy's 2-2 tie with Milton.

Quincy beat New York Apple Core, 5-1, in the game that sent them into the semifinal round.

Blue Chip Stock, Slashin' Cashins, The Flying Irishman, Cunningham and Ryan Donahue scored for the local team.

Goalie Shaun Flaherty was superb for Quincy, allowing just three goals in the first three games and recording one shutout.

Pee Wee A's Win Two

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee A's, sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks, posted two wins before taking part in the Kiwanis Tournament last week.

Quincy edged Brookline, 2-1, on the strength of goals by Mike Welch and Dan Kennedy.

They were assisted by Brian Nolan and Ryan Doyle.

Matt Gregory fared well in net in place of Ryan Krueger.

The Quincy boys had a field day in a 15-0 win over Charlestown.

Spike Bertucci led the effort with a hat trick and two assists. Doyle recorded two goals and two assists. Kennedy and Nolan both had four points on one goal and three assists. Welch and Didier Althor each chalked up two goals and one assist.

Adding to the offensive barrage were Frankie Curreri (one goal, two assists), Paul Burke (one goal, one assist) and Mike Carloni and Mike Sullivan with one goal each.

Rounding out the score sheet with assists were Paul Markarian (3), Joe Ardagna (2) and Kiva Tupe (2).

Killer Bees Win Cranberry Title

Showing the mettle of which champions are made, the Quincy Mite B team, the vaunted Killer Bees, overcame losses in their first two games to capture the title in the Cranberry Tournament in Pembroke this weekend.

In doing so the Bees captured the hearts of fans across the city and etched in stone their never-say-die attitude.

The Killer Bees did not live up to expectations in their first two outings, a 4-0 loss to Canton, and a 3-0 loss to the North Rhode Island Vikings. The back-to-back losses had the Quincy fans, the Wanna Bees, buzzing about the downfall of their once-proud franchise.

However, the Killer Bees responded to the whispers by pulling out a dramatic 4-3 overtime win against the Whitman-Hanson-Kingston trio in the elimination round.

A goal in the first period by Danny Sullivan, off a feed from Jonathon O'Connor, ended the two-game scoring drought. The Bees took a 2-0 lead in the second when Myles Clancy banged one home thanks to a pass from Shamrock-Linemate Liam Powers.

Two quick goals by Whitman-Hanson tied the game and led to a shift in momentum. The Bees, now used to having their backs against the hive, did not panic.

They answered the call in the third when Gene (O') Nazzaro (filling in for Shamrock winger Brendan Linnane) hit centerman Powers who flicked in a wrist shot to put Quincy back on top. Whitman-Hanson's final goal tied the contest and sent it into the overtime session.

In the shootout the Quincy heroes, captain Powers and goalie Nick Manning, led the Bees to the win. Powers stung for the winning goal while Manning turned away a scoring bid.

That led to a rematch against the conquering Vikings of North Rhode Island. The Vikings took a 1-0 lead and things again looked bleak for the Killer Bees as the Rhode Island boys had been unscored upon in the tournament.

But in what has become their trademark style, Quincy overcame adversity and netted two goals to pull out a 2-1 win and advance to the final contest against the South Shore Seahawks. Powers netted the equalizer and Jake O'Donnell the game-winner. Clancy assisted Powers.

In a performance reminiscent of Mark Messier's in the 1994 Stanley Cup playoffs, Liam Powers scored three goals to lead Quincy to a 6-1 win over the Seahawks to complete the improbable tournament title run.

The Seahawks made every effort to unplug Powers and were three times penalized for tripping the captain. Also scoring for Quincy were O'Donnell with two and Sullivan with one.

The heroes were many for the Killer Bees. Without the outstanding efforts of Taylor Reinhardt, George Snowling, Brianna Nolan, Mark Lewis, Pat Maloney, Chris Sheehan, Matt (Flash) Haskins, Danny Davis and Billy Jones the title would not have been possible.

North Quincy Seniors Honored At Banquet

The North Quincy High Football Booster Club recently held their annual awards banquet at the Sons of Italy.

According to all involved the affair, honoring primarily the senior football players, was a great success. "This was one of the best banquets we've ever had," said head football coach Ken McPhee. "Tish Fernandez, along with the other parents with the Booster's Club, did a great job for us, as they have all year."

Shawn Nee, capping off a fantastic season for the 6-4 Red Raiders, got more exercise than anyone as he collected the Peter J. Zoia Jr. Scholarship, the Laroy C. Rogers Award for team Most Valuable Player, and the Old Colony League Most Valuable Player award.

Derick Epps, also coming off a standout season, went home with two honors: the Coach Jack Donahue Award as the Thanksgiving Day MVP and an OCL second-team all-star award.

The other two-time winners were quarterback Sean Dolbeare who received the Peter J. Zoia Award for best offensive player and the Bill Degan Award for outstanding back; and Jerry Fernandez who was given the William J. Schaetzl Unsung Hero Award and was named second-team OCL all-star.

Dave Carney and Toby Odom shared the Dr. Allan Yacubian Award as best defensive players and were honored as first-team OCL all-stars.

The Thaddeus (Ted) Sadowski Award went to Sean Kennerson as best offensive lineman and Ricky Maciera as best defensive lineman. Neil Kiley won the Hall of Fame Bill Degan Award as outstanding lineman.

Matthew Hourin and Sean Mahoney shared the F.X. Schaetzl Award while the Coaches Award was presented to Rob Ragusa and Keith Martinson.

Other winners were Brendan Welch (Rev. Cornelius Heery Sportsmanship Award), Jamie Karvelis (Firefighters Union 12th Player Award), Glenn Peterson (John Muldowney Memorial Award) Kenny Burke (Special Teams Award) and Eric Zimmerman (Degan Scholarship).

Seniors Patrick Callahan, Michael Coner, Greg DiBella, John Lee, Samson Lee, Joseph Renzi and Dan Reynolds were also honored by the Booster Club.

Named as captains of the 1995 squad were Tim Zaniboni, Paul Picciano and Chris Ritchie. Charlie Plaskasovitis was named junior varsity player of the year while Brian Walsh and Brian Wells were honored as the top sophomore and freshman, respectively.

The most emotional part of the day's festivities came when Pete Zoia and Thaddeus (Ted) Sadowski were presented with plaques to be hung in the North Quincy High gymnasium foyer. They will join Carl Leone, John Mullarkey, Jack Donahue, Harold Forest, Laroy (Curly) Rogers and Edgar Phillips as coaches honored on the North Quincy "Wall of Fame."

Said Zoia: "It is great. I'm very honored to be among the other great coaches at North Quincy High."

Zoia, McPhee and several others at the banquet mentioned the quality work done by Bill Early of QCTV-3 who put together the North Quincy highlight film.

Basketball

Quincy Finishes Strong, Looks To Next Year

A strong finish to the season and a promising group of returning players have given Quincy High basketball coach John Franceschini reason be optimistic about next year's prospects.

The Presidents started slow this year but finished the season by winning four of their last five ball games, prompting the coach to say, "Obviously we're very happy with how we finished the season. Through the whole second half of the season we improved - it's a great springboard for all our underclassmen next year."

The Presidents compiled a record of 7-13 overall and 4-12 in the Old Colony League. They capped the season with a dramatic 80-77 overtime win versus Stoughton in the Quincy Invitational Tournament.

Junior guard Jeff Russell hit two free throws at the end of regulation to send the game into the extra session, where he continued his heroics with four points. The performance earned Russell a spot on the tourney all-star team.

Stoughton entered the game with a record of 15-4.

In the Invitational's first round Quincy beat Marshfield handily, 76-61. The Presidents led by more than 20 on several occasions.

Senior Dave Sawan was named the tournament's MVP. The co-captain also recently received the OCL's top sportsmanship award.

Next season the Presidents will rely on guards Russell and Dave Gunther. The front court will likely be manned by current sophomores Scott Pyer, Bobby Walsh and Geoff King. Each of the young forwards measure in at over 6-feet-2-inches which will give Quincy the size they have lacked in recent years.

"This year's team left it all on the floor," said Franceschini. "One thing about them is that they played very hard in each and every game. Anyone who saw them play this year would agree. With a young team they did exactly what you hope for - that's to continually get better as you go along. The win over Stoughton, a very strong, quick team, shows you how far you've come."

Franceschini gave a lot of the credit to his outgoing seniors: co-captains Sawan and Jason Downey, Tom Clark, Chris McPartlin, Chris DeLisle and Jim Lencki. "Clark and McPartlin were first-year players who decided to come out as seniors and did a good job for us," he said. Clark was Quincy's leading scorer in several games this year.

"All the seniors did a great job," said Franceschini. "It's a credit to them and the team that they could start slow but come back and finish the season the way they did. They set the tone for our team next year."

Coach Fran also wanted to give credit to assistant coaches Ray Papile and Mike Draicchio and volunteer assistant Mike Norton, each of whom, he felt, were instrumental in helping the Presidents end the season on a positive note.

Junior Red Raiders Win Second Straight

Buoyed by pressure defense and hustle, the Jr. Red Raiders upended the MBA Celtics, 36-23, for their second win in a row at Hunt Palace in Weymouth.

Pat Bregoli and Peter Turowski paced the first-half scoring for the winners, hitting for four points apiece, as the Raiders took a 14-6 lead into the break.

Relentless full-court pressure broke the game open in the second half. Mike Haines, Dan Duggan and Phil McGillicuddy were major factors as they forced many Celtic turnovers. Steals by Duggan and McGillicuddy led to three Joe Sudak layups in the fourth quarter.

Sudak, who finished with 12 points, had eight in the decisive fourth quarter while McGillicuddy netted six of his eight in the final session.

Duggan also helped out on the offensive end with six points.

The Raiders kept their playoff hopes alive with the win. This week they need a victory against the MBA Hornets and their six-foot center, Ben Donovan.

Vukosa Sectional Champ

Six NQ Wrestlers Compete In States

When the wrestling season started in November, outgoing North Quincy coach Steve Joyce said he would be happy with an even record.

Not only did his team earn a winning record, finishing the regular season at 8-7, but six of his wrestlers competed in the Division 2 state tournament. One wrestler, heavyweight Steve Vukosa, did so after winning the sectional title. The Red Raiders did all of this despite several match forfeitures and low participation.

"In almost all our meets we had to have seven wrestlers win every match, and most of them had to win by pin, in order for us to win the meet," said Joyce, who recently announced he will retire from active coaching at the end of this season. He's held the job at North for 18 years.

"We met our goal with a .500 record and did much better in the sectionals than expected," Joyce said of his team's third-place finish behind Whitman-Hanson and Hingham. "If we brought a full team of 13 wrestlers with us I think we could have taken second place."

As with much of the regular season, North Quincy went shorthanded into the sectionals. With only eight wrestlers suiting up, one would not expect anything near a top-five finish, but a group of dedicated Raider grapplers, led by Jamie Karvelis, made their coach's next-to-last event a successful one.

Karvelis wrestled with more than just the sport and his team on his mind. He had to contend with his seriously ill mother at home. With such a heavy personal load on his shoulders, he took second place in the 135-pound division and earned a trip to the state tournament where he finished in fourth place, missing by one spot a trip to the all-states.

His mother, Josephine Karvelis, passed away Feb. 21, just three days after the state tourney. "Jamie did an amazing job," said Joyce. "He had to deal with a very difficult situation. He wrestled at the states without having practiced in two weeks and he barely slept before the states. Fourth place is a fine tribute to a boy who was running on pure adrenalin. Even if he had qualified for the all-state tourney he would not have been able to make it."

Vukosa earned the sectional title two weeks ago after winning a thrilling overtime match with Whitman-Hanson's J. J. Frisole. Joyce was very impressed with the work of his heavyweight. "Vukosa is only a second year wrestler, so his accomplishment is pretty impressive. He has come a long way even since last year."

Other Red Raiders who advanced to the Division 2 state tournament were Rob Ragusa (189 pounds, second in the sectionals), Joe West (130, second), Sean O'Toole (125, third) and Jason Gibson (119, third).

Ken Goon (145) and Jose Villaneuva (140) also competed in the sectionals.

Ragusa and West joined Karvelis and Vukosa as North Quincy wrestlers who made it to the second day of the state event. Karvelis' fourth-place finish was the best by a Red Raider.

Ragusa was bumped up to 189 pounds in the sectionals although he competed at 171 pounds for much of the year.

Joyce is very high on West, a junior, and Gibson, a sophomore. "West is an up-and-comer. He's surprised people. He's got the skills, now he needs the strength to go on to the next level.

"Gibson will do better next year. [At the states] he beat the first kid easily but then beat himself. He just has to learn who to wrestle in tournaments because he was undefeated (14-0) in dual meets this year."

Joyce described O'Toole as "a fierce competitor."

Much of the credit for North Quincy's success goes to Rich Ragusa who was recently named assistant coach of the year for all of Division 2 by the Mass. Wrestling Coaches Association.

NQ Hockey, Boys' Hoop Set For Tourney Play

By KERRY BYRNE

For the second year in a row North Quincy High will be represented by both its hockey team and boys' basketball team in MIAA postseason tournaments.

As of press time the hockey pairings had not been announced, leaving Red Raider coach Tom Benson unable to speculate on upcoming opponents. He did say, however, that his team's ability to advance deep into the tournament "depends upon how well we come out of the gate. We have to play well defensively and need Mike [goaltender Mangano] to come up big."

Last year, for the second season in a row, North Quincy advanced to the Division 1 semifinals before bowing out. At 12-7-1 (9-5 in the Old Colony League) this year's squad does not appear as strong as last year's version, but, said Benson, "You never know how your going to do. If we can come up with the big goal and get strong performances from our second and third lines we'll do OK. You only have to win a couple of games to get into the finals."

Benson will rely on his first line of A.J. Carthas, Brendan O'Brien and Jim Kelly to lead the offense. Kelly, a senior, had to fill big shoes in taking over on the first line for Jim Sapienza who is now playing for Merrimack College.

Defensively he hopes Ralph DiMattia, Dan Stone, Matt Jarnis and Paul King will be able to duplicate the play of departed blueliners Andrew Vermette, Dennis Pateras and Dave Pacino, who were vital cogs on the 1993-94 squad.

Among the youngsters who have shined for the Red Raiders and who will get their first taste of high school tournament play are sophomores Dan Stock and Eric Wood. Wood, a big, strong forward, scored a number of key goals this year.

Hoop coach Ted Stevenson, whose team entered the tournament as the No. 9 seed, will rely heavily on his Dynamic Duo of Matt Beston and Brad Gray.

Stevenson's club played Framingham Tuesday night in first-round tournament action. If victorious, the Red Raiders were scheduled to travel to No. 8 seed Newton South tonight (Thursday).

Tuesday Stevenson was optimistic about North Quincy's chances to advance. "I think we got a very good draw," he said. "Up until the quarterfinals we can beat the two teams we have to play, but they can beat us, too. After that it's a real dogfight."

The coach is pleased with the way his team played lately and feels that the season-ending loss to high-powered Milton was an aberration. "Our season was basically what I expected - a lot of highlights, a lot of lowlights. But we came on very strong until the last game. We just weren't ready to play and Milton was.

"We have an outstanding group of kids who have worked very hard. They're probably the hardest working group I've ever had."

He singled out Jerry Fernandez, Mac Ngutter and Eric Zimmerman for their contributions. "They've been workhorses all year even though they don't get the credit that some of the other kids do."

Jevon Glenn, a transfer student from New York City who began the year on the North Quincy JV squad, has performed well off the bench for the varsity team. "He's come a long way; he's really doing a nice job," said Stevenson.

PULLING OFF TO THE SIDE

When a car pulls to one side upon depression of the brake pedal, it may be an indication that the break pads have become excessively worn. If so, replacement of the pads usually corrects the problem. Otherwise, brake pull may be due to a sticking caliper piston. (A caliper is the device that exerts a clamping force on a brake disc to stop a car.) A caliper piston that leaks brake fluid may also cause brake pull. In either case, the problem can be remedied by rebuilding or replacing the affected caliper and replacing the brake pads. Beyond these instances of brake pad and caliper problems, brake pull may also occasionally result from badly worn suspension components or unequally inflated tires.

HINT: Brake pull sometimes results from a mismatched set of brake discs, due to replacing one disc and not the other.

Next time you need major or minor brake work done, bring your car into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Our highly trained technicians and availability in parts will make your experience quick and easy and will assure you of a job well done. We're proud of our staff and you can trust us to get you back on the road. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. A Thought For The Week

There is a good reason why our doors are always open to persons seeking factual information about funeral service. Today, because of increased longevity, many persons reach maturity without any personal contact with a funeral home. But vague stereotypes and myths do seep into their consciousness. We at Deware want them to know the truth about a modern funeral establishment and believe that answering ANY and ALL questions openly and clearly, at a time when the questioner is not emotionally involved, is the way to do so. We are always available for counsel if one wishes to make arrangements in advance. Remember that at our establishment, we are ready to provide clear answers to any questions about the charges for our services and merchandise required in connection with it.

Iwo Jima Hero

Memorial Service Sunday For William R. Caddy Medal Of Honor Winner

A memorial service will be held Sunday for Marine Pfc. William R. Caddy who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously for heroism in the invasion of Iwo Jima 50 years ago.

The 292-member William R. Caddy Detachment, Marine Corps League, named for him in 1946, will hold a wreath laying ceremony at noon at Caddy Memorial Park, Quincy Shore Drive, also named in his honor.

Speakers will include Commandant Philip Daley and Chaplain Robert Manning.

The Caddy Detachment members will be in uniform for the ceremony.

All veterans of the Iwo Jima invasion, one of the bloodiest and most crucial battles of World War II, are invited to attend the ceremony and a collation following at the Detachment headquarters, 25 Foster St., Quincy Center.

Caddy was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously on March 3, 1945. He gave his life when he fell on a grenade thrown by a Japanese soldier, smothering it to save the lives of Marine comrades.

The taking of Iwo Jima was both a costly in lives and strategic victory for the United States because it is only 600 miles from Japan and made it easier for American planes to strike the Japanese homeland and return to that new base.

A later victory at Okinawa brought the American forces to within 400 miles of Japan and strategically closer to the end of the war.

Opposes St. Patrick's Controversy

Sheets Won't March In South Boston Parade

Mayor James Sheets has announced he will not march in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in South Boston March 19.

The parade is planned as a protest again previous court decisions that allowed a gay Irish group to march.

The mayor has said he will be out of town for the weekend, but he would skip the parade even if he were here. Sheets said the parade should be a celebration of the contribution of Irish-Americans, not to promote or demonstrate against a certain cause.

Sheets had stated earlier this month he planned to march in the parade, but noted this week he changed his mind after reflecting on the parade's theme.

Two local groups--the Whitman-Hanson Regional High School Band and the Braintree Braves Drum and Bugle Corps--have said they also will not march because of the controversy over the gay issue. This year's parade will be smaller and include black flags along the route to emphasize the protest theme.

The North Quincy High School Band also originally planned to march, but Richard Kenneally, director of the band, said he has since realized that he will not have enough band members available that day. He added that the band's decision is unrelated to the parade controversy.

State courts have ruled in previous years that the South Boston Allied War Veterans Council could not exclude the Irish-American Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Group from the parade because it is a public event.

However, the veterans said the rulings infringed on their right to free expression and that gays do not conform to the parade's traditional values. Last year, they canceled the parade for the first time in almost 100 years to protest the courts' decision.

Last month, U.S. District Court Judge Mark Wolf ruled last month that the veterans could hold a "protest" march and exclude gays.

The dispute between the two sides, will go before the U.S. Supreme Court in the spring.

New Ambulance Station Opens In West Quincy

The city's ambulance contractor has opened a neighborhood sub-station in West Quincy.

Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance, and its parent company, Ambulance Systems of America, recently began operating an advanced life support ambulance out of a rented garage at 61 Copeland St. Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, who lobbied for the new sub-station, Mayor James Sheets and company officials recently attended a ribbon-cutting at the site.

The Quincy Police Department provided ambulance service to the city for many years, but in the early 1980s the contract was put out to bid and ambulance service was taken over by Bay State Ambulance. The company operated out of a garage on Hancock Street near Central Middle School.

Eventually, Bay State went through several transitional phases and became absorbed by Norfolk-Bristol. The garage location also changed to a site off Field Street in Quincy Point.

Fabrizio, concerned that ambulances were responding to calls from South and West Quincy from the Quincy Point site, lobbied Quincy police, fire and hospital officials to encourage Norfolk-Bristol to open the West Quincy station. The company eventually agreed.

An ambulance station on Broad Street in Quincy Center will continue to operate.

Although Norfolk-Bristol is a private contractor, those in need of an ambulance should continue to dial 911. For more information about the West Quincy station, call Fabrizio at 471-2302.

State House Delegation Calls For Local Aid Increase

Quincy's three state representatives are advocating for a House plan which increases local aid by $247 million over last year.

The delegation's fight for more local aid will be taken up shortly in the House, as Beacon Hill lawmakers will soon debate the resolution providing a record $2.87 billion in direct state assistance to cities and towns.

"Whether it be police or fire protection, public education or senior citizen programming, state aid is an integral part of paying for municipal services," said Rep. Ronald Mariano, who added that Quincy is slated to receive more than $30 million should the local aid resolution be adopted.

Rep. Michael Bellotti said the plan provides for significant raises in two components of local aid, school aid and lottery distributions.

"To fully fund the state's increased commitment to education reform, another $196 million will be added to school aid," said Bellotti. "Lottery distributions will rise by $51 million, up almost 25 percent over the Weld administration's recommendation. These monies will go a long way to support further discretionary spending on the local level."

"News of this early local aid resolution should be doubly good news for municipal budget drafters," added Rep. Stephen Tobin. "With the adoption of an early resolution providing for increased state assistance, the process of drafting a local budget should be much clearer."

Before being committed, the local aid resolution requires adoption by both the House and Senate. All three representatives said they are optimistic that will happen.

D'Aprix Named CEO, President Of Quincy 2000

The Quincy 2000 Board of Directors recently approved a number of changes to the corporation's by-laws, including the promotion of Charles D'Aprix to president and chief executive officer.

The proposed amendments, approved unanimously by the board, were presenied by Chairman Charles Simpson Jr. Among the major changes:

•D'Aprix, formerly executive director of the corporation, was promoted to president/chief financial officer. While the change eliminates the position of executive director, D'Aprix will remain the day-to-day manager and director of Quincy 2000.

•Simpson, president and chief executive officer of Quincy Savings Bank before it was recently acquired by Citizens Bank, will remain chairman of the Quincy 2000 Board of Directors. Added to the by-laws was an article that reads, "Any member of the Board of Directors who is elected Chairman of the Board shall be a full voting active member of the organization of the Board of Directors for life, and as such will be eligible to hold any office regardless of business or professional affiliation."

•John O'Connor, regional president of Citizens Bank of Massachusetts, replaced Simpson on the board as a senior executive of a financial institution.

Other administrative changes to the by-laws were also approved by the board. By-laws incorporating the approved changes will be sent to the entire membership.

Mariano Elected Vice Chairman Of House Counties Committee

State Rep. Ronald Mariano was recently elected by the membership of the Massachussets House of Representatives to serve as vice chairman of the House Committee on Counties.

Mariano, who has been a member of the Committee on Counties for three years and has served as a member of the Norfolk Country Advisory Board, said he looks forward to the next two years.

"The Third Norfolk District receives many important services from the different branches of county government," he said. "I intend to ensure that these services continue and are expanded whenever possible. With the rationale for county government being challenged, it is my goal to see it operate efficiently and economically."

Mariano said he is pleased that he was recognized by the Speaker of the House for his leadership abilities and endorsed by a unanimous vote of his colleagues, adding that his appointment will improve the clout of the South Shore delegation on Beacon Hill.

NQ-Framingham Hoop Game On QCTV-3 Monday

The North Quincy High boys' basketball team's tournament game against Framingham will be shown Monday, March 6 at 7:30 p.m. on Quincy Community Television, channel 3.

The game was played Tuesday, Feb. 28 at the North Quincy High gymnasium.

Pete's Fleet Modification

The Quincy License Board accepted a modification to amend the description of the premises known as Pete's Fleet Inc., Ocean Terrace at Marina Bay eliminating the name of Edmund Fitzgerald., the boat that was housed there until last April. It will be called Pete's Fleet, Inc., Ocean Terrace.

The boat has since moved to Maine.

Richard Barrett , owner of Ocean Terrace, told the board he plans to serve lunch and dinners daily and also be open for functions including concerts, weddings and other events.

Barrett said he hoped to increase the number of functions from the 45 he had last year to more this year.

QUINCY FIRE DEPARTMENT recently received a check for $4,400 from Colonial Federal Savings Bank in Wollaston to pay for a new defibrilator at the Wollaston Fire Station. The device is the third of its kind to be obtained by the department, which hopes to acquire a total of 12. From left are Mayor James Sheets, Colonial Federal Treasurer Susan Shea and President Bob Guarnieri, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Ward 3 City Councilor Lawrence Chretien. Colonial Federal opened its doors in 1889, the same year the fire department was established.

Shea Blames Parking For Marina Bay Problems

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

License Board chairman Joseph Shea said at Tuesday;s meeting he "blames 90 percent of all problems at Marina Bay on parking."

Because of this he has has scheduled a meeting with all owners and tenants of Marina Bay on March 21 . He will ask them to come up with a "parking plan" otherwise some summer functions will not be able to be held.

Citing last summer's complaints about parking, and not wanting to "wait until July" Shea urged everyone involved to present a plan at the meeting.

George O'Malley, who recently reacquired properties at Marina Bay with the exception of one parcel of land said the owners and tenants would meet and try to solve some of the problem.

Richard S. Novak, who represents Monarch Life, owner of that particular parcel of land said he had no plans to use the land for parking because he has a responibility to "protect the property" until a new owner purchases it.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman told O'Malley he "appreciated his view on liability" and said if a parking lot is ever intended for the parcel of land, licenses would have to be issued to conform to all regulations.

When Shea told the board that some persons have already requested a license to have a power boat race at Marina Bay.,Gorman said that each function that is held at Marina Bay puts and additional strain on both the fire department as well as the police department

Gorman said both departments end up paying overtime to their employees and persons who run the functions have no responsibility.

Mullen said events like a boat race increase the population for more police coverage they should pay for it themselves. Shea explained that the plan of a surcharge is already "on the mayor's desk".

Amusement, Billiards License Request Continued By Board

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued until next week a request from Quincy Pocket Billiards, 1585 Hancock St. for an amusement and billiards license until the prospective owners meet with Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien and downtown merchants.

Chris J. Mann told the board he wanted a non-alcoholic license and said he hoped to attract those persons 18 years and older. Although Mann promised it would "not be a hang out," Police Chief Francis Mullen cited problems in the area. Mullen said the area used to have police detail until Frank Messina, owner of the building "did away with it."

Mullen added that he was "very unhappy with that decision" and said he wanted to take a "very hard look at the area" before he could feel comfortable.

Mann told the board that he had managed Shooter's for a year and hoped to run a "nice clean billiard parlor." Mann offered to hire police detail himself if enough business was generated.

City Clerk and License Board Chairman Joseph Shea said "we're not saying it is out of the question," but advised Mann and Ivy MacDonald, who also appeared before the board, to speak with someone from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

3 New Councillors Sure

Phelan Stepping Down, Election Year Heating Up

Election Year '95 heated up this week with a guarantee it will produce at least three new ward city councillors and one or two new School Committee members.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan's surprise announcement Monday night that he will not seek re-election will pave the way for a third new face on next year's City Council.

Ward 2's Ted DeCristofaro is also retiring and Ward 3's Lawrence Chretien is vacating that seat to run at-large.

It will mean at least a one-third change in the makeup of the nine-member 1996-97 City Council which will be elected this Nov. 7.

If a preliminary runoff in any contest is needed, that election will be Sept. 19.

School Committee member Stephen Durkin quickly sailed his hat into the Ward 5 ring which, in turn, creates a school seat vacancy.

"I'm a candidate," said Durkin, adding that he has been interested in the seat for some time. "I'm excited about the prospects of serving that ward."

Asked if he would have run against Phelan, Durkin said, "Absolutely not. Chuck's done a good job."

WARD 5 CITY COUNCILLOR Charles Phelan told his colleagues Monday night that he will not seek re-election to a fifth term in September.

Joseph Murphy, 21, of Buckingham Rd., Wollaston, a legislative aide to state Rep. Ronald Mariano, said he is still "leaning toward" a run for the Ward 5 seat.

"It's something I've wanted to do for a long time," said Murphy, who noted that he hopes to make a final decision "within a week."

Stephen Reilly, 37, of Beach St., Wollaston, a lieutenant in the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, said he is pretty definite he will run. He filed papers Monday to organize a committee.

"I'm leaning, definitely, toward running," he said. "It's something I've been thinking about for a couple of years."

In Ward 3, Stephen Doherty, 36, of Beale St., Wollaston, an administrative recording clerk at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds became the second official candidate for that open seat.

Patrick McDermott, a legislative aide to Sen. Michael Morrissey and president of the Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association has said he is a candidate for the Ward 3 seat and will make an official announcement tonight (Thursday) at the Presidents Golf Course clubhouse.

Other potential Ward 3 candidates are Howard McKay, who has run before; James Boudreau, who like McDermott is an aide to Morrissey; David McGillicuddy and Robert Marshall.

School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi is expected to run for the Ward 2 council seat that DeCristofaro is leaving after 14 years. This would create a second open School Committee seat in this year's election.

Michael D'Amico, who ran against Ward 4 incumbent Thomas Fabrizio two years ago, appears to be getting ready for ano-

Fore River Bridge To Undergo $25M Safety Overhaul

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The aging Fore River Bridge will undergo a $25 million overhaul to improve safety conditions and traffic flow along the heavily travelled bridge, State Rep. Ron Mariano announced Tuesday.

A $25 million state grant, approved in the last supplemental bond bill in January, will provide detailed safety improvements to the bridge, the site of numerous auto accidents, including several fatalities, in recent years.

The work, slated to begin in the spring of 1996, will mark the first major safety renovation to the brid since its reconstruction in the 1930s.

"This is the first attempt in a long time to make considerable safety improvements to the bridge and to try to make it a bridge you can travel over and not be fearful of ending up in the drink," Mariano told The Sun Tuesday.

The last overhaul attempt was made by former Cong. James Burke some 20 years ago, Mariano said.

The project, which will go to bid in December, is expected to take two construction seasons to complete. During construction, attempts will be made to minimize impact on local business and to provide two lanes of traffic during rush hour along bridge which connects Quincy and Weymouth to Route 3A, Mariano said.

RON MARIANO

"We're going to make sure there are always two lanes of traffic going in the direction of rush hour traffic. The pedestrian sidewalk will be removed and that will allow three lanes of traffic on the bridge.

"One lane will be reversible and go in the direction of rush hour traffic," Mariano said.

The two-lane rush hour provision was a "major coup" for Mariano and Rep. Paul Haley of Weymouth who were instrumental in securing the funding.

"The first plan (proposed by the State Highway Department) had only one lane of rush hour traffic. We asked them to provide two lanes of traffic and they (State Highway Department) did a good job of coming up with a solution," Mariano said.

In place of the sidewalk, Mariano said a shuttle bus will be available to take pedestrians over the bridge during construction. The shuttle will probably run every 15 or 30 minutes, depending on demand, Mariano said.

"The impact on local business should be minimal," Mariano said of the project.

One side of the bridge will be worked on during the first construction season; the other side during the second season.

The project calls for numerous safety improvements, including:

•Replacing the open grating deck with a concrete-filled deck which is a high friction surface for better motor vehicle wheel traction. Many motorists have complained the grating deck does not provide sufficient friction.

A Statement To Our Readers

Dear Readers:

This is an announcement we make with great reluctance.

The newsstand and carrier home-delivered price of The Quincy Sun will be 35 cents effective with the March 23 issue.

This represents a five-cent increase over the current 30-cent price. The new 35 cent price will still be lower than that of most weekly community newspapers.

A sharp increase in the cost of newsprint, approximately 50 percent in just a few months as well as spiraling production and other costs make this five cent increase necessary.

The price of a 52-week mail subscription was increased by $1 in February. This was due to the increase in postal rates for mailing newspapers.

The Sun has absorbed the increased costs of producing a newspaper but cannot any longer.

We hope you—our loyal readers, many of you who have brought us into your home since the very first issue of The Sun in September, 1968—will understand this necessary decision.

We will continue to strive to bring you the best community newspaper we can with the accent always on Quincy.

Thank you.

License Granted For Billings Rd. Restaurant

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board at Tuesday's meeting granted a request from Lucky Trifilos to open a new restaurant called "The Union Cafe" at 74-76 Billings Rd., North Quincy.

The site was formerly the North Quincy Donut Shop and has been vacant since last September.

Trifilos, who said he had had seven years experience in the restaurant business plans to open this week and told the board he would be serving a full sized breakfast and a light lunch

The hours will be from 5 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. ,On Mondays through Fridays, the kitchen will only remain open until 3 p.m. and then Trifilos said he would serve coffee until closing time.

The 39 seat restaurant will seat seven persons along the counter with tables and chairs for the rest of the patrons.

Ward 6 Councilor Bruce Ayers who told the board he was "in favor" of the project said a meeting was held last week with 36 area residents who all signed a petition also in favor of the business.

Ayers said Trifilos took an old building and made extensive renovations so that it has a "positive impact" on the community.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board continued a hearing regarding the L & J Auto Center, 165 Hancock St. concerning complaints including failure to keep the property clean, abandoned vehicles, illegal signage and allowing a second business to operate without approval of the Zoning Board of appeals.

Leslie Jurczuk appeared before the board last month in which he was given 30 days to "clean' up" the area and also reduce the number of car displays from 20 to no more than 12.

Det. Sgt. Richard E. Laracy told the board that he had inspected the site and said Jurczuk has "cleaned it all up and is in good condition". Board members stressed to Jurczuk to "keep it clean" and placed the motion on file.

•In other business, a hearing regarding the Quincy Pocket Billiards, 1585 Hancock St. for an amusement, a pinball and billiards license was postponed until a later date. Chairman Joseph Shea said the prospective owners Chris J. Mann and Ms. Ivy B. MacDonald are still in negotiations with the Messina Corporation and also have to meet with the Quincy Center Business Professional Association.

The board will not meet next week, but the meeting scheduled for March 21 will include Marina Bay parking.

Stephen Doherty Candidate For Ward 3 City Councillor

Stephen R. Doherty, 36, of Wollaston, announces he is a candidate for Ward 3 city councillor.

"As administrative recording clerk for the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds for the past eight years, I have helped the citizens of the county deal with a wide range of real estate related issues. It has always been important to me to insure that all their concerns are addressed and questions answered.

"I will bring this experience of making government work to the residents of Ward 3."

A lifelong Quincy resident, Doherty has been active in the community and politics for many years on both the state and municipal level. He is currently vice chairman of the Quincy Democratic City Committee.

STEPHEN DOHERTY

"I am looking forward to meeting the residents of Ward 3 as I campaign door to door this spring and summer. Their concerns about public safety, the Quincy public schools, our parks and playgrounds and the traffic issues are my concerns as well," Doherty said.

"However, there are many other less prominent issues that need to be addressed and I hope that they will share them with me as I make my way around the ward."

Doherty is a graduate of North Quincy High School and Quincy College. He and his wife, Judith, a registered nurse, and their two-year-old daughter, Kathryn, live at 206 Beale St.

The Ward 3 council seat is being vacated by Larry Chretien who is running for councillor-at large.

Cheney, State Delegation Planning Ahead For Summer Beach Patrols

City Council President Michael Cheney met this week with members of the city's State House delegation to discuss summertime patrols on Wollaston Beach by the State Police.

Cheney, who is serving as acting mayor while Mayor James Sheets is in Florida, met with Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Michael Bellotti and Rep. Stephen Tobin to talk about the patrols. They agreed that an early action plan is needed and plan to work with Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers to come up with a public enforcement plan for the summer.

Cheney said many people responded positively when they saw the State Police patrolling last summer.

"People in Wollaston, North Quincy and the Merrymount section of the city took great comfort to see the highly visible State Police cruisers last year and we hope to repeat and enhance the level of protection this summer," he said.

Cheney added that he plans to contact Police Chief Francis Mullen in an effort to have the police department cooperate with the State Police.

"The Quincy Police Department did an outstanding job last summer in cooperation with the State Police," he said.

Cheney said Mullen ordered a special operations unit and motorcycle officers to the neighborhood streets in Wollaston.

"The chief's plan worked last year," he said. "If we plan far enough ahead, it will work again this year."

State and local police will announce their schedules of planned patrols sometime next month.

Giving Up Council Seat

Phelan Leaves Door Open On Political Future

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Outgoing Ward 5 City Councillor Charles Phelan is unsure of his political future, but he has not ruled out another run for office in the days to come.

"Who knows? I guess you never say never," he said. "But it's going to be a long time before I ever decide to run again."

Phelan, 37, formally announced at Monday night's City Council meeting that he will not seek re-election to a fifth term in the fall. He cited both business and personal reasons for his decision.

"It's pretty much a business decision," he said. "My work schedule has increased dramatically."

Phelan, who works for Burke Distributing Corp. in Avon, was promoted last April to the position of MIS (Manager of Information Systems) director at the company. His added job responsibilities will not allow him to properly concentrate on Ward 5 issues, he said, and "it wouldn't be fair" to his constituents if he ran for another term.

Phelan, who holds a bachelor's degree from Northeastern University in Boston, added that he may also seek to further his education for the benefit of his career. In addition, he said he wants to start a family with his wife Michelle Lydon, director of the Lydon Funeral Home in Wollaston whom he married last year.

Phelan was first elected to the council in 1987 and served as council president from 1992 to 1993. He listed among the Ward 5 projects he and his fellow councillors made possible that he is most proud of a four-classroom addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School and the planned reopening this fall of the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School, the current reconstruction in Wollaston Center and upcoming renovations on The Strand near Quincy Shore Drive which should begin this spring.

Other projects that Phelan said he was proud to support include the opening of the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center in Ward 4 and current renovations at the Parker Elementary School in Ward 6.

Reflecting on his council career, Phelan said he has become more appreciative of those involved in politics since he was first elected.

"I've enjoyed working on the City Council," he said. "My respect for those in public life has grown since I joined. My respect for my colleagues grew immensely."

Several times during his announcement, emotion nearly overtook him, and he had to pause and clear his throat before continuing.

"I didn't think I was going to do this," said a smiling Phelan, his eyes watering. "I had this speech prepared."

Phelan also took time to thank the administrations of the two mayors he has served under--Francis McCauley and James Sheets--as well as his colleagues, a number of city officials and people who have worked in the City Council Office at City Hall.

Among those in the audience at Monday night's meeting were Phelan's wife and his parents, Charles Phelan Sr. and Marie Phelan Phelan's colleagues on the council were unanimous in their praise for him. Council President Michael Cheney praised Phelan for his thoughtfulness toward the Ward 5 residents.

"Rather than short-change the residents of Ward 5 for one minute, you decided to give up that (council) position," said Cheney. "And that's not an easy thing to do.

"You served with great distinction on the City Council, and even before that, you served with great distinction in the community. I'd like to offer my personal thanks to you."

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio agreed.

"Once again, you've shown us a tremendous amount of class tonight," he told Phelan.

Phelan was also complimented on his council career later in the evening by his elementary school principal, School Supt. Eugene Creedon who was appearing before the council on an unrelated matter.

After the meeting, others offered their tributes to Phelan.

"It has been an honor to serve with Chuck Phelan these past eight years," said Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill. "We came into the council together, and I always found Councillor Phelan to be both honest and up-front in his beliefs and a true representative of his constituents."

And Clerk of Committees Jeanne Reardon, who is normally shy around reporters, went out of her way to make a statement to The Quincy Sun.

"If you ever quote me (about anything)," she said, "quote me as saying Chuck Phelan was an excellent councillor."

Library Addition Estimate Climbs To $13.5 Million

A 40,000-square-foot addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library will cost $13.5 million according to the library's director, an increase of $4.5 million from its original estimate.

When the project was first unveiled earlier this year, city officials estimated the addition would cost $9 million. However, the estimate has increased sharply due to unexpected demolition work and other site work, said Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

Specifically, the breakdown in unforeseen costs is:

•$1 million in demolition and other site work.

•$1.9 million to make new wing meet access standards required by the federal Americans with Disabilities Act.

•$300,000 higher repair costs for water leaks and other damage in existing buildings.

•$1 million fee for the project's architectural firm, Childs, Bertman and Tsekcares (CBT) of Boston.

Under the original $9 million pricetag, the city would have paid about $5 million. The balance would come from a $3 million state library construction grant and a $1 million public fundraising drive.

With a $13.5 million cost, the city's share would probably rise to as much as $8.3 million. The library would qualify for a larger state grant--$4.2 million. The library trustee's fundraising drive would retain the $1 million goal.

McLaughlin said she will seek additional state and federal grants.

The new cost was included in a grant application that library trustees filed late last week with the Massachusetts Library Commission.

Some city councillors expressed reservations about bonding the project at the higher pricetag. Money for the project needs City Council approval.

Mayor James Sheets, who has been in Florida attending the U.S. Conference of Mayors Leadership Conference, was unavailable for comment. He is expected to return to Quincy Saturday.

Quincy 2000 Makes First Five Loans

Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation for economic development, has awarded its first five loans from its $5.6 million Loan Pool.

The five loans, which total $255,000, are for existing downtown businesses and new businesses in Quincy.

Two established businesses, Infinity Books and Barnaby's Restaurant, received loans. The others went to new businesses: Presidential Camera of Quincy Center and Ginger Betty's in North Quincy, a camera shop and custom gingerbread house bakery respectively which both graduated from the Quincy 2000 Incubation Program, and Hancock Convenience, a traditional convenience store which will open in Quincy Center.

The Quincy 2000 Loan Pool provides loans in the range of $5,000 to $150,000 for Quincy businesses. Quincy 2000 President and CEO Charles D'Aprix hailed the pool as a highly positive development in Quincy and for Quincy 2000.

"The Quincy 2000 Loan Pool is putting much-needed money in the hands of small business," said D'Aprix. "Quincy 2000 is committed to strengthening our businesses here in Quincy.

He'd Drop The Bomb Again

Nearly 50 years later, the man who dropped the second atomic bomb on Japan and participated in the first, harbors no apparent regrets.

"I would do it again—under the same circumstance," says General Charles W. Sweeney USAF (Ret.) who lives in Milton.

SWEENEY

Although there are critics today, you would have a hard time trying to find a veteran of the Pacific war who doesn't feel the same way Sweeney does. Including me.

Anyone out there in August, 1945 when the A-bombs were dropped three days apart on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, looked on them as a military means to end the fighting so they could get home alive and on with their lives.

Sweeney, who has said he would do it again, said it again at a recent student assembly at Bourne High School.

A panel, comprising veterans of World War II, included Quincy Sun photographer Robert Noble, and John Vecchiola, both of Quincy.

NOBLE

VECCHIOLA

Noble, past commander of the Massachusetts American Ex-Prisoners of War, was an Army infantry corporal captured by German soldiers in early 1945 and held 120 days until freed by a British armored division.

Vecchiola, an Army Air Force sergeant, was captured in December, 1944 when his B-17 was shot down over Germany. He escaped in April, 1945 and managed to elude the Germans until the European war's end.

As veterans, both Noble and Vecchiola appreciate how Sweeney feels about the bomb. No argument from them over whether it should have been dropped.

Sweeney feels the two bombs were justified because they saved thousands of American lives that would have been lost in invasion of the Japanese mainland. And, he notes, Japanese casualties would have been heavy, too.

Sweeney, the only pilot to fly in both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki missions, points to the fierce fighting and tremendous losses in the invasions of Iwo Jima and Okinawa as evidence of the heavy toll an invasion of Japan itself would have taken.

Throughout the war, the Japanese were fanatic about fighting to the death and even more so at Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Iwo Jima, just five miles long and only two and a half miles wide at its widest point, is about 600 miles south of Japan. Its capture would give Americans a strategic air base to bomb Japan from.

The invasion of the island in February, 1945 was one of the bloodiest and most costly battles of World War II. The price for taking that tiny piece of volcanic real estate came high: 21,000 U.S. casualties—4,500 killed.

Among those to give his life was Marine Pfc. William R. Caddy of Quincy, who pounded on and smothered a thrown Japanese hand grenade to save the lives of his buddies. He was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously for his heroism. The William R. Caddy Detachment, Marine Corps. League in Quincy, was named in his honor in 1946.

Next came the battle for Okinawa, another piece of strategic real estate in the Ryukyus, less than 400 miles from Japan.

The invasion was launched in April, 1945 and the fighting continued through June. That price came high, too. Overall, the Ryukyus-Okinawa invasion cost the lives of 12,500 Americans plus 36,600 other casualties. The Japanese paid an ever higher price: 110,000 killed and 7,400 captured.

I was on the destroyer USS Cogswell, which with other destroyers, was assigned to radar picket duty between Okinawa and Japan.

It was our job to pick up on radar Japanese planes coming from Japan to attack our forces on Okinawa where the fighting was still raging. We would then alert our forces.

Suicide planes and one-man rocket missiles from Japan started diving on the destroyers trying to knock out the radar early warning network.

A number of destroyers were hit. One of them was the William D. Porter, our picket partner. A suicide came down out of the sky June 10. The pilot had to pick one of us. He picked the Porter and sank it.

The Japanese knew that Okinawa was the last stepping stone to their mainland.

Well, when news of the atomic bomb—with all of its awesome power—reached us after it was dropped on Hiroshima Aug. 6, everyone on the Cogswell was impressed to say the least. No one thought it shouldn't have been dropped. We were tired of the war and wanted to go home. That feeling was shared by everyone in the fleet.

Three days later, Sweeney dropped the second bomb on Nagasaki. There was no objection on our part to that one either. It brought the war, finally, to an end.

Before the formal surrender was signed, I was in a scouting party that landed at Yokosuka, south of Tokyo.

There we found caves and in them, suicide speed boats with—we were astonished—1935 or 1936 Chevrolet engines.

The Japanese planned to load these boats up with explosives and ram U.S. ships in the invasion which never took place, thanks to the atomic bombs.

It would have been a costly invasion we thought as we looked the suicide boats over. And wondered what they could have done to destroyers with hulls so thin they are affectionately nicknamed "tin cans."

The Cogswell was anchored just a few yards away when the Japanese formally surrendered to General Douglas MacArthur aboard the battleship USS Missouri, Sept. 2.

We wondered if there had been an invasion, would we have been alive and there that historic day.

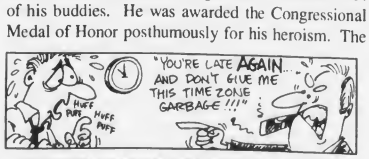
Anyone who was out there during the fighting in the Pacific would share General Sweeney's feelings about the atomic bomb being dropped to end that war.

Critics argue they were inhumane and shouldn't have been dropped. But were they out there?

You know, some of those critics wouldn't be around today to criticize if there had been an invasion. Their fathers-to-be could have been among those who didn't come back.

And I wonder if they ever think about the families of all the sailors still entombed in sunken battleships in Pearl Harbor.

Those families, I think, probably would agree with Sweeney and other veterans of the Pacific war that the bombs were justified--under those circumstances--nearly a half-century ago.



Worldwide time zones were established in 1884.

Scenes From Yesterday

IN 1913 THIS was a boarding house for men who worked in the numerous factories in the Norfolk Downs area. In this old photo-postcard view the house was on the corner of Hancock Street and Glover Avenue. Later it was moved to the lot behind it when the Sacred Heart Church was built on this site. Then, the house served as the parish house until the present stone rectory was built. At that time, the house was moved again to it's present location across the street on the opposite corner of Pierce Street. To the left of the porch can bee seen some of the Derringer's old greenhouses which were the site of the present Sacred Heart School.

Time To Vote For Shaw's Project

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I've just seen a survey that Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers has been circulating in some parts of the area about the supermarke. that Shaw's wants to build on Hancock Street in Wollaston. I can't figure out what he was trying to do.

This project has been around for three years, longer than any other project in the history of the city. Why, at the very last minute, is the good councillor asking questions that he should have been asking several years ago?

From what I can see, the Shaw's people have been remarkably sensitive to the community and have come up with a traffic and safety program that will make the improvements in Mr. Ayers' ward on Hancock Street that are long overdue. Think about it. When was the last time anyone was willing to spend $1 million to improve our city?

Rather than walking around passing out survey forms, it would have been much better for the councillor to be working closely with Shaw's. From what I've read in the newspaper, the city's traffic engineer has established what Shaw's must do to make the traffic work right.

Where was Mr. Ayers during all this time?

It's time to get rid of the terrible old buildings at the Boston Gear Works, put that property back on the tax rolls, and bring some jobs to neighborhood people. And it's time to solve the traffic problems on Hancock Street by getting Shaw's to pay the bill. And it's time for the City Council--including Bruce Ayers--to vote for the project.

Support For Proposed Shaw's Supermarket

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We, the Grogans of Wollaston, support and welcome Shaw's to our neighborhood. It would help create jobs and improve the value of the property to help keep taxes down. We can't please all, but must work together and use common sense.

The jobs Shaw's would provide would help young people to start out in life with a positive idea. They would help those just off welfare, and help senior citizens and handicapped people, who are on tight budgets.

As far as traffic problems go, drive slow, remove left turn on red and Shaw's said it would improve road and traffic routes. They have been overgenerous in what they say they'll do and they will guarantee it. I say let's let them do it.

Hasty Regulatory Reform Could Spell Disaster For Public Health

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We are concerned that regulatory reform measures in Congress, such as H.R. 9, are being pushed through the U.S. House of Representatives at an alarming speed with little in the way of a truly open public debate.

Streamlining government is important. But hasty regulatory reform without proper reflection could spell disaster for public health and safety standards that affect millions of Americans.

We urge congressional leaders to seek input from the medical community and the public. For example, we believe that Congress should look at ways to speed up the drug and medical device approval process as long as public health and safety is not compromised. And we believe that it is appropriate to consider the cost benefits of a regulation, as is already required by the law. But we also believe that excessive, complex risk assessment requirements contained in bills like H.R. 9 are so bureaucratic as to be contrary to the deregulatory intent of Contract with America, and out of line with what Americans would support as appropriate action.

In some areas, such as tobacco control, we need more regulation, not less. Tobacco use kills more than 400,000 Americans each year and adds an estimated $65 billion to our annual health care bill. Yet tobacco companies market and promote their deadly and addictive products to children, and no federal agency has stepped in to stop it. It is inconsistent for the Congress to emphasize policy that supports responsibility, family values and the protection of children and to ignore tobacco, a product that devastates our families and children through addiction, disease and death.

We urge Congress to work on this issue in a bipartisan way, to set aside special interests and to listen to the voices and concerns of the American people. Let's take a hard look at regulatory reform, but not at the expense of public health.

Marie's Kitchen

By MARIE J. D'OLIMPIO

Scalloped Casserole

I'm almost never pleased with scallops when I eat out. Casseroles are either too greasy for my taste or too dry. This recipe calls for a cream sauce that you trickle down through the baking pan before baking. The following recipe serves 4.

SCALLOPED CASSEROLE
1 and a half pounds scallops (preferably the large ones) seasoned bread crumbs(enough to bread the scallops) juice of half lemon
2 tablespoons margerine
1 1/2 cups milk
2 to 3 tablespoons flour
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1/4 cup cooking sherry
salt and pepper to taste

The first step is to add the lemon juice to the bread crumbs and blend. Bread all of the scallops and set aside.

Next, make a cream sauce by melting the margerine, and adding the flour, milk salt, pepper and sherry. Cook with whisk until thickened.

Set aside.

In a greased baking casserole dish, layer the breaded scallops alternately with a little cream sauce and the shredded cheese. Do this until all scallops are used and then at the last minute, pour all of the cream sauce through the dish.. Top it with extra cheddar.

Bake in a 350 preheated degree oven covered for about 15 minutes and then uncovered until bubbly. Try not to overcook this dish as the scallops can get tough. The night I cooked this, our daughter Rita (who I call a connoisseur on seafood) ate with us and raved . I served it hot over white rice sprinkled with parmesan cheese., but it will go wonderfully with anything.

Going Strong After 20 Years

Phase II Jewelry Has Grown Along With Its Customers

PHASE II JEWELRY and Gifts owner Deanna Gazarian (left) and her sister Karney Eldridge say their business has grown along with their customers. The shop, which has been located at 1361 Hancock St. in Quincy Center for 20 years, also sells dolls, Quincy collectibles and other items.

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

In their 20 years of servicing the Quincy area, Deanna Gazarian, her sister Karney Eldridge and the rest of the staff at Phase II Jewelry and Gifts, 1361 Hancock St., have seen their business grow through their customers.

"The same people who came in and bought $1 earrings as children are now coming back to buy 14-karat gold chains and engagement rings," she said with a smile.

The real enjoyment which Gazarian derives from her work is being able to help customers find good jewelry and gifts for a good price and developing an enduring relationship with them.

"I enjoy being able to help customers find what they want and seeing them come back in year after year," she said.

During her 20 year-tenure in the jewelry business, Gazarian said she has developed a close-knit relationship with her customers.

"It's very important for me to have a close relationship with my customers. To me, they're not just customers, they're friends," she said.

A member of the Board of Directors of the Quincy Center and Professional Association for the past few years, Gazarian is currently the First Vice President of the organization.

Because of her determined efforts in promoting her business, Gazarian was named the association's "Member of the Year" last year.

Gazarian said she has kept a positive relationship with her customers by avoiding sales pitches and adhering to a "no frills" approach to business.

"There's no sales pitches here," she said. "We offer a homey atmosphere with no sales pressure."

Besides selling a wide variety of jewelry, Phase II Jewelry and Gifts also carries an assortment of dolls and Quincy collectable items.

Lizzie High Dolls, Boyds Bears, Annalee Dolls and Muffy VanderBears are just a few of the dolls which Phase II Jewelry and Gifts sells which had not been selling steadily until recently.

"We've had them for a while but they didn't start selling big until now," she said.

Besides selling collectable dolls, Phase II Jewelry and Gifts also owns the exclusive rights to Quincy collectibles and is the exclusive seller of the Quincy afghan rug.

Gazarian said a portion of each afghan rug sale is donated to the company's exclusive Quincy Historic Fund which benefits one of the city's historic sites.

For customers who might be strapped financially, Phase II Jewelry and Gifts offers a layaway policy.

"We accommodate the special needs of our customers with our convenient layaway policy," she said.

While they are not as big as some of the other big-name jewelry chains, Gazarian said they are not incapable of servicing their customers.

"We're a small store, but we carry a lot of merchandise. Plus, we can always get our customers any jewelry through our special order policy" she said.

"No job is too big for our special order. We can order anything, whatever the customer wants," she said.

Even though she has experienced a great deal of success in the jewelry business, Gazarian said it is her success in developing a close-knit, stable family environment which brings her the most personal fulfillment.

"My family life is my biggest success," she said. "Juggling home and work was the most difficult part of my job. But, my family is my first priority," the mother of three said.

Phase II Jewelry and Gifts, 472-6618, is located next to Quincy Center Plaza in the heart of Quincy Center. They are open Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and evenings by appointment only.

Deanna Gazarian of Phase II, first vice president of the QCBPA, said proceeds will help finance entertainment for the 25th annual Sidewalk Festival which will be held in July.

The QCBPA is a non-profit, 150-member organization working toward promoting business and shopping as well as improving the downtown area.

Businesses interested in joining the association may contact the QCBPA office at 1416 Hancock St. or by calling 471-3232.

2 Residents To Become Eagle Scouts Sunday

Two Quincy residents will be awarded the rank of Eagle Scout during the Troop 6 Eagle Scout Awards Ceremony Sunday at 2 p.m. at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

They are: Kevin Ryan Jr., 16, a sophomore at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree and Jay Renzi III, 18, a senior at North Quincy High School.

The rank of Eagle Scout is bestowed upon a scout after he has completed a minimum of 21 badges, one of which must be his Service Project Badge.

For his service project, Ryan chose the refurbishing of LaBreque Park in Houghs Neck. The project included the removal and replacement of bleachers, scraping and repainting of swingsets, restoration of an on-site memorial and planting of flowers.

From left are Jay Renzi III, an 18-year-old North Quincy High School senior and Kevin Ryan Jr., 16, a sophomore at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree.

ther bid. "We are putting together an organization," he said.

Bruce Ayers may have a challenger in Ward 6. Joseph Newton of Standish Rd. in Squantum is being mentioned but so far has made no official move toward a run.

Ward 1's Peter Kolson is the only incumbent at the present time not to have an official or potential opponent.

Chretien's decision to run at-large sets the stage for a fight for the three seats now held by Council President Michael Cheney, Timothy Cahill and Joseph LaRaia, all of whom are seeking re-election.

Three others--former School Committee member Mary Collins, community activist Thomas Galvin and Charles McIntyre, son of former Mayor and Sen. James McIntyre--have expressed an interest in running at-large but have not made a final decision.

On the School Committee side, incumbent Linda Stice is running for re-election to her four-year seat. Incumbent Sean Barry is also up for re-election but has the option of running for a two-year seat or a four-year seat.

Barry, unlike fellow school board members, currently holds a two-year seat because he was named to the committee by a joint convention of City Council and School Committee. The convention convened in order to break a deadlock between Barry and Christine Cedrone, his opponent in the November 1993 election.

At press time, Barry would not comment on which way he plans to run.

"I'm a candidate for re-election to the Quincy School Committee," he said. "That's all I'm saying."

Cedrone has already announced her candidacy for a four-year seat on the committee.

Former Mayor, City Councillor and School Committee member Francis McCauley is also pondering a run, but said Tuesday it would definitely be for the two-year seat.

"I haven't made a final decision yet," said McCauley. "But I would not be running for the four-year seat under any circumstances. A two-year term, at my stage in life (age 65), is a way to get back in. Then I'd have to decide whether to run for a four-year term after that."

Nomination papers for all races will be made available May 1. Candidates must return them to City Hall by July 11.

$25M Bridge Overhaul

especially during inclement weather.

•Updating the lifting mechanism and electric motors to accommodate the heavier decking and open the bridge quicker.

•Building a median strip along three-quarters of the bridge span to prevent cross over auto accidents.

•Updating traffic lights and signalization.

•Replacing crumbling concrete and providing other aesthetic improvements.

In addition, a new barrier system will be implemented. One option for the new system, which will replace the swinging gates, is a netting system similar to those used to catch planes on aircraft carriers.

The bridge will also be made earthquake proof. "It isn't now," Mariano said. "They're going to strengthen it."

Mariano said provisions are also in place to accommodate pleasure craft traffic through the bridge. He said the Coast Guard has agreed to work around the construction schedule.

"It looks like the bridge will be closed (to all water traffic) at least one week, maybe two weeks. The contractor will try to do that late into the first construction season, in October or November.

"The goal is to have as little impact on pleasure crafts as possible. They'll be able to get through the other times," Mariano said.

A state-funded project, Mariano said the state may seek federal government reimbursement.

Quincy Hospital Performs First Cardiac Catheterization

Mary Burns, a lifelong resident of Quincy, recently became the first patient to receive a cardiac catheterization in Quincy Hospital's newly-opened Cardiac Catheterization Lab.

The lab was developed as a cooperative venture between Quincy Hospital and Boston University Medical Center Hospital (BUMCH) and was designed to improve access to vital cardiac diagnostic procedures for people living south of Boston.

Burns became the first patient to benefit from the new technology at Quincy Hospital. Her cardiologist Dr. Lisa Antonelli of Cohasset, with Comprehensive Cardiac Care, recommended a cardiac catheterization after an examination indicated there may be a problem. Cardiac cathis help determine the location and extent of blockages in the arteries that supply the heart with blood.

Antonelli and Dr. Neil Berman of Needham, medical director of the lab and a cardiologist with Heart Care Medical Center, together with a team of highly skilled nurses and radiology technicians, performed the cardiac cath. During the procedure, tiny tubes, called catheters, were inserted in the patient's legs and then passed through the blood vessels into a coronary artery. Dye was then injected which allowed the physicians to monitor the action on an x-ray monitor.

Later, the physicians reviewed the x-ray pictures to determine the best course of treatment and Antonelli met with her patient to discuss her recommendations for medication changes.

Both the doctor and patient felt the procedure was a success.

The Cardiac Cath Lab also serves as a Special Procedures Suite to perform angiograms - a critical component in the detection and treatment of heart disease. Angiograms, along with cardiac catheterizations, help physicians detect blockages in the arteries supplying blood to the heart and other parts of the body.

According to Dr. Berman, "During our first year of operation, more than 200 patients are expected to benefit from the catheterization service and approximately 150 patients are expected for angiograms."

Education: The Best Defense Against Tobacco Addiction

The Journal of the American Medical Association reports that 3 million American children under the age of 18 consume 947 million packs of cigarettes and 26 million containers of smokeless tobacco yearly.

These tobacco products account for annual sales of $1.26 billion. Approximately 3 percent of the tobacco industry's profit (221 million in 1988) are derived directly from the sale of cigarettes to youth under 18.

How can we prevent children from smoking? By educating them:

•Instill the value of making one's own decisions and not submitting to peer pressure.

•Explain all the physical effects smoking has on the body, especially its addictive qualities.

•Point out the cosmetic problems, such as yellow teeth and fingers.

•Discuss how food tastes are altered.

•Express how clothes, hair, and skin smell.

•Describe the hazards of fire, burns on clothing and furniture.

•Emphasize the expense.

•Explain the negative effect it may have had with their athletic performance.

For educational materials on the hazards of youth smoking and for cessation programs, call the Quincy Health Department's Tobacco Control Program at 376-1161 or 1162

TREATMENT OPTIONS FOR VARICOSE VEINS

Varicose veins are one familiar part of the aging process that many of us could do without. Their unsightly appearance adds insult to the injury of the pain and swelling that often accompany them. They can range from barely noticeable to severe, with ulceration and bleeding. Fortunately, treatment options have improved in recent years. One increasingly popular technique is known as "sclerotherapy," in which troublesome veins are injected with an agent that causes them to shrink. The procedure is generally done in the doctor's office, with patients usually able to resume normal routines immediately after. Special stockings may be prescribed to help compress veins temporarily following a series of injections.

P.S. Age isn't the only factor in varicose veins. Other conditions, such as pregnancy, can cause them to form.

As we age, we all suffer changes to the body which surprise us. However, many conditions can actually be improved with treatment. Our office, staffed by caring professionals, offers a pleasant environment for medical care. At COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE, located at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and myself offer complete medical care with a focus on treating heart disease. SPINAL COLUMN

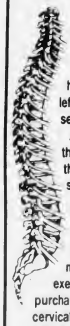
By Dr. Barry Freedman, M.S., D.C.

Case Study



After days of spending hours on the phone at the public relations firm where she worked, a 31 year old woman found she was unable to move her head, especially to the right. She called Dr. Freedman and explained that she had spent many hours with the phone resting between her left shoulder and her chin and was now suffering from a severe neckache.

After consultation and examination, Dr. Freedman found that she had muscle spasms across her trapezius muscle, the muscle that runs down the neck and fans out along the shoulder blade and back. He also determined that the woman was experiencing a loss of sensation in her left arm.

Dr. Freedman's treatment included ultrasound, electric muscle stimulation, and cervical spine (neck) adjustments. The woman was instructed to perform isometric exercises to strengthen her neck muscles. She was told to purchase a telephone headset for work to avoid further injury. A cervical pillow was also recommended.

After a few additional visits to Dr. Freedman's office, and following the doctor's advice, the woman's symptoms were completely alleviated with no recurrence.

Golfer Arnold Palmer "Thinks Green" For Better Health!

(NAPS)—St. Patrick's Day is the traditional time to "think green," but thousands of health enthusiasts around the world such as golf legend Arnold Palmer are apparently able to enjoy the spirit of the holiday year-round when they use a drink called "Green Magma."

Since being introduced by friends to the nutritional benefits of the powdered juice made from young green barley plants in 1983, Palmer and his entire family have become fans of Green Magma.

"With my crazy schedule of travel, golf and corporate outings, I can't imagine living without Green Magma," Palmer says. "I think it's given me more drive and energy than I had 20 years ago."

Green Magma is also endorsed by bodybuilder David Hawk, holder of Mr. USA and Mr. Universe titles; world-class triathlete and mother Erin Baker, winner of the 1994 Powerman in Zofingen, Switzerland; and Olympic-medalist Rod Dixon, selected by Runner's World magazine as the "World's Most Versatile Athlete."

And some experts say the unique supplement could be the best choice for the 80 percent of other Americans who don't get their daily servings of vegetables as recommended for good health by the USDA and National Cancer Institute.

That's one reason Dennis McCarthy, Green Magma drinker and owner of Chicago's Montavern saloon in the heart of the nation's St. Patrick's Day headquarters, has jumped on the bandwagon.

McCarthy recently created a hip non-alcoholic drink called the "Green Magma Maximizer" to serve patrons at his trend-setting, century-old establishment. When the powdered juice is stirred with chilled mineral water, it makes a "chlorophyll cocktail" that's fast become a popular and nutritious alternative to his usual bar fare.

"The drink appeals to the health-conscious because it's packed with vitamins, minerals, proteins and live enzymes," he says. "It also helps with digestion and is great for rebuilding red blood cells in the body."

Golf legend Arnold Palmer has been drinking green barley juice since 1983.

On the West Coast, chef Victor Forsythe at Natures Express Natural Food Market and Cafe in Palm Springs is serving up his own colorful St. Patrick's concoction, called the "Green Magma Blaster," for a great tasting health drink that blends Green Magma with a banana and other ingredients.

Green Magma was developed by Dr. Yoshihide Hagiwara, M.D., an award-winning research pharmacologist who owned one of Japan's largest pharmaceutical companies before becoming aware of the problems and harmful side-effects caused by many chemicals used in modern medicine.

Vowing to dedicate his skills to finding the "perfect natural food," Dr. Hagiwara began an extensive 30-year search which ended with the discovery that juice made from young barley offered the most active ingredients of any of the nearly 200 different green leafy plants, herbs and grasses to be analyzed.

He was impressed to learn barley leaves contained more than 20 different enzymes such as catalase, superoxide dismutase (SOD), transhydrogenase, peroxidase and fatty acid oxidase—fancy scientific names for hard-working proteins that act as catalysts to break down food into elements the body can use for energy and to perform most of its functions.

SOD, in particular, has been shown to work in conjunction with catalase to act as an antioxidant defense against "free radicals," unstable molecules that are believed to attack and destroy the body's cells and tissue, including the synovial fluid needed to lubricate joints and prevent arthritis.

Dr. Hagiwara was also excited to find young barley grass contained exactly what he originally sought: a natural, whole food with the perfect balance of beta-carotene (which the body converts into Vitamin A), 19 amino acids, proteins, trace minerals, antioxidant vitamins C and E, and B1, B2, B3 and B6.

More apparent was the fact barley was rich in chlorophyll, the green pigment in plants which studies indicate has the ability to kill germs, control infection, neutralize bad breath and cleanse the body of intestinal toxins.

After confirming barley's potential, the renowned scientist spent another five years perfecting an incredible extraction and low temperature spray-drying process. This allowed him to stabilize nutrients and retain active, live enzymes that are vital to each step of the proper functioning of the body's digestive system.

With his green tea-like tasting supplement, Dr. Hagiwara offers a raw food grown without pesticides or chemical fertilizers that our bodies can easily assimilate in about 20 minutes to reverse the damage caused by modern manufacturing techniques which destroy much of the nutritional value and live enzymes in ingredient through refining, canning, freezing and heating.

It's part of overall poor eating habits that medical experts say is largely responsible for diseases such as cancer, heart disease and arthritis.

The barley grass in Green Magma takes individuals back to a simpler time when mankind depended on the plant kingdom, not fast food restaurants, for the majority of its diet.

Green Magma is available at health food stores and General Nutrition Centers nationwide. It can also be ordered in powdered or tablet form (a 5.3-oz.-sized jar with 50 servings is $17.82) through the Vitamin Shoppe, a discount direct-mail company, by calling 1-800-223-1216.

Acupuncture And Arthritis

By DANIEL KARP
Licensed Acupuncturist

Arthritis is a degenerative disease of the joints and their surrounding tissues. Depending on the type of arthritis, there may be pain, restricted movement, swelling, inflammation, loss of strength, or joint deterioration.

Acupuncture has successfully treated thousands of cases of arthritis, stopping pain, restoring flexibility, and halting the degeneration in the joint. Many people who have not responded to medication and physical therapy achieve remarkable success with acupuncture. Based upon my excellent results in these cases, I suggest a consultation whenever there is a diagnosis of arthritis or other similar joint disorders (bursitis, tendinitis, rheumatism, spondylitis).

How does acupuncture treat arthritis? To answer this question, we must understand what causes arthritis. Essentially, impaired circulation in and around a joint starts the arthritic disease process. As the circulation of blood, lymph, and joint fluids decreases, the cells in the area begin to degenerate, due both to a lack of nourishment and to buildup of waste products (cellular metabolites).

As circulation breaks down further, inflammation and degeneration in the joint begin. Unchecked, this process often continues until the pain is chronic and severe and movement is seriously impaired.

Acupuncture successfully treats arthritis through its well-known ability to stimulate and increase circulation. Using tiny stainless steel needles, electrical stimulation, and heat therapy, treatment is applied to the key circulatory centers in and around the joint. Repeated treatment of these areas, couple with similar techniques designed to increase circulation through the system as a whole, regenerates the blood vessels and tissues in and around the joint, allowing them to return to normal. After a series of treatments, symptoms such as pain and stiffness are brought under control, and in many cases are permanently cured.

I believe acupuncture to be the most effective treatment for arthritis today. If you need help with your arthritis, call me at 471-5577 and make and appointment for a free consultation. I look forward to helping you get better!

Manganaro Sparkles In Final Game

Red Raiders Fall Short, Ousted From Tourney

By KERRY BYRNE

It was only a matter of time before the roof caved in for the North Quincy High hockey team in their 4-3 loss to Billerica Saturday at Boston College's Conte Forum.

The Red Raiders (12-8-1) led the Indians (12-7-2) for all but the final five minutes. They fended off heavy pressure throughout before finally giving up two late goals - goals which eliminated them from the Division I hockey tournament in the preliminary round.

"That's the feeling I had along the bench," said Red Raider coach Tom Benson. "The feeling that it was just a matter of time before they snuck a goal in."

NQ's senior goaltender Mike Manganaro had a career game, knocking away 31 shots, before the Indians were able to record the decisive scores.

"They were just a little quicker than we were. They were in shape, skated well, and put a lot of pressure on us," said Benson of the team that finished tied atop the tough Merrimack Valley Conference with a record of 10-1-1.

The Billerica win avenged a 5-2 loss to North Quincy last year in the Division 1 tournament.

The Raiders made the most of their opportunities early on, scoring on their first two shots to take a 2-0 lead at the 1:53 mark of the first period.

Senior A.J. Carthas netted the first goal at :29 when he broke in alone, courtesy of a pass from Dan Stone, and backhanded the puck past netminder Scott Yavarow. Senior Josh Wingate scored the first of his two when he banged in a rebound from two feet away. Sophomore Eric Wood and senior Jim Kelly assisted.

The Indians got one back midway through first when GT Keenan recorded an unassisted tally. Wingate gave NQ a 3-1 lead at 11:00 of the second when he picked up a puck that ricocheted off the boards behind the Billerica netted and banked it off Yavarow's legs. Tim Zaniboni was credited with the assist.

With just 17 seconds left in the middle period Bob Rumley brought the Indians back to within one when he took a feed from Keenan from behind the cage. Rumley was standing alone in front of the net and Manganaro didn't have a chance.

Late in the game, after a contest full of brilliant saves, Manganaro let two shots by Bill Ranucci slip by him, and along with them, the game.

It was an unfitting end for the bulky senior netminder. "Mike played great. He was one of the best players on the ice and he kept it close for us," said Benson.

"But it seemed like they just kept coming. We'd get one minute in their zone and they'd come back with four minutes in our zone."

Manganaro repeatedly slammed the door on the Indian attackers. Midway through the first he showed lightning-quick reflexes as he pulled the puck out of the air with his glove to spoil one scoring bid.

Seconds later he stuffed Colby Weston twice after he fired back-to-back shots from point blank range. Rumley picked up the second rebound and he, too, was unable to slip the puck past Manganaro.

Five minutes later the goalie dove to his right and extended both pads to rob Mike Fell from in tight.

Midway through the second, he single-handedly broke up a two-on-none Billerica breakout.

Benson singled out several other seniors for their play in their final high school hockey game; among them Wingate, Carthas, Brendan O'Brien, Ralph DiMattia and Paul King. King and O'Brien, along with junior Tim Zaniboni, were playing at less than 100 percent due to injuries.

Seniors Chris Geary, Rob Callow and Dave Doherty also laced the skates for the final time.

Competes In Regionals Saturday

Erin Croke State Elks Free Throw Champion

North Quincy's Erin Croke recently won the state title in the girls 8- and 9-year-old division of the Elks National Free Throw Contest.

This weekend she will compete in Springfield, Mass. against other winners from the New England states for the right to represent the region at the National Championship in Indianapolis.

Croke, a fourth-grader at Sacred Heart School in North Quincy, is the only Quincy champion to become state champion in 15 years. She advanced through two rounds of state-wide competition which began in Quincy in December. She won the local competition which was sponsored by Elks Lodge #943 in Quincy. The Quincy Recreation Department supervised the competition.

ERIN CROKE

She then knocked off six competitors in the Circle District Championship held in Marshfield before eliminating nine other contestants at the State Championship held in Lowell.

In the first round of the States Croke went 10 for 10 from the line on the way to hitting 21 of 25 shots which gave her the best percentage among girls in three different age groups.

Croke's parents, Ann and Bob, will accompany her to Springfield for the two-day New England Championship event. The State Lodge of Elks will cover the expenses. Erin has an older brother, Billy, and younger sister, Aileen.

The Elks National Hoop Shoot has over 3.4 million contestants in three age groups from all 50 states. Each youngster is scored on 25 free throws. Five-shot tie breakers are used if needed.

The local Hoop Shoot coordinator for the Quincy Lodge of Elks is Ed Miller, former head boys coach at North Quincy High and now Athletic Director in Marshfield.

Bantam C's Top Woburn, Capture State Title

Quincy captured the state Bantam C title with a 4-2 win over Woburn Sunday at Barnstable's Kennedy Rink.

Paul McCarthy, Owen Nestor, Josh Silverman and Matt Allen were the goal scorers for the championship club. Setting up the tallies were Joe Valantini (2), Pat Coughlin and McCarthy.

Woburn pulled their goaltender with 1:06 remaining but were unable to knot the score. Allen's empty netter iced the contest.

John Sullivan was a stalwart between the pipes with 27 saves.

The 4-2 outing was Quincy's closest in five games as they cruised easily to the state title.

In the semifinals they bested Barnstable, 4-1, behind two goals by McCarthy.

John Barron and Silverman netted one goal each. Assists were dished out by Valantini (2) and Joe Watson.

Sullivan again backboned the winning effort with 28 stops.

Quincy's Pat McGann suffered a broken wrist when he was slashed with two minutes to play in the final period.

Quincy opened the tourney with a 7-3 win over Hanover.

Despite the loss, Hanover goalie Marissa Hourihan was the star of the game as she chalked up a whopping 48 saves.

In the second round, Quincy hammered Barnstable (Two), 17-1.

Valantini's successful penalty shot with 6:30 left in the contest highlighted Quincy's lamp-lighting bonanza.

Barnstable was whistled for 24 minutes in penalties.

Quincy set up their visit to the semifinal round with a 9-2 win over Barnstable (Host).

Matt Struzik was the top playmaker in the cake walk.

Defenders Jake Fleming and Kevin Shaw were offensive weapons for the champions in the preliminary rounds. Fleming netted four goals and dished out two assists while Shaw lit the lamp seven times. Blueliners Betsy Stone and Sean Fitzgerald also set up a number of goals for Quincy.

The titlists were without the services of Mike Dempsey who was injured in December and has been unable to return.

Coaches Jim Dempsey, Nick Struzik and Richard Morrissey led Quincy to the state title.

Basketball

North Quincy Bounced By Framingham In Postseason Opener

By DAVE SOUTHWICK

For the second year in a row the North Quincy High boys' basketball team finished the regular season with a 13-7 record, a second place finish in the Old Colony League and a first-round home tournament game. And, for the second year in a row, they fell short in their postseason opener, this time losing to Framingham, 84-78, in overtime.

The Red Raiders had a big disadvantage even before the opening tap against the Flyers (11-10). With Eric Zimmerman and Brendan Welch out with ankle injuries, Jevon Glenn not suiting up and Jerry Fernandez playing with a bad right ankle, head coach Ted Stevenson knew he and his team were in for a long night.

"I thought we played pretty well," said a disappointed Stevenson after the game. "Our injuries hurt us quite a bit as we got tired down the stretch."

Brad Gray (27 points) and Matt Beston (25) had, by far, their best games of the year and showed steady leadership for the shorthanded Raiders throughout the contest.

Other scoring leaders for North were Mac Ngutter with nine and Tom Coughlin and Dave Scott with six each. Mike Doyle, Jesse Casler and Toby Odom also played, while 6-foot-4-inch freshman Brian Ross got his first taste of varsity action.

As was the case with most of North's home games during the regular season, they took the lead early, gaining an 18-7 advantage with five minutes left in the first half. The run was led by Gray and Beston who combined for 14 of the 18.

The Flyers showed they were better than their 10-10 record indicated when they outscored the Raiders 27-21 the rest of the way and cut the NQ lead to 39-35 at the break.

The fast break, a Framingham strength, came into play during that stretch, while North tried to play a control game.

"We were not comfortable [with the 11 point lead] because we had to play at their pace," said Stevenson. "This is what they wanted us to do and I tried to get the boys to hold the ball, but we couldn't."

Framingham began the second half with a 7-2 run to take their first lead, 42-41, since early in the first half. The lead changed hands six more times, with North holding a slight edge.

North had a chance to win with seven seconds left, but could not pull it off as regulation ended at 71-71.

Fatigue from the earlier fast break action appeared to catch up with the Red Raiders as they were outscored 13-7 in the extra period.

For the nine North Quincy seniors - Gray, Fernandez, Ngutter, Zimmerman, Casler, Welch, Scott, Odom and Steve MacDougall - it was a sad ending to a successful season; a season which included their second straight sweep of Quincy, a great match with Weymouth and an overtime thriller with Bridgewater-Raynham late in the season.

The Raiders bring back great leadership next year in Beston and Coughlin and a group of six underclassmen.

Stevenson wanted to thank assistant coaches Jim Rendle, Kipp Caldwell and Paul Fitzpatrick for an outstanding season.

Track

Pineo Second In Class B, Moves To New Englands

North Quincy's Jennifer Pineo came up with her best performance of the year - a shot put toss of 37 feet 11 inches - to take second place in the Mass. All-State track & field tournament at Harvard University.

With the effort she qualified for the New Englands which will take place Saturday at Harvard. It marks the sixth time in seven years that a North Quincy athlete has qualified for the New Englands.

Pineo's previous best throw was 35-7. Her eight points in the all-states helped lift her team to 15th overall, second among Old Colony League schools.

The NQ junior held the lead until Nicole Castonguay of Somerset, the Class B champ and owner of the state's best throw at 38-8, came up with a toss of 38-6 3/4 on her final attempt.

Red Raider coaches Geoff Hennessy and Maureen Roche were ecstatic. "A true champion performs best in the biggest competition, and Jen has done that for the last month," said Hennessy.

Roche, a former shot put state champ at Archbishop Williams, said, "We knew she was capable from her practices and her workouts. She just needed to relax and focus."

With the effort, Pineo moved to No. 2 on the all-time NQ list behind Michelle Millane ('82).

Phyllis Poon also represented the Red Raiders in the all-states. She competed in the 55-meter hurdles but did not advance past the trials.

The week before the all-states, in the Class B championships, Poon set a school record in the 60-yard hurdles with a time of 9.31 seconds as North placed 13th out of 40 teams.

The Class B's were notable for the number of North Quincy athletes who set personal records.

Suk Ng reached the semifinals and ran a personal best of 9.92 in the 60-yard hurdles.

In the 60-yard dash, sophomore Casey Ngo ran a personal best of 7.79 as she, too, advanced to the semifinals, placing fifth.

Freshman Jasmine Gonzales "ran a perfectly scripted run," according to Hennessy, as she topped her previous best in the 600 by three seconds with a time of 1:34.8. The youngster was seeded 19th coming in but placed 10th overall.

In the two mile, junior Kelly Duggan ran a "disappointing" 12:44.2, which placed her 15th. "She did everything we planned for the first mile," said Hennessy, "then things broke down. It was very stuffy and hot and some kids don't do well with that."

Hennessy said that Duggan's time would have qualified her for the all-states if she were in Class A or D, but that Class B was very strong this year.

Beside Pineo, Kristy Deptula and Wingsze Yuen threw well in the shot put.

A GROUP OF teens from the Spina Bifida Recreation and Sports Program of the Massachusetts Hospital School in Canton played a feisty game of basketball against members and staff from the South Shore YMCA. Pictured facing off are South Shore YMCA's Erik Abboud, left, and Mass. Hospital's Matthew Varin. The South Shore YMCA is accessible to the physically challenged.

Squirt B's Ease Past Southie

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt B's and top gun Bobby Donovan had the luck of the Irish as they cruised past South Boston, 9-2.

Donovan led the assault with three goals and an assist. Rob Mooney and Mark Tetreault netted two goals each. Jamie Chiocchio and Scott Markarian also scored.

Ryan McFarland was the top playmaker with three assists. Tetreault and Markarian handed out two each. Single assists were made by Chiocchio and Mooney.

Outstanding defensive performances were turned in by Jeff Atkins, Bryan Cooper and Steve Dunn.

Bruce Maggio played a sharp game in the cage and was fronted well by defenders Pam Sullivan, Matt Alleva, Sean Moriarty, Steve Romanowski and Ironmen John Chevalier and Jim Devlin.

Mite A's Take Rubber Match With Framingham

Coming off a string of exciting one-goal games in the Kiwanis Tournament, the Quincy Mite A's were involved in yet another thriller, a 2-1 win over Framingham.

Quincy took the rubber match after the two clubs had twice battled to 1-1 ties.

Josh Giordani, one of Quincy's heroes in the Kiwanis Tourney, scored the game-winner with just a minute and a half left to play to break nine periods of even hockey. He poked the puck home after a brilliant pass from Matt Germain, as linemate Pat Maxey helped press the attack.

Quincy started the scoring at the mid-point of the first period when Kevin Richardson rang the bell thanks to an assist from Matt Lavery and Brendon Conley.

Framingham scored their goal late in the second period to set up the final session fireworks.

Captain Tim Duggan and fellow defensive standouts Joe Norris, Andy McDonough, Pat Casper and Ryan Conley played exceptionally well as they hustled to keep the puck in the Framingham end.

Goalie Andy (Stonewall) Patten anchored the stingy defense with a number of key saves. He repelled several breakaways that looked like sure Framingham goals.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Though his team lost in the first round of the Division 1 hockey tournament, North Quincy head hockey man Tom Benson is perhaps the brightest young coach in the Quincy Public Schools system. What the Boston school teacher has brought to the city spells good things for local hockey.

Benson, 29, has had the head job at North for five years. In that time he has built a consistent tournament team. His club went 12-8-1 this year - the fourth year in a row in which he led them to the Division 1 tournament.

In 1992-93 and 1993-94 his Raiders marched to the Division 1 semifinals before being eliminated.

The result of this success is raised expectations; expectations that have led some to be disappointed because of North Quincy's quick exit from the tourney this year, courtesy of a 4-3 loss to Merrimack Valley Conference champ Billerica.

Instead of dwelling on the early end to the season we can just as easily look at it this way: here is a program that lost three starters from the previous season (one of whom is now playing Division I college hockey), went through an emotionally difficult campaign and made it to the tournament where it lost to a conference champ by just one goal.

Disappointing end to a season? Yes. But only because of the raised expectations that come with success. And that is a credit to the North Quincy hockey program and head coach Tom Benson.

He and his Quincy High counterpart, Bob Sylvia, face an especially difficult task: trying to keep at home the city's best hockey players in an area surrounded by some of the finest high school programs in the nation. It's a tempting offer to kids when Catholic Memorial - a team whose losses in the 90s can be counted on your fingers, and probably the best high school team in America - comes a-knockin'.

Many in the local hockey community have expressed hope that this will soon change. With Benson turning out tournament teams year after year it becomes easier for a North Quincy kid to say no to the hockey juggernauts of the world.

At Quincy High there is an equal share of optimism. The Presidents skated this year with a squad full of freshmen and sophomores, among them some of the best young players in the region. The Quincy Bantam A team, which is comprised of the city's most skilled freshmen and sophomores - kids from five different area high schools - featured seven Presidents on a squad of 15.

It is likely that in the next 1-3 years Quincy will improve considerably. This means possible tournament teams, which means, like at North Quincy, more kids will stay in town.

It's a simple formula: success breeds success.

The Old Colony League boys and girls basketball all-star teams and sportsmanship award recipients were recently announced, and the city of Quincy is well represented.

North Quincy's record setting-junior, Sara Stanton, was the second highest vote-getter on the girls list behind Barnstable senior Tania McIntyre.

Quincy junior Kerri Connolly was also high on the list of the league's best players and her Presidents squad received the OCL's team sportsmanship award.

In the boys category, Red Raider senior Brad Gray and junior Matt Beston were named to the first team.

Quincy High senior Dave Sawan was named the league's top individual sportsman.

The Quincy Sun sports desk was flooded with calls this week regarding a program that appeared on the Fox Network Tuesday night.

Let me set the record straight: "Deadly Invasion: The Killer Bee Nightmare" was not about the Quincy Youth Hockey Mite B team - known among the international jet set crowd as the Killer Bees - invading some new arena.

Rumors have been flying that the Quincy hockey powerhouse and local media darling would be the subject of a made-for-TV movie. This is not, I repeat, not, true.

That was not team captain Liam Powers in the lead role Tuesday night. No, little Taylor Reinhardt did not repel any attackers, she saves that for the ice. And Brendan Linnane did not do the Shamrock Shuffle as some sort of bizarre cult dance designed to ward off the invading insects.

Our local heroes may be small, but they are small hockey players, not bugs. A movie about them would show ice and skates and goalie pads, not a bunch of screaming lunatics trying to avoid a swarm of insects.

All further questions about the movie should be forwarded to the Fox Network and not The Quincy Sun sports desk.

Thank you.

Devils Post Two Ties

The St. Moritz Devils chalked up two ties this week as they took to the road.

The Devils battled to a 4-4 tie with the Springfield Olympics in a game played Saturday at Enfield, Conn.

St. Moritz scored all four of their goals quickly in the first period. Miah Hasson of Quincy scored on a wrist shot; 20 seconds later Steve Cavanaugh of Hingham tallied thanks to a blistering shot from the blue line. Hasson was set up by James McDonald and Nathan Shaller. John Segalla of Quincy aided Cavanaugh.

Three minutes later, Steve Segalla of Quincy scored a power play goal that was set up by Ryan McInnis and Richie Howe. The Devils' final goal was a slap shot by Kevin Patten of Quincy. He was assisted by Steve Segalla and McInnis.

Springfield scored two in the first, one in the second, and one in the final period.

Brett Wood and Pat Balaconis were exceptional on the defensive end.

There is always additional excitement when St. Moritz and Springfield do battle; their last meeting was interrupted near the end when the zamboni suddenly appeared on the ice. This game the clock broke and the teams played a 25 minute third period.

On Sunday, the Devils traveled to the New England Sports Center where they skated to a 5-5 tie with high-scoring Minutemen Flames.

St. Moritz had the backs to the wall as they found themselves down, 3-1, early - their only goal coming off a breakaway by Steve Segalla.

Each team scored twice in the second period. The Devils' first was a shot over the goalie's shoulder by Howe. He was assisted by Patten. Then Kevin Lynch fired the puck into the corner of the net on an unassisted breakaway.

In the final period the Flames were held scoreless despite a number of power play opportunities. Tom Hughes of Quincy scored to bring St. Moritz to within one, then McDonald scored the equalizer with 3:37 left to play. The tying score was set up by Quincy's Hasson.

Outstanding third-period defense was played by Tim Egan and Cavanaugh. The goaltending in both games was shared by Nick Sarno of Milton and Josh Wallace of Somerville.

Sacred Heart Basketball

There was limited action in the Sacred Heart Basketball League two weeks ago as teams finished the regular season and prepared for the playoffs.

The Gorham Supersonics topped MacFarlane, 43-31.

Chris Cummings led the Sonics with a career-high 12 points. Nick Cyr added some clutch shots and Pat Dolbeare gave a typically strong all-around effort.

Pat Stedman, Fred Elfman and Matt Kane played well in the short effort.

Randy Feetham's jump shots led Rosenburger to a 56-26 win over LeBlanc in a battle for first place.

Frank McNamara and Brian Deptula chipped in with fine defense and rebounding for Rosenburger.

Mark Stanton scored 10 for LeBlanc.

College Boys:

The Jachnig Wolverines clipped the wings of the Croke Jayhawks, 39-30.

Pat Jaehnig led his namesake club with 18 points as it took a 17-point into the break. Wayne Moynihan scored seven points and made five steals. Dave Bermingham was also strong on the defensive end.

Mike Feenan (11) and Chris Ham (10) paced the Croke squad. Stephen Barbuto looked sharp.

Rookie Boys:

St. Ann's Mahoney defeated Sacred Heart Costa, 20-9.

David Toner, Brendan Clifford and John Berlonzi led the winning club.

Pat O'Donnell, Bernie Stedman and Billy Gamel played well for Costa.

The Raptors fought past the Bulls, 21-15.

Cousins Phil Perry and Dave Jachnig combined for 17 points for the Raptors. Dave Redfern, Matt Newton and Sean Sullivan also played well.

Leading the Bulls effort were Brian Cyr (six), Jason Moore and Adam Tringale.

The Devils hot-shot was point guard Katy Mercurio with six points. Meghan McLean added five points and was strong along the boards while Kathleen Hester led the defensive effort.

Julie Cummings netted the winning bucket with just seconds remaining as Zoia upset Manning, 22-21.

Jessica Connolly, Caitie Morgan and Kerri O'Connell had fine all-around games for Manning.

Killer Bees Hold Off South Boston

Fresh off their inspired performance in the Cranberry Tournament, the Quincy Youth Hockey Killer Bees, sponsored by the Quincy Firefighters Association, rolled past two South Boston teams.

The Bees sent the clubs back to the Irish Riviera having both suffered stinging 5-2 losses.

The first win, over South Boston #3, highlighted the turnaround of the Killer Bees this season. In September, the Quincy media darlings, fresh out of the hive, were pasted in an 11-1 loss.

Jake (To The Net) O'Donnell was paired up with Brianna (Rollin') Nolan as he stung for the first two goals. Captain Liam Powers went to work with a nice lift that was assisted by Mr. Blue Line Chris Sheehan and Matt (Flash) Haskins.

The Captain later buzzed up the ice to record his second goal on an unassisted tally. Old Reliable Danny Sullivan scored the final goal off a play set up by Sheehan and Mr. Defense George Snowling.

The following week the Broadway Bullies sent South Boston #4 down to play, and they took were tagged with a 5-2 loss.

In the first period the Bees decided to buzz the rink in a move that had their ever increasing legions of fans, the Wanna Bees, a little confused.

In the middle session, O'Donnell raced up the ice - stinging three Southie players along the way - to net the first of his three unassisted tallies. He scored the second on his next trip up the ice and the third one minute later.

Captain Powers netted his own unassisted goal later in the period. Sullivan finished off the scoring with a honey-sweet goal assisted by fellow linesman Jonathon O'Connor and Shamrocker Brendan Linnane.

Outstanding hockey was played by Bees forwards Mark Lewis, Shamrocker Myles Clancy and Billy Jones.

Pat Maloney sent the Southie forwards for cover as he aggressively defended his corner of the hive. Hard-hitting Danny Davis, Taylor (Lady Byng) Reinhardt and substitute Shamrocker Gene (O') Nazzaro also broke up the South Boston attacks.

Goalie Nick Manning did his best brick wall imitation as he knocked away shot after shot.

The Buzz Around Town: the Killer Bees play Needham Sunday at 5:30 p.m. at their home hive, the Quincy Youth Arena.

The devoted Bee fans, the Wanna Bees, and other Sun readers are expected to swarm the arena to cheer on their heroes.

Bullets Vie For State Games

Saturday one of the city's most successful basketball teams, the Quincy/TILL Bullets, will attempt to qualify for the Massachusetts Special Olympics State Games.

The qualifying tournament is being held at Reading High School. If they qualify, the Bullets will compete for the gold medal April 22 and 23 in Worcester.

The Quincy Bullets, a group of highly dedicated and enthusiastic special needs athletes, won the gold medal in 1993.

Coach Billy Ketchen is in his 11th year as coach. Nine players have been with him since the beginning, including MVP forward Mark Smith. Other local standouts include Robbie O'Keefe, John Fabello, Donald Keene, Russell Conlin, John Weltman, Stephen Kearns, Billy Mahoney and Jimmy Gillis.

"Stability has been one of our greatest factors of success," said Ketchen. "Over the years we have built relationships with the players and created an atmosphere of trust that a one- or two-year coach cannot experience. The players have been able to grow and develop because the coaches know their strengths and weaknesses and have been able to work with them year after year."

The Bullets are associated with the Dedham-based agency Toward Independent Living and Learning (TILL). They play their home games at the Lincoln-Hancock School Friday nights. Last year they went 17-5 and were a perfect 9-0 at home.

QYS Establishes Hanlon Scholarship

The Quincy Youth Soccer League has established a scholarship to honor the memory of Joy Hanlon, a QYS player who was killed in the summer of 1992.

The financial award has been established to assist two graduating high school seniors (one male, one female) as they continue post-high school education.

Each scholarship will be for $250. To qualify, applicants must be Quincy residents, and have been registered in the Quincy Youth Soccer League for four years; a year including a fall and spring season.

The four-year requirement can also be fulfilled by any combination of eight playing seasons; i.e. eight fall or eight spring seasons, or any combination totalling eight.

Starting March 8, applications will be available in the Guidance Offices at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools. They will also be available by calling Quincy Youth Soccer at 472-9033.

All applications must be submitted for review by April 10. The awards will be presented at the QYSL spring general meeting, Wednesday, May 17.

Jr. Raiders Lose Game, Chance At Playoffs

The Jr. Red Raiders dropped their season finale to the MBA Hornets, 62-55, thereby ending their playoff hopes.

The Hornets, behind 6-foot-2-inch center Ben Donovan, jumped to a 16-2 lead after one quarter as the Raiders failed to convert several layup attempts.

Dan Duggan helped the Raiders by scoring two baskets off steals in the second quarter, but his squad trailed at the break, 33-16.

The Hornets' lead grew to as much as 23 points in the second half before relentless, full-court pressure allowed the Raiders to claw their way back into the game.

The defense of Phil McGillicuddy, Mike Haines and Pat Bregoli led to many turnovers, especially in the final quarter.

Sean Paylor, Joe Sudak and Bregoli converted the turnovers into points with a variety of pull-up shots, jump shots and layups. Paylor nailed a three-point shot while Bregoli converted on two three-point plays.

Peter Turowski and McGillicuddy did great work on the boards.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

It has been said that the youth of today are the Hope of yesterday, the Joy of today and the Guarantee of a better tomorrow...

What about the young people today? Some believe they are a group of lawless, infuriated persons bent on mischief.

We disagree. Those of us who have had the opportunity to observe life through the years are convinced that the young people today are for the most part, citizens of which we should be proud. Granted, (as in every generation) there is a small percentage of young people today, bent on violence and unhesitating in the way they break the law...

Young people have always been thought of as the hope of the world. That has been true in the past and it is true today. Let us join forces with that overwhelming majority of young people who are set on doing the right thing and seeing that others do it also.

Regardless of age ... we are always delighted to hear from you concerning the thoughts you read here.

How to select a hearing aid.

If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.

- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.

"We know a great deal about hearing aids."

CAPT. BERNARD McCAULEY of the Quincy Fire Department is dwafted by underground tunnel--which currently measures 18 feet in diameter--during the department's recent tunnel training exercises. Construction of the tunnel, which runs from Raymer Street to the rear of Star Market and is part of the Town Brook flood control project, has been temporarily put on hold by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Underground Tunnel Project Put On Hold

An underground tunnel currently under construction in Quincy as part of the Town Brook flood control project has been temporarily put on hold.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said a dispute has arisen about who will pay for certain structural problems that have cropped up during construction. The project is a joint venture between Army Corps of Engineers and the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC), he noted, and the two sides are disagreeing about which group should pay for the problems.

"It's in the holding stage right now," said Gorman, who added that the Army Corps of Engineers is shouldering the majority of the financial load. "The Army Corps of Engineers has shut the project down."

The tunnel is currently 18 feet in diameter and will be 16 feet when completed, according to Gorman. It now runs from Raymond Street to the Star Market, and when finished will be almost a full mile in length.

"Currently, we are about 800 feet into the tunnel," said Gorman. "The shaft at Raymer Street is about 180 feet, and the shaft at Star Market about 160 feet."

The tunnel is the third stage of the five-part Town Brook flooding control project which Gorman said began about four years ago and has been "in the planning stages" for about the past 20 years. The first two stages took place in Braintree and along the Southern Artery in Quincy respectively, while the fourth and fifth stages will include work along Bigelow Street in Quincy and the rebuilding of the Braintree Dam.

The Town Brook project was designed to help alleviate flooding in the Town Brook area during heavy rains and flash floods. It is being paid for jointly by the Army Corps of Engineers and MDC, Gorman said.

The chief added that the tunnel alone is being built at a pricetag of about $18 million, while the cost of the entire Town Brook project will total about $100 million.

A WELL-ROUNDED POLICY

In immediate terms, the purchase of a new set of automobile tires is likely to improve a car's safety and handling. In the long term, proper disposal of the old set of tires carries its own implications for the environment. By conservative estimates, there are approximately two billion cast-off tires in a national stockpile that increases by some 230 million tires annually, The modern tire is comprised of about 22 rubber compounds that resist cost-effective attempts at breaking them down into their constituent components for recycling purposes or biodegrading in a public landfill. For this reason alone, car owners must act responsibly when disposing of old tires. Relying on tire specialists for proper disposal usually offers the best course of action.

Hint: In some areas, old tires are used to make fuel additives which help fuel coal-fired electrical plants.

If you have questions about your tires, don't hesitate to ask when you come into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. For all your car's repairs, we have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best service technicians available in the area. We know how important your car is to you and that it represents a sizeable investment. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-5pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

QCBPA Puts Positive Accent On Area's Future

Downtown Master Plan Goal For New Task Force

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) has formed a new task force that will work with elected officials and other organizations toward the revitalization of the city's downtown business section.

A primary goal of the task force, which has been put together over the past month, is the formulation of a Master Plan which will be designed to do the following:

•Make the area more accessible through increased parking and the planned Quincy Center Concourse which will link Hancock Street with Burgin Parkway.

•Discover and promote alternative uses of existing vacant space.

•Identify and improve current problems in the existing retail mix.

•Coordinate between existing government and business organizations to maximize effectiveness.

The QCBPA established the task force in an effort to take a greater leadership role in helping to shape the future of Quincy Center.

Daniel Flynn, president of Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc., a commercial real estate firm in North Quincy, is chairman of the new group. Asked about the purpose of the task force, Flynn quoted its mission statement from a draft of its business plan published this month:

"To function as a facilitator and catalyst in efforts to revitalize the downtown area of Quincy Center. To focus on the membership goals of repositioning Quincy Center as a Destination Shopping Center with particular emphasis on retail and commercial business needs."

QCBPA Executive Director Maralin Manning, another task force member, said the 150-member association chose Flynn to head the group because "he has an understanding of what businesses are looking for."

"He can be the catalyst between the real estate people and the business people," she added. "He has a complete understanding of both sides of the business."

DANIEL FLYNN

Flynn said he is confident that teamwork is the key to success for Quincy Center.

"The downtown has extraordinary possibilities for growth," he said. "By working together with the mayor, other city officials, Quincy 2000, the Quincy Historic Commission, and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Quincy Council, the task force can help accomplish that. But

State Police Team To Patrol Quincy Streets

State Rep. Michael Bellotti announces that as a result of speeding vehicles and other traffic violations along Quincy Shore Drive, Willard St. in West Quincy and other South Shore state roads, the State Police have formed the "H" Troop 55 Team.

The team is led by Sgt. Michael Kelly of "H" Troop or the State Police Old Colony District.

The 55 Team concept has been successful in reducing speeding and auto accidents in other State Police districts. The program is designed to reduce the number of illegal vehicle operations in high violation areas.

The 55 Team will periodically patrol Quincy Shore Drive and Willard St. and pull over and cite traffic violators, according to Bellotti.

"The newly-formed 'H' 55 Troop Team is gladly welcomed by the residents of North Quincy and West Quincy," he said. "Their level of strategic expertise, planning, and execution should go a long way in sending the correct message to drivers who speed through our neighborhoods and streets.

"I commend the State Police and Capt. McCarthy of the Old Colony District for continually creating and using innovative methods in the face of budgetary constraints to answer the safety needs and concerns of the citizens of Quincy."

Bellotti added that the efforts of Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Stephen Tobin, and city officials were instrumental in the implantation of the team.

First Night To Host Arts In Parks Program

City Council President Michael Cheney has announced that First Night Quincy will be hosting an Arts in the Parks Program this summer. It will be an alcohol and other drug-free events specifically defined for families.

Family entertainment will be provided at six city parks..They include, LaBrecque or the Great Hill Playground in Houghs Neck, Fore River Field, the Bishop Playground, Kincaide Park or O'Rourke Field, Ruth Gordan Amphi-theatre and the Wendell Moses Playground in Squantum.

Cheney said, "In subsequent years if the program is successful the program will expand to other neighborhood parks and playgrounds "

Cheney said the concept to hold family-oriented entertainment in the city's neighborhoods came from several residents attending First Night Quincy. They had requested that "family entertainment events be held in the warmer weather and in their neighborhoods.".

Cheney said that Barry Welch, director of Recreation, will chair a feasibility committee along with Tom Koch, executive director of Park and Forestry; Bryant Carter, Jr., Park Commissioner; Rick Iacobucci, First Night Coordinator and Fund Raiser; Mark Leighton, First Night Entertainment Coordinator, Ray Cattaneo, retired director of Park and Forestry and Bill Morrill, president of Creative Affairs and coordinator of outdoor First Night Affairs in Quincy.

Cheney signed applications and grants and

Businesses 'Doing Well' Or Holding Their Own

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A survey of Quincy Center business owners has revealed that most downtown merchants are either doing well or holding their own, while all are looking forward to increased business and a brighter future.

Merchants surveyed Tuesday by The Quincy Sun had the following comments:

Joseph McArdle, owner of the family-owned business Hancock Tobacco said: "Business is good and we have great faith in Quincy's future. Faith enough for us to open a second business, a convenience store just two doors away."

The new store, Hancock Convenience, which will soon open will carry groceries, beer and wine.

McArdle said he sells the largest variety of magazines on the South Shore, plus lottery and scratch tickets. He said he hopes "business will keep improving and I believe it will."

Marci Houston, general manager and part owner of Boston Chicken enthusiastically said business was "Great, couldn't be better." She added that there is a "lot of coupon usage", but business was good because it has a "lot to do with the new mall overall".

She said the Houston family located in Quincy because of the "income range." She described it as a community where there is an abundance of "middle income families is a great place to be in business."

Houston said she doesn't see any problems in the business "slowing down," but said she thinks Boston Chicken in the future will continue to "hold steady".

Joanne Falco, owner of Great Cuts, said business is "okay." She said she gives senior citizens' discounts and sends out discount coupons to improve her business. She said 60 percent of her customers are men.

(Cont'd On Page 2)

Businesses 'Doing Well' Or Holding Their Own

Falco said she "hopes to see her business grow," but cited parking problems in the area as a "deterrent to her business."

Deanna Gazarian, owner of Phase II Jewelry and Gift Shop, said although her business is "nothing like the 80s, the future is looking up." Gazarian said she sees a "positive push" going on.

Gazarian, who is also first vice president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, said she has cultivated her own customers and had to diversify her business. She started out just selling jewelry, but had to expand to selling gifts depicting scenes of Quincy collectibles to "take us over the hump."

Tim Colton, owner of The Fours on Cottage Ave. said business is "not bad. So far we are pleased." Colton said his lunch business is "not as strong as we had hoped," but he attributed that to being in the business just six months. He said business on weekdays was improving and that he is pleased with his weekend clientele.

Colton added that he thinks the future of Quincy is "optimistic" and said he opened The Fours because he thinks Quincy has a "lot of potential. It needed a good restaurant and we think our concept is good."

Cathaleen Ploof, owner of Everlasting Engraving, 1550 Hancock St., said she is one of the "lucky ones" in Quincy Square because she doesn't rely on "foot traffic" for a lot of her business. She added that Quincy needs "some big names" to open businesses in Quincy because otherwise the downtown situation will "stay the way it is"

Ploof said it would be "nice to have more foot traffic to sell items such as First Communion gifts," but said a lot of her business is done over the telephone as she services not only Quincy but surrounding towns as well.

Ploof, whose business is housed in the old Miller Shoe store across from Woolworth's, sells trophies, awards, embroidered articles and corporate gift items such as clocks, pen sets, and mugs.

Right now, Ploof said she is coming into her "busy time" with schools giving out awards, church league giving out basketball awards as well as various companies.

Jim Murphy, manager of Quincy Records and Tapes said business is "pretty good" and said "we've been here for 12 years, so we must be doing something right."

He said there is no consistency in his business and noted at one time weekends were the busiest, but now, Monday could be his "best day". He said he doesn't "foresee any problems in the future."

Mary Ann Stilgoe, owner of the Center for Education Enhancement and Development (CEED) at 1419 Hancock St., has experienced considerable success since opening in the spring of 1993. The private business school, which offers jobs skills training programs for adults, has expanded three times in the areas of staff, space and equipment.

Stilgoe said her recipe for success is simple.

"I think that we're providing a needed service, and we're doing it with the attitude that our students come first," she said.

Patrick McDermott Candidate For Ward 3 Council Seat

Patrick W. McDermott, 25, of Taylor St., Wollaston, is a candidate for Ward 3 city councillor.

McDermott made his official announcement last week at Presidents Golf Course Clubhouse before a crowd of more than 100.

McDermott, a 21-year resident of Ward 3, says he believes that the neighborhood needs a councillor whose roots are deep in the community.

"I moved to Taylor St. in 1973. I grew up here. I played in the streets of Ward 3. I delivered The Quincy Sun and The Patriot Ledger here. I've participated in community events. I know this community and I understand its concerns."

Quoting the late Speaker of the House Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, McDermott said, "All politics is local. . . I would offer to amend this phrase by saying that all politics is personal. It's about effective communication, it's about identifying needs in the community and efficiently responding to those need."

He also expressed regret that his mother and father could not have been at the opening of his campaign and to share in the occasion. His mother, Patricia, died a little over five years ago from cancer. His father, Charles, is recuperating from triple by-pass surgery at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

PATRICK McDERMOTT

"The values that have been bestowed upon me by my parents have always stressed community service and reaching out to those who are less fortunate," McDermott said.

McDermott is an officer in the North Quincy Knights of Columbus and president of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association. "As president of the neighborhood association, I had the opportunity to work on issues that directly affect the ward. I has provided me with the experience of working with city and state officials to bring issues to the people of Montclair and Wollaston."

McDermott, a former legislative assistant to Rep. Michael Bellotti, now is an aide to Sen. Michael Morrissey, a position he will be leaving in the spring to work full-time on his campaign.

"In the two years I have spent at the State House, I have learned what is good and what is bad about government. I have assisted constituents with housing issues, public safety concerns, legislative matters, and bureaucratic puzzles. I will bring this experience to City Hall to assist in making local government more efficient and creating a clearer picture of government services to the community."

McDermott touched on a few issues that he said are currently affecting the Ward 3 community: traffic, education and public safety. But, he said, he is looking to communicate with the members of the community rather than to preach to them.

McDermott is also a former marketing account representative for Capital Marketing, Inc. of Quincy. He is the chancellor of the North Quincy Knights of Columbus and has been appointed marketing chairman for the International Conference on Volunteer Administration, coming to Boston in October.

McDermott, a graduate of Boston College High School, earned a bachelor's degree in political science and speech communication from Boston College in 1991.

McDermott said he encourages residents to contact him at his campaign headquarters at 786-9595.

Quincy 2000 Downtown Business Summit

Impact Quincy Plans Activities For Poisons Awareness Week

Impact Quincy will coordinate several local activities as part of Inhalant & Poisons Awareness Week March 19-25.

The group is joining forces with over 900 organizations nationwide that are drawing attention to the dangers of inhalant and poison use among young people. National studies have indicated that inhalants are the third most popular "drug of choice" for middle school youth, after alcohol and tobacco.

The 1994 Survey of Quincy Youth conducted by Impact Quincy showed that over 8 percent of students in Grades 7-11 had used inhalants in the past 30 days. That was more than double the rate reported in the survey of the previous year.

The highest rate of use in Quincy was among seventh grade boys, where almost one in seven had used inhalants in the past 30 days. Typically, inhalant use is more prevalent among younger adolescents, and is often the first substance that youth experiment with to get high.

More than 1,000 common household and office products, everything from cleaning fluids to spray paint, can be misused by intentionally inhaling concentrated fumes.

Locally, Impact Quincy and the Quincy Public Schools will be distributing informational brochures to every elementary and middle school student to be shared with their parents. Impact Quincy will also be distributing information on inhalant abuse to every physician and pharmacist in the city, and will be asking local retailers to distribute material to their customers.

For more information about inhalants and poisons misuse and what can be done to prevent it, call Impact Quincy at 472-6027.

WHEN DIET BECOMES AN OBSESSION

It is often noted that America is a country "obsessed: with being thin. There is a fine line, however, between yearning for some ideal of physical perfection and becoming truly obsessed-stuck in feelings of low self-esteem and helplessness. In the latter case, eating disorders can develop. How can you tell when preoccupation turns into a dangerous obsession? Watch for signs of depression: low energy, withdrawal from normal behavior patterns, and abuse of alcohol or other drugs. Beware of sudden seemingly irrational eating habits, such as eating only certain foods or setting up food rituals. Sign of secret purging may include frequent sore throat or puffy face, tooth decay, and overuse of laxatives or diuretics.

P.S. While most common in young women, anyone-male or female-can have an eating disorder.

Overeating has many causes. Relief from this compulsion can be helped with the treatment of caring professionals who do not judge their struggle with this malady. For more information, visit, COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy or call myself or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. Those Good Old Days

Life was simpler back then and in some ways, probably more enjoyable even though the world was at war.

Sulo Soini, Quincy High School class of 1943, believes so and thinks many of you might agree.

SOINI

Soini, who grew up in Quincy and will soon be retiring as Weymouth's town tax collector (friendly, he says), graduated from QHS with classmates who included:

Former City Clerk John Gillis, now a Norfolk County Commissioner; retired Police Chief Frank Finn, Assessor Jim Papile, former QHS football coach Hank Conroy (a pretty good football player himself) and Bill Draicchio, who before he retired from the Quincy Police Department, directed traffic at Washington St. and Southern Artery like Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops.

Soini says he enjoyed the recent column on "Tidbits, Anyone?" and thought you might find an article entitled "A Different World" (author unknown) of interest. It was read at one of the class's reunions. A few excerpts:

"We were before television, penicillin, polio shots, antibiotics, frisbees. . . frozen food, nylon, dacron, Xerox, Kinsey... radar, fluorescent lights, credit cards, ballpoint pens. . . pantyhose, drip-dry clothes. . . ice makers, dish washers, clothes dryers, freezers and electric blankets.

"Before Hawaii and Alaska became states. Before men wore long hair and earrings and women wore tuxedos.

"We got married first and then lived together. How quaint can you get?

"In our time, closets were for clothes, not for coming out of and a book about two young women living together in Europe could be called "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay."

"Bunnies were small rabbits. We were before cup sizes for bras. . . deep cleavage was something a butcher did. . . We thought fast food was what you ate during Lent. . . In our day Coke was something you drank, grass was mowed and pot was something you cooked in... There were 5 and 10 cent stores where you could actually buy things for 5 and 10 cents... For one nickel you could make a phone call or buy a Coke or enough stamps to mail one letter and two postcards.

"We were not before the difference between the sexes was discovered, but we were before sex changes. We just made do with what we had.

"And we were the last generation that was so dumb as to think you needed a husband to have a baby."

QUINCY'S BOB SEAMANS runs a pretty good marathon. And he isn't bad on skis, either.

SEAMANS

Seamans, who handles public relations-advertising for South Boston Savings Bank, recently clocked 78 miles in a charity cross-country ski-a-thon for the Carroll Center for the Blind in Newton.

He did it in 12 hours in temperatures equivalent to 25 degrees below zero in Jackson, N.H. Seventy-eight miles is equal to the distance of three marathons—26.3 miles each.

Seamans raised $5,000 in pledges for the Carroll Center, bringing his three-year ski-a-thon total to $13,000.

Actually, the 78 miles weren't that tough. Two years ago, he did 92 miles in 15 1/2 hours. (But you were two years younger, then, Bob).

DID YOU GET married in the 1970's? If you did, you run a pretty high risk of being divorced in the 1990's, according to Mass Bay Counseling, Billings Rd., North Quincy.

It says that statistics show that 60 percent of those married in the 1970's will be divorced by the 1990's.

Mass Bay is sponsoring a free symposium on how to meet the challenge April 1, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Holiday Inn in Randolph.

OBSERVATION: Once upon a time, the only freaks you seemed to see were when a circus or carnival came to town.

Now all you have to do is sit in front of your TV set, click away and they're all over your living room, compliments of Geraldo, Oprah, Donahue and Jenny Jones, etc. The latter seems to know where to dig up more of them than the others.

A random click one morning recently produced a mother and her daughter who appeared to be a teenager. Ma boasted she loves to share her fantasies (sexual) with her daughter. "And I brought along my whip," she said proudly as the audience squealed with delight.

Question: where do they find these freaks—the guests on the programs and those sitting in the audience?

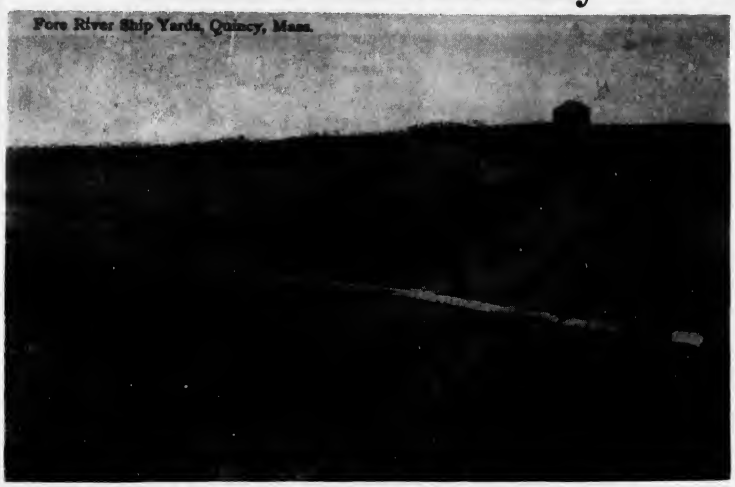
MUSICAL TREAT: If you want to hear a beautiful arrangement of "Danny Boy" on St. Patrick's Day, try Glenn Miller's version either on an old record or on a CD.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS OLD POSTCARD of the Fore River Shipyard was mailed from the USS Michigan during it's sea trials when it was built in Quincy more than 80 years ago. This view is of the "main street" of the yard showing the office in the far distant center. The building on the left was the mold loft where full size drawings of a ship's frame were made on the floor. In later years this building became the power house. Alongside the mold loft was the old forge. This scene also shows a lot of track of the narrow gauge Fore River railroad which serviced all sections of the yard, and while full gauge today, it still is used by the MWRA.

How Can Hancock St. Handle A Superstore?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

After reading the pros and cons of the proposed plans of Shaw's Supermarket, the main concern seems to be the potential traffic problems. No one has mentioned the fact that the North Quincy Post Office alone causes bottleneck traffic jams. How can Hancock Street possibly handle a superstore?

Another supermarket is the last thing this neighborhood needs.

Urges Support Of Cancer Society's 'Daffodil Days'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The American Cancer Society helps thousands of people every year in our community. Now, when the days are growing noticeably longer as we move toward the first day of spring, I want to urge everyone in Quincy to support the American Cancer Society by ordering daffodils.

Last year, businesses and residents of the South Shore raised over $60,000 in daffodil sales. The American Cancer Society sells bouquets of beautiful fresh daffodils, which you can order now for delivery during the first week of spring. Everyone can join, whether it's by buying a single bouquet for $5, or a box of 50 bouquets to share with residents of a hospital or nursing home, or at the office. Every dollar raised by the American Cancer Society is used to fight cancer.

The American Cancer Society helps families by providing the information needed to make the right decisions about treatment, by providing rides to and from outpatient treatment appointments and by sending a Reach to Recovery visitor to help patients cope after breast cancer treatment. Today, I'm urging you to support the American Cancer Society so they will continue to be there for other patients and families in Quincy.

To order daffodils, call the American Cancer Society's Stoughton office at 617-341-4210. Daffodils arrive March 21. This spring, it's the best way you can fight cancer.

Sounding The Diabetes Alert

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It's time to sound the diabetes alert! For 24 hours on Tuesday, March 28, the American Diabetes Association will be actively trying to identify the more than 200,000 people in Massachusetts who have diabetes and don't know it.

Like many Americans, many Massachusetts residents believe that since diabetes is treatable, they don't need to be concerned about getting it. They're mistaken. Diabetes is a serious disease that can cause devastating health complications including blindness, kidney failure, heart disease, stroke and amputations. The disease is especially common in African-American, Hispanic and Native American populations.

Each year, our association sets aside one day to concentrate all our resources to encourage people to take a simple written test that can tell them if they're at high risk for diabetes. It's called the American Diabetes Alert.

So mark March 28 in your calendar and call us at 1-800-DIABETES for a free risk test and other helpful information about diabetes.

Until there's a cure, there's the American Diabetes Association.

Start Of School Lunch Postponed

March 16-22
1971
24 Years Ago

By PAUL HAROLD

The much discussed elementary school lunch program starting date was postponed until October after the City Council and School Committee were unable to come to an agreement on the appropriations.

School Committee Vice-Chairman James McCormick said the program at Snug Harbor School was in jeopardy because of the refusal of the City Council to fund the program for the full request of $30,000.

Ward 1 Councillor Edward Graham, in whose ward Snug Harbor was located, opposed the lunch plan because of its limited scope and the fact that it would cut out the physical education program at the school since the meals would be served out in the gym.

LAYOFFS AT THE SHIPYARD

The 7,485-man work force at the General Dynamics shipyard would be reduced by 150 to 200 because of "schedule problems" and an "imbalance of the work force."

Pipe fitters, electricians and sheet metal workers were scheduled to be laid off, while there was a recall for 50 painters, and the short term need for more welders and shipfitters.

A spokesperson for General Dynamics said that the layoffs were not the result of the completion of the Navy Landing Dock Pensacola which was to be delivered to the Navy next week.

BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED

Building Inspector Allan MacDonald noted that permits for 45 new dwelling units were granted this month, for total building costs of $515,818.

Among those approved were an 11-unit on Chester St. by Armando Agnitti, an 11-unit on Walnut St. by Fred Gardiner and an 18-unit on Centre St. by Richard Buccheri.

Also participating were Earle Morse, Thomas Gallagher, John Purpura, Bradford Hamilton, Richard Mounford, Gary Barton, David Hemingway III, Donald Tobin, Frank Moody, William Wright, Robert Hoxie, Wayne Gallagher and Robert Peruzzi.

Artichoke Quiche

Whenever there is a party in our family, I'm usually called upon or I offer to make a tray of finger foods ranging from calzone, fritters to quiches

That's the way it was last Sunday at our granddaughter Hannah Joy's first birthday party. I wanted to make a different type of quiche,. Having used broccoli, spinach, sausage and numerous other fillers, this was the first time I used artichokes. Since artichokes are a family favorite, there wasn't a piece left that day...

Artichoke Quiche

1 jar of marinated artichokes
8 eggs
3/4 cup milk
3/4 cup flour
1/2 cup grated cheese
1/2 cup shredded cheese (preferably cheddar)
salt and pepper to taste

First, lightly grease a quiche dish or deep pie plate (9 inches is fine) . Cut the artichokes hearts in halves. Set aside.

In a large bowl, beat the eggs (I use a whisk), add the milk, flour, salt and pepper, grated cheese and half the shredded cheese and beat. Add the artichoke hearts and blend.

Pour into the pie plate and top it with the rest of the shredded cheese. Bake in a 325 degree oven for about 30 minutes or until done. You'll notice that it will rise and then when you remove it from the oven and it cools down, it shrinks a bit. Cool for a few minutes before serving,.

I made it a day ahead and then put it in a warming oven before cutting.it.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Daniel J. Flynn Sells 8 Condos

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. recently negotiated the sale of eight retail/warehouse condominiums on Rte. 24 in Brockton for Century Bank and Trust Company.

The condos ranged between 3,591 and 10,764 square feet and sold at an average of $14 per square foot.

The retail/warehouse condominiums are in the second phase building of a development that was built in 1987 at 244 Liberty St. in Brockton. Each unit included mezzanine level office space, overhead doors with drive-in ramps or loading docks, and oversized retail display windows.

Flynn & Co. marketed the units with a co-broke incentive of 10 percent commission to cooperating brokers, direct mail and telemarketing to targeted end-user industries. The marketing program culminated in an absolute auction of the two smallest units.

"This innovative blend of traditional brokerage and auction urgent marketing is an effective technique for achieving maximum net value on bank-owned properties," said Daniel J. Flynn.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co. Inc. is a Quincy-based real estate marketing firm specializing in commercial brokerage and auctions of residential and commercial properties.

Marketing Program For Quincy Retailers At Hancock Plaza

Quincy 2000 Corporation, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and the Quincy Business Council of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce will host a two-day program, Powering-Up Quincy Retailing, on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 21 and 22 at Hancock Plaza, 1515 Hancock St., Quincy.

The program's intent is to assist Quincy's small retailers in developing a competitive advantage in a changing marketplace brought about by expansion of malls and advent of mass merchandisers.

The program is free of charge to Quincy retailers.

Sponsored by Atlantic Development Co., the program will be presented by National Main Street Center, a division of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, an organization with experience dealing with the arrival of large discount retailers into a market.

Space for the seminar is donated by CB Commercial Real Estate Group, Inc., which manages Hancock Plaza.

Keynote speaker will be Dr. Kenneth Stone, an economist at Iowa State University. He is recognized for his insights on how local retailers compete with mega-stores, such as Wal-Mart which is building a new store in Quincy Point. Workshops and individual on-site consultations for attendees will follow.

"This program is structured to provide retailers with information on how to maintain and increase profitability amidst the new style of competition, and to work individually with businesses to identify techniques they can employ to remain viable in the marketplace," said Maralin Manning, executive director of the QCBPA.

"This forum will provide a strong competitive foundation for the city's retailers," said Charles D'Aprix, president of Quincy 2000. "Dr. Stone is one of the nation's leading economic researchers. His studies have enabled countless small businesses to compete successfully with mass merchandisers."

The two-day program will begin at 11:30 a.m. with a buffet lunch. From noon to 2 p.m. workshops featuring an overview of retail trends contrasted with consumer buying trends will be followed by an address by Dr. Stone on retailing opportunities for small businesses.

The program continues in the evening from 7 to 8:30 p.m. with four distinct seminars running simultaneously and repeated from 8:30 to 10 p.m. Topics are Differentiate Your Business in the Marketplace, Focus Your Product Line, Sixteen Tactics for Surviving When the Big Discounters Enter the Local Market and Merchandising for the '90s.

Starting at 8:30 a.m. on Wednesday, March 22, the four seminar instructors will visit individual merchants for 45-minute consultations. New Business Opens Next Week

Cottage Caterers Owners Glad To Be Back In Quincy

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

After spending much of their restaurant career in the Quincy area, Maureen and Mahmoud Hassan at Cottage Caterers, 37 Cottage Ave., are anxiously awaiting the return to their old stomping grounds when their catering service opens next week.

"We're very happy to return to Quincy. It's been a while," said Maureen Hassan, coordinator and scheduler for the catering service and wife of the head chef, Mahmoud Hassan.

In their more than 20 years of being involved in the food business, the Hassans have owned a number of restaurants in Quincy and elsewhere before opening their catering service out of the recently abandoned Electrolux building.

Originally from Boston, Maureen Hassan attended Quincy High School after moving to Quincy in 1960.

While working at Anthony's Pier 4 20 years ago, she met her husband-to-be.

She admitted that their first date was somewhat out of the ordinary.

"He was new to the area and he wanted to know where there was a mosque in Quincy. He told me he would put gas in my car if I drove him there. I said 'OK' and he's been putting gas in my car since," she said.

The Hassans are the proud parents of Nora and Aweera, both students at Wheaton College in Norton and David, a junior at Braintree High School. Each of their three children have participated in the family's restaurant businesses since an early age.

Hassan said she finds enjoyment out of bringing various people together.

"When we can take a room full of empty tables and turn it into a decorative, fun atmosphere where people can come together and enjoy themselves, it makes me feel good," she said.

The friendly personalities of the staff at Cottage Caterers are symbolic of the atmosphere of the catering service.

"We're 'people people,'" Hassan said of the friendly, personable atmosphere at the catering service.

Hassan believes she is answering a demand of many people in the Quincy area with the function room.

"People would always ask me if I knew where there was a good function room for a small gathering of just 30 or 40 people and we have that here," she said.

The catering shop is divided into two parts: the kitchen, which is equipped with four ovens and one stove; and the function room, which sits up to 60 people.

Glass mirrors cover the walls of the room and elegant glass light fixtures dangle from the freshly painted white ceiling, casting a bright light upon the furniture. The tables in the function room are laced with fluffy white tablecloths and flowery centerpieces, all courtesy of the Hassans and their staff.

According to Mahmoud Hassan, the renovation of store took six months of dedicated work by determined volunteers.

"A lot of people helped us and I would like to thank them. It was a first-class operation," he said.

Whether he was working with his uncle or simply cooking with his mother, Hassan has worked with food for much of his life.

After moving to the United States in 1969, he worked with his uncle at a New York restaurant for three years before moving to Quincy.

Hassan enjoys preparing a wide variety of meals and desserts from roast beef and potatoes to shrimp and scampi.

"I don't have a favorite dish. I like it all," he said.

MAHMOUD HASSAN, co-owner and head chef of Cottage Caterers, 37 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center, trims crust from a freshly-baked apple pie. The catering service will open for business next week.

Hassan said he enjoys catering more than cooking at restaurants because he can better suit the customer's needs.

"I like being able to take my time and the people can be more specific," he said.

Hassan has kept his family ties alive by replicating his mother's recipe for rice pudding. He is also keeping true to his roots by offering a gathering every Friday night where other Arabic people can get together in the function room.

Cottage Caterers, 479-4411, will be open Monday through Friday from 5 to 10 p.m. beginning March 20.

New Health Center Group Focuses on Physical Fitness

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

Dr. David Egilman, MD, MPH, and the rest of the staff at South Shore Health Center are working hard to provide physical fitness and health awareness not only for their patients but for the whole community as well with the formation of Braintree Healthy People 2000.

The organization, which Dr. Egilman formed outside of the health center, is designed to help bring the community together and raise awareness of physical fitness. According to Dr. Egilman, there are currently about 30 members.

"We are trying to mobilize the members of the community and bring people together to have all the people of the community participate," said Dr. Egilman, who earned a master's degree at Harvard.

One of the programs which Dr. Egilman's group works with is a program in which teenagers and senior citizens join together to help each other.

"The kids can learn a lot from the senior citizens and the teenagers can help the senior citizens," he said.

The organization is a reflection of how the staff at South Shore Health Center cares about the community according to the doctor.

"Physical fitness is for everyone," said Dr. Egilman.

South Shore Health Center is a privately-run practice which serves the Braintree area.

The health center offers minor emergency care treatment and preventative health screening. They also treat people with high blood pressure, diabetes, asthma and allergies and offer a host of other treatments.

Anyone interested in participating in Braintree Healthy People 2000 should contact John Barkow at South Shore Health Center, 848-1950.

South Shore Health Center, 759 Granite St., Braintree, is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Did you know...
Smokers subject themselves to a much greater risk of death or disability at a younger age.
It is estimated that 87% of lung cancers are caused by cigarette smoking, causing about 150,000 deaths per year in the U.S.
Death rates from cancer of the esophagus, pharynx, lip, larynx, and mouth are at least six times as great for smokers as for non-smokers. Death rates from heart disese are twice as high for smokers as non-smokers - from peptic ulcers, nearly three times as high.
A tragically high number of people die in early middle age, when their children need them the most, from cigarette-related diseases.
Parents who care about their children should seriously consider quitting smoking.

Coming To Quincy

GROUND IS EXPECTED to be broken in April for Hancock Park, the new $11 million Welch Healthcare Nursing Center to be built in the Quincy Parkingway. Target opening is the late summer or fall of 1996. The six-story center will employ a staff of between 160 and 175, about 50 percent in professional positions, with an estimated payroll of $3.5 million. The facility will have parking for 101 cars.

Retailers Sell Cigarettes To Minors During Health Dept. Scan

A recent compliance check conducted by the Quincy Health Department's Tobacco Control Program found that 33 percent of retailers scanned sold cigarettes to minors.

According to Robert Helfrich, head of the program, a 13-year-old and a 16-year-old youth were both able to make tobacco purchases without an identification check. Two retailers were issued fines because of a second offense, and two were sent letters of warning. Those who did comply were sent letters of commendation.

Attorney General Scott Harshbarger recently fined major food markets for the sale of tobacco to minors. Federal, state and city laws restrict the sale of tobacco products to those under age 18.

Hopes To Compete In Individual Short-Track Speedskating Events

Olympian Cashman Sets Sights On 1998 Winter Games

By KERRY BYRNE

Spain, Norway, Italy and England.

A dream European vacation? Perhaps. But also the itinerary for local Olympic hero Karen Cashman, who won a bronze medal in short-track speedskating in the 1994 Winter Games.

The 24-year-old Quincy native has kept a torrid pace of competition since the event that is, at least for the time being, the crowning achievement of her impressive athletic career.

Cashman again put her name in the books in late February at the World University Games in Jaca, Spain when she set a world record in the 1,000-meter race with a time of 1:40.12. She also captured a bronze medal in the 3,000-meter relay, placed fifth in the 500 and seventh in the 1,500.

"Cashman did exceptionally well at the University Game," said United States International Speedskating Association representative Susan Polakoff. "She's one of the bright young athletes in American short-track speedskating and we expect her to continue to do well on the world stage."

Because of her hectic travel schedule, Cashman was unable to be reached for comment.

Her most recent success was March 4 and 5 at the US World Team Trials in Saratoga Springs, NY, where she placed second out of 48 women competitors. As one of the nation's top two finishers, she will race in the individual events at the World Championships to be held this week, March 17 and 18.

Cashman finished behind Amy Peterson - her teammate on the bronze medal-winning US short-track relay team in the Olympics - by less than seven-tenths of a second in the nine-lap time trials.

OLYMPIC BRONZE MEDALIST Karen Cashman of Quincy, has impressed U.S. Olympic officials with her short-track speedskating performances, including a world record, as part of her training for the 1998 Winter Games.

In the World Championships, Cashman will be taking part in the premier athletic competition on the planet. Basically, the athletes who participate in the Worlds are the same people who compete in the Olympics. Polakoff referred to the competition at the World Championships as "the best of the best."

Cashman hopes to represent the United States again in the 1998 Olympics in Japan. "It's hard to say if she'll definitely be in the Olympics; they're still a ways off," said Polakoff. "But Karen has shown great dedication and a great work ethic towards the sport."

Her goal this time, though, is to compete in Japan on an individual basis. Her medal in 1994 was won as a member of the 3000-meter short-track relay team.

"To compete individually is definitely her goal," said Cashman's mother, Jane. "Racing in the individual events in the World Championships will be a good experience, too. She has made excellent progress in that respect."

This weekend at the Worlds, to be held in Hammar, Norway at the Olympic venue where she won her bronze medal, Cashman will race in the 500, 1,000, 1,500 and 3,000 meter individual events. She will also be a member of the 3,000-meter relay team.

Cashman spent much of February in Europe competing in a variety of events. From Feb. 4-12 she was at the Short Track International Meet series which took place in the Netherlands, Great Britain and Italy.

Although her jet-setting across the Continent sounds glamorous, Cashman has had little time for pleasure. "This has been kind of strictly business. She's enjoyed herself but hasn't had time for sightseeing and things like that," said Mrs. Cashman.

Last Thursday she was scheduled to participate in the Scandinavian Cup in Gjovik, Norway. After the World Championships she will travel to Zoetermeer, Netherlands for the World Short-Track Team Championships to be held March 24-26.

With the end of the competitive schedule Cashman will return to her studies for the spring-summer semester at Northern Michigan University.

May Return To Coaching Ranks

Buckley Shocked At Losing B.C. High Job

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy's Brian Buckley, disappointed but not bitter following his dismissal as head basketball coach at Boston College High School, said he may return to the hardwood someday.

Despite a winning coaching record in one of the most competitive leagues in the state, Buckley said he lost the confidence of some parents and that led to a lack of support from the school administration and his eventual firing.

"I'm disappointed that the parents didn't have the confidence in me. Once they lose that confidence, it's difficult for the administration to support the coaches and the kids are in the middle of it," Buckley told The Sun Tuesday.

"These things happen. They wanted to make a change but it's still a shock to me."

Two days after B.C. High bowed in the state tourney to Brockton, a team they beat in the regular season, Buckley was fired.

"They want to go in another direction," the former coach said. "They felt the players didn't understand their roles.

"It's unfortunate. I'm disappointed not only for myself but also for my staff. I had two unpaid staff volunteers who also lost their positions."

Buckley expressed hope that B.C. High will keep another local coach, Mark Malloy of Quincy, who is the freshman B.C. High hoop coach.

BRIAN BUCKLEY

"Mark Malloy is a very good coach and I hope he stays on."

The retention of junior varsity coach George Dunn, also of Quincy, is uncertain.

Buckley's six-year overall coaching record of 65-57 is not truly indicative of the strides the B.C. High hoop program took during his tenure.

In the Catholic Conference League which has produced perennial powers and state champions Catholic Memorial and Don Bosco and other competitive programs including St. John's Prep, Xaverian and Malden Catholic, Buckley accomplished what no other B.C. High hoop coach had done before: win the Catholic Conference regular season title outright.

For that feat three years ago, Buckley was named Div. 1 South Coach of the Year. His coaching credentials also include other impressive achievements.

With Buckley at the helm, B.C. High beefed up its schedule with seven games with Big 3 opponents this year: hoop dynamos Brockton, New Bedford and Durfee, as well as Cohasset, the Div. 3 South champion.

B.C. fell to New Bedford by three points, but defeated Brockton as well as Durfee in New Bedford, another first for the school. The latter victory, an overtime thriller on Durfee's home court, spoiled the last game coached by the legendary Skip Karam, who in 41 years of coaching compiled 659 wins, the most in Massachusetts schoolboy history.

"That was very exciting," said Buckley referring to the win over Durfee. "I'll always remember that last victory."

B.C. High's 1995 campaign featured other milestones. The Eagles finished 12-10 overall, 8-2 in league play (second place). In one of their victories against Malden Catholic, B.C. High set the school scoring record with 109 points.

However, those accomplishments could not retain Buckley who earned $3,100 as B.C. High's coach. Buckley, who has been the director of Quincy Council of Aging for 15 years, said he would consider another coaching opportunity.

"If a full-time coaching position presents itself, I'd have to take a real good look at it," Buckley said. "When one door closes,

Stonehouse To Swim In Junior Olympics

Jill Stonehouse, a 14-year-old swimmer with the South Shore YMCA swim team, the Strypers, will compete in the US Junior Olympic championships on March 25 in Buffalo, NY.

Stonehouse qualified for the Olympics at the Belmont Aquatic meet held recently at Wheaton College. She finished the 50-yard freestyle in 24.53 seconds, beating the qualifying time of 24.59.

"I'm excited that my work is finally paying off," said Jill, who trains up to four hours each day. "My goal is to qualify for the Olympic trials in 1996.

Jill has trained at the Y and has swam with the Strypers since she was four years old. An honor student at Hingham Junior High, she holds the Y New England record and is Bay State champion.

She won three gold medals and broke a 15-year-old New England YMCA record in the 100-yard freestyle at the Bay State Games last July.

"I'm thrilled about Jill's accomplishment, but not surprised," said Jill's mother, Peggy Stonehouse. "She's a very determined girl with everything she does."

Mrs. Stonehouse credits coach Bill Edwards and the South Shore YMCA with Jill's progress.

Pee Wee C's Down Westwood

The Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee C team closed out their Greater Boston League season with two exciting games over the weekend.

Quincy manhandled Westwood, 7-3 in their best game of the season. Jon Paquette had a great game scoring four goals. Matt Kenney, Tim O'Connor and Graham McShane each added one tally.

Pat Lahar was the playmaking star of the game, handing out three assists. Matt Reggianini had two assists, and Martin McGrath and McShane had one assist each.

John Mooney was solid in net, making several crucial stops when the score was close and the game was in doubt. Mark Fitzpatrick, Kris Farr, Joe Callahan and Matt Glynn played strong two-way games to ice the victory.

Quincy lost to Tri-County 5-2 in a hard fought and chippy game. Scoring goals for Quincy were Pat Lahar and Tim O'Connor. The lone assist went to Chris Murphy. Tom Gouthro, Dan Jones, and Matt Miller played superbly in the losing effort.

Many thanks to head coach John Nee and the parents for making this a very successful season.

St. Joseph's Captures Second Place

St. Joseph's Blue Devils captured second place in the South Shore Parochial School League.

The varsity basketball team plays other parochial school teams from Quincy and surrounding communities. After their first loss in November, the Blue Devils finished the second with a 14-2 record. The Blue Devils' second-place standing secured them a spot in the state finals to be played later in March.

The team, comprised of seventh and eighth graders, includes Sean Burke, Jonathan Brillo, Aurelio Vergara, Omar Bhatti, Sima Junkovic, Michael Ramponi, Jamie Grossi, Mark Doyle, Shaun Lynch, Anthony Capano and Chris Cunningham. They were coached by three parent volunteers, Peter Ramponi, Frank Brillo and Charles Kalell.

"The boys played well and certainly deserve recognition for that," said St. Joseph's School Principal Lisa Mirasolo, "but they should also be recognized for their team work and their good sportsmanship. Both were exemplary."

Congratulations

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

The right to make a will is one of the oldest privileges afforded by society. In Egypt, documents resembling our wills have been found which were written 30 centuries before the birth of Christ. The essential characteristic of a will is that it operates only upon the death of the maker. The will disposes of property only after death. Up until death, a person who has made a will has full control over his property and can do what he pleases with it . . . The advantages of a will are extensive. The will insures that property will pass to the person you want, in the amount you desire. The person who will administer your estate can be named by you. Estate and inheritance taxes can often be minimized and other savings may be gained. These are but a few of a long list.

Although an individual may write his own will, "do-it-yourself" wills can be extremely dangerous. Self-drawn wills are responsible for considerable litigation, and frequently produce results far different than those originally intended by the testator or maker.

How to select a hearing aid.

If you are considering the purchase of a hearing aid, here are some helpful tips.

- See a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist or Audiologist.
- Make sure that they have an office close by (hearing aids require service).
- Do they have state of the art equipment? Ask about REAL EAR measurement, middle ear compliance testing, a sound proof booth, word recognition testing, video otoscopy and programmable hearing aids.
- Check to see if they have a good track record with Attorney Generals office and Better Business Bureau.
- Shop around for services, location, experience and price.
- Avoid TV advertised products. You pay more for the commercials and you frequently get a salesperson not a specialist.
- Ask for a FREE hearing screening and consultation and a 60 day no-obligation trial.

"We know a great deal about hearing aids."
